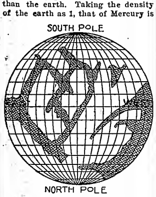
THIS EARTH OF OURS

It Is the Most Desirable Unit of the Solar System.

Its Atmospheric Conditions and Lighting Facilities Are Far Superior to Those of Any Other Planet.

EVERYBODY is interested more or less in the earth on which he lives and the planets which the discerning eye discovers in the heavens. To demonstrate their various revolutions is the pleasant task of the astronomer who, to the average individual, is a person to be envied and honored.

Prof. Schiaparelli, the famous Italian astronomer, has recently completed a protracted study of the planet Mercury and has succeeded in charting its surface. He finds that Mercury is the only planet which is heavier than the earth. Taking the density of the earth as 1, that of Mercury is 1.26. No other member of the solar system, not even the sun itself, can compare with our globe in weight. Jupiter, the largest of all the planets, is 1,400 times as big as the earth, but only 300 times as heavy. Mercury holds the two records for being heaviest, bulk for bulk, of all the planets, and of being nearest to the sun. But in all other respects the earth beats it. Mercury is only three times as large as the moon. It has little or no atmosphere, and, consequently, equally little water. Moreover, it seems fairly certain that it no longer revolves on its axis like our planet, but resembles the moon in turning one face always towards the sun. If you put down the figure 6, and add after it 21 noughts, you have the approximate weight in tons of the world we live and work in.



MAP OF THE PLANET MERCURY.
(Made from Photographs Taken by Prof. Schiaparelli.)

Venus, and not Mars, is the nearest of all the planets to ourselves. It also resembles the earth nearly in size and weight, and during its occasional transits across the sun's disk we can see its atmosphere. Mars is nearly 50,000,000 miles farther from the sun than the earth, but it is so much less hidden by clouds that we can tell more about its shape and make than about any other members of the solar system. Out of 100 square miles of our earth 72 are water and 28 are land. In Mars water is so scarce that it is probably hoarded with great care; and the atmosphere so thin that its inhabitants, if any, must be provided with oxygen cylinders like those used by balloonists. Mars has two small moons, and therein it excels Mercury and Venus, which have no such light-giving satellites.

Jupiter is so covered with ever-changing bands of cloud that practically nothing is known about its surface. Its atmosphere must be thousands of miles deep, so that the inhabitants, if any, can never see the sun, which makes it certain that no creature belonging to this earth could live there at all. Jupiter also is a great sufferer from storms. Wind which blows 90 miles an hour on our planet levels everything before it. On Jupiter a 200-mile breeze is of common occurrence and blows for weeks at a time, as we can see by the movements of the clouds. Jupiter has four moons, but as they shine only with reflected sunlight the four together give only one-sixteenth as much light as our own moon.

Saturn is destitute of animal life. It is 745 times as large as this earth, but weighs only 90 times as much. It is, in fact, only three-fifths as heavy as its bulk of water. Anyone moving to Saturn, therefore, from this earth would be unable to keep afloat, even were he the best of swimmers. Saturn evidently is in a liquid condition, for astronomers watching this planet have noticed that it constantly changes shape. One side of it will bulge out as much as 400 or 500 miles. On this earth we get just 90 times as much heat and light as Saturn has from the sun, and all of Saturn's moons, eight in number, cannot make up for the deficiency, for their combined light is but one-sixteenth that of our satellite.

Uranus and Neptune are so far away that our knowledge of them is limited. Uranus must, indeed, be a dreary place. Its year is 84 of our years; its axis slopes much, and its winters, at least 42 years long, must be appalling. At the height of summer the sun looks about 1.390th as big as it appears to us. Neptune is so far from the center of the universe that to it the sun appears as a star does to us.

All of which goes to show that this earth of ours is, after all, a most desirable place to live on.

KING SHUNS INTERVIEWER.

Edward Believes Privacy of His Home Should Be as Sacred as That of His Subjects.

The king, according to an article in the London Post, the writer of which is believed to be Sir Edward Russell, is not at all pleased with the manner in which his privacy is invaded by newspaper correspondents. He does not like the way in which his private life is entered and commented upon. The king is of the opinion that the privacy of his home should be as sacred as that of his meanest subject. At a dinner the other evening his majesty declared his dislike for all interviews and other journalistic personalities.

Twice in the last two weeks has the king taken active steps to carry out a new plan in this regard. When "Quality Street" was produced at Windsor castle it was intimated by the king that it was his desire that no particular notice should be given to the press in addition to the official one in the court circular. The other instance was even more personal. His majesty gave permission for photographs to be taken at Sandringham to illustrate a certain magazine article, but would permit none of his private apartments or even the large reception room to be captured by the camera, saying that these ought not to be subjects of general inspection.

The newspaper printing the article adds: "It ought to be frankly pointed out that the most notable personages in society themselves write paragraphs about their own doings."

One Recompense.

"Yes, he's blind. As a matter of fact, both his eyes are glass now."

"Too bad," she commented, sympathetically. "But—but—".

"Well?"

"I was just thinking that at least he has the privilege of selecting the color of them now."—Chicago Post.

How They Do It.

Gossippy Man—The Joneses keep up a very imposing establishment.

Grocer—They do that, indeed, and my store's the one that's mostly been imposed on.—N. Y. Times.

MEMORIAL OF WHITE HOUSE.

Workmen Place Inscribed Marble Casket Under the Floor of the Main Corridor.

A novel and pretty ceremony took place the other evening in the main corridor of the white house. A copy of the message sent to congress by the president, autographs of the Roosevelt children, specimens of United States coins and the chisel with which the mason did the work were sealed in a marble casket, which then was deposited in a bed of cement beneath the floor of the main hallway.

Covering the little memorial box was placed a marble slab bearing the inscriptions "1792-1902" in an ellipse of stars, one for each state of the union.

BACTERIA IN CHERRY SKINS.

Twelve Million of the Parasites Found in Half a Pound of Fruit by German Scientist.

Twelve million bacteria inhabit the skins of half a pound of cherries, according to Dr. Ehrlich, a German scientist, who has made extensive experiments in regard to the infection of fruit with bacteria. Currants come next with 11,000,000 to every half-pound, and grapes next, with 8,000,000. An account of these experiments has been transmitted to the state department by United States Consular Clerk Murphy, at Frankfort. Dr. Ehrlich urges that all fruit be cleaned, by either peeling or washing before it is eaten.

Suicide and Civilization.

The prevalent belief that suicide is a product of the higher civilization is contradicted by the fact that in India suicides by opium are committed by the natives for the most trivial reasons, even children destroying themselves after being scolded, and wives because husbands complain of their dinners. There are no regulations for the sale of poison, and anybody can go into a bazar and buy as much as he wants.

The Limit.

Wife—I believe you are the laziest man in the world.

Artist—You ought to have seen my brother Bill. He died 'cause he was too lazy to breathe.—Chicago American.

FIRE.

Fire started at 2 o'clock in the morning in the main building of the state institute for the feeble-minded at Faribault. The blaze was discovered in the attic near the tower and the 300 inmates of the school were removed before the fire had spread to the floors below the garret and no one was hurt.

The building was erected twelve years ago at a cost of $200,000. The central portion, where the fire started, is used as the offices and for the dormitories for the inmates, and is flanked by a tower. Other wings have been added until the whole building is 350 feet long.

The loss is $6,000 on the building and $4,000 on contents. Everything is covered by blanket insurance carried by the state. The tower and the two floors immediately below were burned through and otherwise damaged by smoke and water.

The blaze was caused by electric wires on the fifth floor. There will be no interruption to the work of the school. Dinner was served in the building as usual today.

A HOLD-UP HELD.

In a short, fierce struggle, J. W. Moore met and overpowered Ole Larson, in Minneapolis, an alleged highwayman, who by the timely arrival of Louis and Gustave Stanley, was disarmed of an ugly revolver and a heavy billy.

The black mask which covered the man's face was torn aside, and in spite of his hardest struggle Larson was marched to the offices of the A. D. T., Fourth and Nicollet avenue, where he was taken in charge by Officer Bacon and later locked up in the Central police station.

The attempted hold-up occurred at 6 o'clock on Fifth street south, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, in a spot shadowed by a street lamp where pedestrians on the other side of the street would be unlikely to notice any struggle.

DWIGHT M. SABIN.

Former United States Senator Dwight M. Sabin, of Minnesota, died suddenly early in his apartments at the Auditorium annex, Chicago.

Mr. Sabin had been a guest of the hotel since Nov. 2, being accompanied by his wife and daughter. He was stricken with heart failure at 11 o'clock last night, and Mrs. Sabin promptly notified the office and a doctor was summoned. He found Mr. Sabin in a dying condition and beyond medical aid. The patient remained conscious for upward of an hour, and the end was peaceful.

THE SUNBEAM.

Published every Friday at Gully, Polk Co., Minnesota.

Rates $1.00 a year in advance

Owing to the editor haveing to make a hurry up business trip to Crookston and the assistants being on a holiday, our colums are not overhurdended with local news this week.

THE People of Crookston are begining to awaken to the fact they must cut down the expence account since they have lost Columbia county, and are makeing the attempt to prosicute for overchargeing on county bills.

As is usal in sutoh cases the big steals are covered up and they jump on a man that wants a cmpensation for wadeing in swamps,

"while the thief on the corner stands grinning in the broad open lighht of the day,, your pocket he'll roh for county printing, but the law can not touch him, they say"

The Candid Pepys.

No man has ever yet succeeded in painting an honest portrait of himself in an autobiography however eedulously he may have set to work about it. In spite of his candid purpose he omits necessary tonches and adds superfluous ones. At times he cannot help draping his thonght, and the least shred of drapery disguises it. It is only the diarist who accomplishes the feat of self portraiture, and he, without any such end in view, does it nnconsciously. A man cannot keep a daily record of his comings and goings and the little items that make up the sum of his life and not inadvertently give himself away at every turn. He lays bare his heart with a candor not possible to the self consciousness that inevitahly colors premeditated revelation. Unknowingly he wears his heart upon his pen for daws to peck at. While Mr. Samuel Pepys was filling those small octavo pages with his perplexing cipher he never once imagined that he was adding a photographic portrait of himself to the world's gallery of immortals. We are more intimately acquainted with Mr. Samnel Pepys, the inner man—his little meannesses and his generosities—than we are with half the persons we call our dear friends.—T. B. Aldrich in Atlantic.

Punctuation.

In the earliest Latin inecriptions and manuscripts no system of punctuation is followed. The full point (.) wae gradually introduced, being placed on the level, middle or top of the letters. In the minnscule manuscripts of the eighth, ninth and following centuries the period, on the line or high, was first used; then the comma and semicolon and the inverted semicolon, whose power wae rather stronger than that of the comma. Some say that the Caroline minuseules of the ninth century exhibit the note of interrogation, for which the inverted semicolon, which was gradnally dropped, may have furnished the mark. The Greeks use the semicolon as an interrogation point. In English the colon is said to have been introduced abont 1485, the comma abont 1501 and the semicolon about 1570. In Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia" (1587) all the punctuation points appear, inclnding the note of interrogation, asterisk and parentheses.

Incorrigible.

It was decided that Mr. Wright must administer a etern lecture to hie fonr-year-old daughter Florence. The little girl had heen naughty, hut she did not seem to appreciate the fact, and Mr. Wright reluctantly undertook a "scolding."

He hated to make the tender little heart ache and to eee the dear child cry, but he forced himself to speak judiciously and severely. He reconnted her misdeeds and explained the why and wherefore of his stern rehnke: Mrs. Wright sat hy, looking duly impressed.

Finally Mr. Wright paused for hreath and also to hear the small culprit acknowledge her error. The scolding was hever continned. Florence turned a face beaming with admiration to her mother and said innocently:

"Isn't papa interesting?"

A Rongh Criticism.

Lord Honghton's epigram on "Sordello," probahly the most obscure of Browning's poems, thongh it has often gone the rounds, is worth recalling. Said Lord Honghton, then only Dicky Milnes, "There are hnt two lines in 'Sordello' I can nnderstand—the first and last—'Who will may hear Sordello's story told' and 'Who would hath heard Sordello's story told,' and both are false."

Exchange of Courtesies.

One of the keenest of journalists and wits, Morits Gottlieb Saphir, had the better of the irate stranger against whom he ran by accident at the corner of a street in Munich. "Beast!" cried the offended person without waiting for an apology. "Thank you," said the journalist, "and mine is Saphir."

A MARVELOUS INVENTION.

wonders never cease. A machine has baen invented that will cut, paste and haug wall paper. The field of inventions and discoveries seems to be unlimited. Notable among great discoveries is Dr. King's New Discovery for Con sumption. It has done a world of good for weak lungs and saved many a life. Thousands have used it and conquered Grip, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and Consumption. Their general verdict is: "It's the best and most reliable medicine for throat and lung troubles" Every 50c and $1.00 bottle is guaranteed by Kronschnable & Bolstad, Trial bottles free.

The grand jury last Friday returned two indictments against Geo. A. Ralph county surveyor, of Polk county and also a member of the state drainage hoard. On Monday that body returned another indictment against Mr. Ralph. The charges found in the indictments refer to ditches 31 and 32 in Polk county, and also the judicial ditch between Polk and Marshall county, and fradulent presentation of bills to public officers for payment is claimed. The claim is that no services were rendered for the amounts charged in the bills. Mr. Ralph's friends claim tbat he has not been given credit for men who were required by him to look after things during his absent on matterers connected with his position. They assert that an examination of the records in the auditor's office will disclose the fact that ditches 31 and 32 are the cheapest ditches ever snrveyed in Polk county, while the judicial ditch has cost but one-third of what some of the same work have cost in other counties. They are very sanguine of the outcome and say that when there is a chance given for an explanation ever-thing will be cleared up.

At Home and Abroad.

A few daye ago an elderly gentleman and his wife were walking along the street when a lady in crossing the road fell down. The old gentlemon rushed to her assistonce and helped her in every possible way. When he returned to his wife, ehe looked like a thundercloud.

"It's all right; it's all right," he whlepered.

"Yee, I know it's all right!" she replled hotly. "Here's an unknown woman falls down, and you plow neroes the street to help her, and the other day, when I fell downstairs, you wanted to know if I was practicing for a circus."

THE OLD and THE NEW

The New Year come to the Old Year's door
When the sands were wasting thin,
And the frost lay white on the Old Year's thatch,
And his hand grew chill as he slipped the lotch
To let the New Year in.

And the New Year perched in the Old Year's chair
And warmed by the Old Year's fire,
And the Old Year watched him with wistful gaze
As he stretched his hands to the fading blaze
And cinders of dead desire.

And the Old Year prated, as Old Years will,
Of summer ond vaoished spring,
And then of the future, with grave oilvice,
Of love and sorrow und socrifice
That the seasons' round would bring.

And the New Year listened and warmed his heart
In the bloom of the Old Year's past,
But he gave no heed of the thorns that lay
In the hud aod blow of a coming day,
And, nodding, ho dreamed at last.

The New Year came to the Old Year's door
And warmed in the Old Year's chair.
And the Old Yeor talked till the New Year slept,
Then forth in the night he softly stepped
And left tha New Year there.

Her Latest Break.

"My six-year-old girl is an awful chatterbox," said a broker, "and the worst of it is that when we have guests at the house she is continually making breaks of the worst sort—breaks that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the closet. Recently when we had company at dinner she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual; the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests, I am free to say, seemed delighted. I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word. She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears. 'Why, what's the matter, darling?' her mother asked. 'I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret,' she wailed between sobs."—Philadelphia Record.

Rossini's Memory.

The composer of "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" was blessed with a not very retentive memory, especially for names of persons introduced to him, a forgetfulness which was frequently the cause of much merriment whenever Rossini was among company. One day he met Bishop, the English composer. Rossini knew the face well enough and at once greeted him. "Ah, my dear Mr. ——," but he could progress no further. To convince him that he had not forgotten him Rossini commenced whistling Bishop's glee, "When the Wind Blows," a compliment which "the English Mozart" recognized and would as readily have heard as his less musical surname.

Optical Illusion.

A firm which wae sued in an English court for the price of a sign defended the case on the ground that the "o" in their name was smaller than the other letters. It was proved by measurement, however, that it was a sixteenth of an inch larger, allowance having been made for the fact that, owing to an optical illusion, the letter "o" always looks smaller than the neighboring letters. Judgment was given for the signmakers.

But They Use Them.

The danger of carrying an argument to its logical conclusion is thus set forth by the Chicago Post: They were at a picnic. "Fingers were made before forks," she laughed as she helped herself in democratic fashion. "Yes," he admitted, "and people were made before clothes." She hastily reached for a fork.

Rain In Manila.

"When it roins in Manila," says a man who has been there, "you think the first time you see the spectacle that the end of the world has come. Why, one day in September that I was there it rained thirteen inches. Think of that, will you—more than a foot of water! You would think that would weary the elements for some time, but it didn't. The next day it rained half a foot, the day after that seven inches. That month we had fifty-seven inches of rain."

"Where does all the water go to?"

"Right back where it came from," was the prompt reply. "After a downpour the sun will come out hotter than ever, and you can fairly see everything steam. And yet there are a great many people that wouldn't live anywhere else except in Manila."

The Milk Was Too Blue.

A certain wise youngster of my acquaintance was presented on his seventh birthday with a beautiful blue glass goblet, whereupon said goblet straightway became the indispensable meal companion of said youngster. One evening when George had received his usual allowance of milk in the blue goblet his mother became aware that he was gazing in deeply contemplative fashion at the contents of the glass. What he saw can best be imagined, for he raised his eyes suddenly and said wonderingly:

"Why, mother, this cow couldn't have been ripe!"—Current Literature.

Crude Logic.

It is told of an East Indian law student that he once threw his examiners into confusion by declaring matrimony to be an illegal state. "How so? How so?" he was asked by the perturbed examiners, many of them married men. The student [illegible] emphatically, "Marriage," quoth he, "is a lottery, and lotteries are forbidden by law."

A "Tip" For the Waiter.

"Everything all right, sir?" asked the waiter.

The patron nodded, but still the waiter hovered near.

"Steak cooked to suit you, sir?" he asked again presently.

Again the patron nodded.

"Potatoes the way you like 'em, sir?"

"Yes."

Another period of silence.

"I hope the service is satisfactory, sir."

"Are you bidding for a tip?" demanded the patron.

"Well, sir, of course we get tips sometimes, and I've got to go to the kitchen for another party, so"—

"So you'd like a tip now, to be sure of it? Well, I'll give you one."

"Yes, sir."

"Here is the tip: I have a large, strident voice that I am capable of using. If anything is wrong, I'll let out a roar you can hear in the kitchen. If you don't hear it, you can know I am dining in peace and comfort, for it's no fun to have to pass verbal judgment on every mouthful I eat."

"But the tip?"

"That's the tip, and a mighty good one it is too."—Chicago Post.

The Origin of Johnnycake.

No doubt many others besides the writer may have wondered how johnnycake came to be thus named. When a child, I settled it for myself by imagining John Smith, whom Pocahontas saved, had something to do with it. The cake, being made of Indian meal, became thus associated in my mind with the historical name. A writer in the Housekeeper says:

In tracing the term we find ourselves at a time antedating by many years steam cars and hotels on wheels. In an age when mankind depended entirely upon his four footed companions for transportation and had only saddlebags in which to carry his luggage. Taverns were few and far apart, and a lunch was always acceptable. Cornmeal, forming so large a part of the dietary in those days, held a chief place in making up the lunch. Wet with water and a little salt added, it was baked in a shape that stored away in the saddlebags nicely and was called journey cake. This is the origin of our modern, unconventional johnnycake.

Grounds For Divorce.

A Salem (Mass.) man who sought a divorce proved, according to a Boston paper, that his wife tore the sign from his store, put into his tea something that made him vomit, threw his clothes downstairs, filled his shoes with cold water, put swill in his overcoat pocket, threw water over him as he went downstairs, put pepper in his bed, made him sleep in an attic, wouldn't do his washing, wouldn't mend his clothes, made him darn his socks and sew buttons on his shirts, spat on his toast when he was getting his breakfast, rocked in a squeaky chair for hours at a time to annoy him, put grease on his Sunday clothes, wouldn't let him have a fire on the coldest evenings so that he often had to go to bed at 7 p. m. to keep warm, and finally "she rubbed a butcher knife over his neck and threatened to blow out his brains."

The Worm Turned.

He loved her devotedly. He was also bowlegged. Both facts gave him pain at times.

He passed it by with a rueful smile when she merrily said that his affliction gave him such an arch look and that, after all, he was a pretty good sort when you got on to his curves. He bore it patiently when she referred to his walk as parenthetical progress. But he rebelled and broke the engagement when she called her pet dog through the wicket formed by his legs.

"I may not be so over ornamental," said he, "but I emphatically object to being made useful so unseasonably early in the game!"—Smart Set.

A Quick Witted Waiter.

During mosquito season a party of diners seated themselves at table in an outdoor restaurant, and a man of the party took the bill of fare and began to study it. A mosquito lighted upon it and instantly lost its life by a quick blow from the man, its little carcass remaining on the bill. Pointing to it, the man said to the waiter:

"Do you serve those on toast?" And the waiter promptly replied:

"They're on the bill, sir!"—New York Times.

Carried.

Miss Frontpew—Is it true that the new tenor in our choir was arrested at Mrs. Goldmore's reception for forgeries he had committed in the south?

Mrs. Highchurch—Yes. He had just finished singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" in a way that brought a tear to every eye when the Richmond sheriff came in with requisition papers for him.

Sails the Heights.

Miss Nuritch—Yes, indeed, he was real attentive to me, and he's a nobleman too.

Miss Ascum—May Outwit met him, too, and she declares he's an actor.

Miss Nuritch—Not at all. He assured me he was a lord admiral of the Swiss navy.—Philadelphia Record.

It Is Curious.

"It's curious," said Uncle Eben. "Nobody wouldn't think of tryin' to play de banjo wifout takin' a few lessons, but ev'rybody thinks he could step in an' run de gov'ment wifout no practice whatever."—Washington Star.

All Right Anyway.

Miss Tblu—Don't you think my new dress is just exquisite?

Fannie—Oh, lovely! I think that dressmaker of yours could make a clothes prop look graceful.

A Vacuum Pressure Experiment.

Chemical science has taught us how to overcome the dreaded diseases that have swept away whole cities in the past. It has taught us the manufacture of explosives and munitions of war and has made possible the greatly improved modes of travel, and it may be truly said that to chemistry we owe the most material progress the world has made.

While this little experiment will not deal with the hidden secrets that live in the famous laborotories or treat upon the mystic powers of viscosity and relegation, it will show what power the absence of air has in attracting movable substances into the place that has been vacated by the air. Few think when they breathe the atmosphere that surrounds them that it has a pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch or that it can attract even a piece of iron into the space which it leaves.

For an example of the strength of air take any tumbler, fill it about half full of tissue paper, set fire to the paper, turn over the glass in a basin containing water about one-half inch deep and then watch the water ascend the interior of the glass.

Didn't Know His Own Child.

At Antietam, just after the artillery had been sharply engaged, the Rockbridge (Va.) battery was standing waiting orders. General Lee rode by and stopped a moment. A dirty faced driver about seventeen said to him:

"General, are you going to put us in again?"

Think of such a question from such a source to the general of the army, especially when that general's name was Lee!

"Yes, my boy," the stately officer kindly answered, "I have to put you in again. But what is your name? Your face seems familiar somehow."

"I don't wonder you didn't know me, sir," laughed the lad. "I'm so dirty. But I'm Bob."

It was the general's youngest son, whom he had thought safe at the Virginia Military institute. "God bless you, my son; do your duty," and the general rode on.

Spoke Too Soon.

Alexandre Dumas was one day the guest of Dr. Gistal, a leading practitioner in Marseilles. After dinner, while the coffee was being handed round, the host requested the great novelist to enrich his album with one of his witty improvisations.

"Certainly," replied Dumas, with a smile, and, drawing out a pencil, he wrote under the eyes of his entertainer the following lines:

Since Dr. Gistal came to our town
To cure diseases casual and hereditary
The hospital has been pulled down—

"You flatterer!" here exclaimed the doctor, mightily pleased; but the poet went on:

And we have made a larger cemetery.

Mrs. Hamilton's Ice Cream.

Mrs. Alexander Hamilton had the first ice cream in the city of Washington. She used to tell with amusement of the delight with which President Andrew Jackson first tasted it. Guests at the next White House reception were treated to the frozen mystery, and great was the fun of the initiated when they saw the reluctance of others to taste the cold stuff. Those from the rural districts especially eyed it suspiciously, then melted each teaspoonful with the breath before swallowing it. The next time they had a chance they ate it with delight.

It Wanted His Tongue.

At an auction sale in a Scotland village the auctioneer was trying to sell a number of domestic utensils, including a porridge pot. As usual, he was making a great fuss. Finishing, his keen eye caught a well known worthy, the beadle, standing at the back of the crowd, and he shouted out:

"Maister McTavish, make me an offer for this pot. Why, it would make a splendid kirk bell."

"Aye," replied the beadle, "if your tongue was in it."

Waited Twenty Years For a Solution.

A bit of pure and harmless mischief at recitation at Yale was the device of a member of the class of '72, who introduced at recitation a turtle covered by a newspaper paster on the shell. The tutor had too much pride to come down from his perch and solve the mystery of the newspaper movement, but twenty years after, meeting a member of the class, his first and abrupt question was, "Mr. W., what made that paper move?"

RECORD OF THE PAST.

The best guarantee of the future is the record of the past, and over fifty thousand people have publicly testified that Doan's Kidney Pills have cured them of numerous kidney ills, from common backache to dangerous diabetes, and all the attendant annoyances and sufferings from urinary disorders. They have been cured to stay cured. Here is one case:

Samuel J. Taylor, retired carpenter residing at 312 South Third St., Goshen, Ind., says: "On the 25th day of August, 1897, I made an affidavit before Jacob C. Mann, notary public, stating my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. I had suffered for thirty years and was compelled at times to walk by the aid of crutches, frequently passed gravel and suffered excruciatingly. I took every medicine on the market that I heard about, and some gave me temporary relief. I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and the results I gave to the public in the statement above referred to. At this time, on the 19th day of July, 1902, I make this further statement, that during the five years which have elapsed I have had no occasion to use either Doan's Kidney Pills or any other medicine for my kidneys. The cure effected was a permanent one."

A FREE TRIAL of this great Kidney medicine which cured Mr. Taylor will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A PROFESSIONAL OPINION.

The Advice of a Lawyer to His Barber, Who Was Cutting In on His Business.

A former judge, now practicing law, became interested when told by his favorite barber that the latter wanted to study, with a view to admission to the bar, relates the Philadelphia Times. The lawyer encouraged him in every way possible, lending him books and giving him an informal lesson while being shaved each morning. Soon the barber began putting hypothetical cases to his patron, who gravely, soundly and pains-takingly gave information as to correct procedure. After a time the ex-judge learned that the barber's cases were genuine—that, indeed, the fellow was acting as a cut-rate attorney for his friends, who invariably profited by following his advice. The following morning the barber opened up by putting what he described as an imaginary bit of litigation to the lather-covered lawyer, and then asked:

"Now, judge, what do you advise?"

"Let—me—see," replied the lawyer, musingly. Then: "Why, I advise that you come see me at the office, bring me a certified check for $100 as a fee, and I'll tell you how the case should be handled."

IT WAS A GREAT SCHEME.

But There Wasn't Sufficient Inducement to Make It a Sure Winner.

"Among several tracts of wild land I own in the northern part of the state," said a wealthy Detroiter the other day, according to the Free Press, "is an extensive cranberry marsh. I know that a great many cranberries are gathered there every season, but I have no objections to that. About three months ago I got word that a certain man, living near the marsh, had constituted himself as an agent and was ready to warn the public off. I asked for particulars and the 'agent' came down here. He was an old farmer with avarice in his eye, and he proceeded to explain:

"'Colonel, I heard that a gang of fellers was comin' over from the next county this fall and goin' into camp on your marsh for two weeks to gather berries, and so I did some talkin' to keep 'em away.'

"'Don't you always gather a large quantity yourself?' I asked.

"'Oh, yes. I guess I gather and sell about 20 bushels a year, but then, I'm living right there, you know.'

"'And that makes a difference?'

"'Of course. I'll tell you what I come down for. I want to build a $400 barn next spring, and I want to do it from the sale of cranberries. If you'll just give me a lease of that land for a year or two I'll keep everybody off and make enough clear money in two seasons to do all my buildin' and repairin'.'

"'And what am I to get for such a lease?' I asked.

"The old fellow did some hard thinking for a minute or two, and then came to a conclusion and replied:

"'Well, colonel, I'll be hanged if I don't send you down a bushel of cranberries, and I'll pick 'em myself and see that they are all right! Come, now, you see what kind of a man I am!'"

SPRAYING CORPORATIONS.

The Senator "Spluttered" in His Speech and an Umbrella Was Called For.

Senator Spooner told a story the other day, in which the late Senator Ingalls and Senator Van Wyck, of Nebraska, figured. Van Wyck was making one of his characteristic speeches in attacking corporations. He had a peculiar style of delivery, and as he warmed to his subject it was his habit to move restlessly from one side of the chamber to the other, continually talking. He talked so fast that he often "sputtered," and senators were careful to keep out of range of the moisture he hissed through his closely-set teeth, says the Washington Post.

Mr. Ingalls and Mr. Spooner once sat directly in front of "Mr. Punch," as Senator Van Wyck was often called, because of his resemblance to that noted character, when he was delivering an impassioned utterance, and an atom of spray rested upon the hand of the immaculate Ingalls.

He adjusted his spectacles, carefully inspected his soiled hand, and deliberately signaled for one of the pages to come to him. Then in one of his famous whispers, which penetrated the entire chamber, Ingalls said:

"Boy, bring an umbrella for Senator Spooner and a rubber overcoat for me."

The incident provoked general laughter, but it did not interfere with Von Wyck's speech. He simply shifted his position so as to get beyond range of his always faultlessly dressed and sarcastic colleague.

An Irish Refrigerator.

An Irish woman was looking at refrigerators in a housefurnishing store some weeks ago. After examining into the merits and qualities of a number of them, she purchased the one that the salesman assured her would keep food the best. Some days afterward the woman called and requested them to take that refrigerator back, as it would not keep anything better than the kitchen safe of the cellar. The salesman mildly suggested that possibly she had not put enough ice in it to keep the things cold. "Enough ice in it? Why, you are crazy, mon. I don't put any ice in it. Anything will keep cold if you put ice in it. I bought the refrigerator so that I wouldn't need the ice."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

CONQUERS PAIN

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Latest Notions in Feminine Finery for Those Who Keep Up with the Modes.

The princesse styles for afternoon and evening gowns have, if possible, gained in favor, and the fabrics employed are reproductions from the period of Louis XIII. These fashions are undoubtedly responsible for the revival of moire and other rich silks that are characterized by a moire weave, whether flowered, coin-dotted, striped, or showing a beautiful opalescent surface. These regal silks are enhanced by trimmings of velvet and shaded silk embroideries, reports the New York Post.

Among the materials popular for street costumes is a new basket cheviot of rather coarse weave with small white dots scattered over it. It is shown in Oxford gray, black, sable, brown, red and moss green, the dots being invariably white. Another material possessing a similar decorative feature is called mohair cheviot. It is made additionally attractive by slightly raised, almost invisible, cords at regular intervals, and downy white hairs thickly scattered over the surface, producing an effect much like zibeline or camel's hair.

Russian and guipure laces in rich applique designs wrought on creamy net meshes, the patterns outlined with a tiny line of black chenille, are used by French tailors and dressmakers for parts of handsome cloth costumes, evening gowns and dress wraps.

Skirts of nacre silk mohair plaited all around and worn under French redingotes of gray, fawn color, sable, brown, or Russian green cloth, with bishop sleeves and wide revers of cloth and velvet cutwork edged with fur, are among the semi-dress styles for matrons for the early winter. The skirts of the redingotes are made with a decided flare, the waist part and sleeves are lined with nacre silk, and there are two rows of Norwegian silver buttons on the front below the shawl points of the revers.

Many of the new winter coats are of the Russian shape—a style which admits of many modifications. That it has remained in fashion is a cause for congratulation. It is at once trim, stylish and comfortable. Most of the new Russian blouses and coats are made with medium short skirts, but a few have merely tabs at the back. The sleeves are invariably full and banded at the wrist.

It is quite the fashion just now to wear black blouses with black skirts. Crepe de chine, pin-dotted net, silk voile, figured taffeta and Liberty satin are the materials used for these waists. French cut-jet incrustations or insertions of lace are used for trimming, and open-work, hemstitching and faggoting are employed in a like manner. When velvet ribbon is used to trim, it is often partly covered with herringbone stitching or a delicate guimp in lace-like designs. Among the white evening blouses recently exhibited was a model of oriental satin strapped with ecru insertion, with the designs outlined with a tracing of very fine chenille. A black chiffon dinner waist looked well with narrow ivory satin laid on in close rows and thickly studded with French jet. A similar blouse was striped with old rose ribbon nearly covered with a narrow guimp of fine-cut steel.

CURES FOR CHILBLAINS.

Simple Formula for the Treatment of These Very Painful Excrescences.

These painful cold-weather afflictions are almost always on the feet, though a few people have them on the hands, says American Queen. Persons subject to them should, as soon as the first cold weather is felt, put on warm woolen hosiery and substantial winter boots and exercise great care to prevent wetting the feet or letting them get very cold or very hot. Try to keep them always dry and naturally warm, but if in spite of precautions the burning, stinging sensation begins to make itself felt there are a number of simple remedies, one of which should be given a trial. If it fails to relieve or cure, try another. Among those which different persons have found beneficial are kerosene oil, strong brine, oil of turpentine, camphorated oil, bran water and muriate of ammonia, tincture of iodine and a solution of ammonia, equal parts, painted on at night. A good liniment to apply when the chilblains first appear is made of—

Spirits of camphor	1 part
Tincture of cantharides	4 parts
Soap liniment	4 parts

Whether the skin is broken or not frequent plunging in hot water will relieve chilblains.

Storing Summer Goods.

In putting away dainty summer chiffons, if a little extra care is taken, they will come out of their seclusion next spring quite fresh and ready to be worn again. Silk parasols should have loose rolls of tissue paper between each fold to prevent the silk from splitting. Deep blue paper as an outside wrapping will prevent white silk from turning yellow, it is said. To keep lace white, lay it in a box, and sprinkle magnesia through its folds. This will remove oily stains. The magnesia easily shakes out.—N. Y. Post.

Swiss Griddle Cakes.

Swiss griddle cakes are really potato croquettes in all except form. Grate four or five large potatoes, press part of the water out of them, and mix with two beaten eggs and a heaping teaspoonful of salt. Drop by spoonful on a hot, greased griddle.—N. Y. Post.

A FINE COUNTRY.

Resident of Ohio Says Western Canada Is an Ideal Land for Farmers and Ranchers.

A delegate from Ohio to Western Canada says: "The whole of Western Canada seemed to me to be a very fine country, but I spent most of my time about thirty miles east of Lacombe, in Alberta, near what is popularly known as the coal banks on the Red Deer River, and I am very pleased to report that the country appears to be everything that the Agents of the Canadian Government have claimed for it. Good water can be obtained almost anywhere from 17 to 40 feet, and fed generally by springs. The natural hay and grass were magnificent in their growth and wild pea vines very heavy. I met some of my friends who moved there seven years ago and two brothers who had absolutely nothing on their arrival seven years before now own two and a half sections of land and 175 head of cattle. They told me that they did not feed their stock all winter, in fact, never saw them again until the spring, when they came home fat and without loss. I gathered oats 6 ft. 4 high and running from 75 to 100 bushels per acre. It appeared to me that all grasses, wild and cultivated, grow to perfection in any part of Alberta that I saw, and the farmers were cutting from two to three tons of wild hay to the acre. I found the climate very desirable in every respect, and I am told that the winter is the finest part of the year. There is plenty of coal and wood to be had near at hand for the hauling, and such is my satisfaction with the country that I acquired some land and have put a bunch of cattle thereon. I can confidently recommend Western Canada as a suitable place for farmers to immigrate to, and can assure them the kindest treatment by the people there, so much so that one does not distinguish the fact that we have left the boundaries of the United States."

Hugh Spender, of the Westminster Gazette, one of the British Journalists who visited Canada this summer (1902), says: "We fell in with a young farmer from Somersetshire, England, driving a binder round a hundred acre field of wheat in Western Canada. In conversation I found that he came from within fifteen miles of my old home in Somersetshire. Here was the very man we wanted. He had come to Manitoba ten years ago, with a capital of $12 on landing. In England he had been employed on a dairy farm, and earned eighteen shillings a week. He now owns 320 acres of land, his horses, buildings and cattle, and expects to have 4,000 bushels of wheat this season. We had heard of such things in the old land, but they did not seem credible, until we came to this living example of the strides that it is possible to make in Manitoba. Had this man remained in England, it is pretty safe to say he would still be earning no more than eighteen shillings a week, while in the same period in Manitoba he has become a substantial and prosperous farmer."

"I know a man who commenced in Assiniboia, 15 years ago, with no means; no capital. To-day this man owns 7,000 acres of land, some 30 horses, 30 or 40 bullocks, cows, etc. He has built a good stone house with his own hands, and has now married and is doing well, with every prospect of increasing his means in the future. Western Canada has the most exhilarating, bracing climate I ever knew. All that is required in the settler is perseverance, grit, patience and hard work. I will guarantee the country, if you will guarantee the man." From letter from a retired officer in the British army.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

UNDER date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past 25 years.

"Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"She also was passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life. In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for these wonderful remedies.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of 25 years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions, and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me.

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Success to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh."

John O. Atkinson,
Box 272, Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safe-guard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

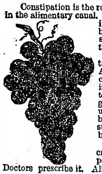
Constipation Makes Bad Blood.

MULL'S GRAPE TONIC CURES CONSTIPATION

Constipation is the rotting and decaying of undigested food in the alimentary canal. Disease germs arise from this festering mass, which find their way into the blood. The blood becomes impure and shortly the entire system gives way to the unhealthy condition.

You cannot cure a case like this by taking pills or other common cathartics. A laxative will not do. A blood medicine is ineffective. Mull's Grape Tonic is a gentle and mild laxative in addition to being a blood-making and strength-giving tonic which immediately builds up the wasted body and makes rich, red blood that carries its health-giving strength to every tissue at every heart beat.

Mull's Grape Tonic is made of pure crushed fruit juices and is sold under a positive guarantee.



Doctors prescribe it. All druggists sell it at 50 cents a bottle.

NEAT LITTLE SNAPS.

Enjoyed by Employes of the House of Representatives.

Endorsing Their Pay Checks Is the Only Work Some Do for Uncle Sam—Abuses That Need Correction.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE organization of the next congress will cause very few changes in the working force of the house of representatives. Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, will be made speaker, but the present clerk, sergeant-at-arms, doorkeeper and postmaster will be re-elected. These elective officers will retain in their present positions all of the appointive employes, so that it will be useless for the small politicians to hope for any offices in the new congress.

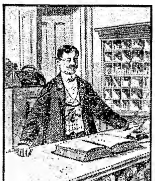
Concerning these "soft snaps," the National Civil Service Reform league once made a very interesting report, showing that the places are divided up among the representatives, those of the dominant party receiving practically all of them. Men on the rolls as holding semi-clerical positions are declared by the report to be unable to read or write. They receive small salaries, while others on as laborers do practically nothing at all and receive large salaries.

Employes have been called upon to pay, through recesses of congress, the salary of one of their number, who must be kept on account of his political backing, but who has been so unlucky as to find himself without a regular position at the time of adjournment. Men who spent 11 months of the year outside of Washington have held excellent positions, their salary checks going to them by mail regularly every month. The executive officers of the house testified to the existence of these conditions.

The house telegrapher never officially touched a key in the capitol, and is assigned to a sinecure in the library of the house. His substitute draws $900 salary from the appropriation for hire of horses and wagons for the clerk's office. The man who is the official but inactive telegrapher receives $1,200 per annum. The man who, as teamster, carts about boxes and stationery for the members, for which the $900 was appropriated, gets $40 per month, which is made up by contributions from certain officials.

The doorkeeper testified that one of the pages, being unable to read or write, is employed as the driver of a wagon, because he was valueless as a page, but had to be taken care of. The man who is entered on the rolls for the driver's place is employed in scrubbing floors and cleaning cuspidors.

Many employes are shown to have been absent most of their time without loss of pay. One, Leroy J. Hooker, drew pay from May, 1897, till December of the same year, though he was absent from Washington continuously during that time. C. C. Leaveas, a clerk in a hotel, was permitted to draw full pay in a folding-room position, though his labors at the hotel ceased only at noon and the only time he devoted to his duties at the capitol was in the afternoons. When asked to explain this case, the doorkeeper said that Leaveas "had a long line of indorsements."



HOTEL CLERK ON PAY ROLL.

The superintendent of the folding-room testified that there were dozens of employes who are paid, but do not appear in his office, to which they are assigned, for months at a time. The case of E. H. Keller, of New York, was selected as the most glaring example of absenteeism by the house committee and by the league committee. The former's report says:

"It is the opinion of the doorkeeper that Keller worked six months. In any event, he has not worked over six months in the nearly four years during which he has drawn pay, and has not been in Washington for 11 or 12 months."

The Civil Service league commented on these facts thus: "It is very evident that the positions in the service of the house of representatives are regarded by many members not as places where there are duties to be performed, but as sinecures for which there is public money to be appropriated or as plunder to be divided; and the sinister question inevitably presents itself, whether honest legislation is to be expected of congressmen who are thus guilty of withdrawing from the treasury of the United States numerous small sums for the benefit of the objects of their patronage? Is public virtue in large matters possible in a body where peculation of no higher dignity has been for many years an established institution? That there are many gentlemen in the house, besides the members of the reporting committee, who are dissatisfied and disgusted with such a system, and who would gladly aid in doing away with it, we cannot doubt."

Another case quoted by the committee was that of Robert and William Richardson, negroes, employed for many years in the bathroom of the house at salaries of $720 each per annum. W. W. Wood, a white man, was placed on the roll for four months in 1898, taking the place of William for two months and of Robert for two months. The committee reported that it had been unable to learn that Wood ever went into the bathroom during the time he retained that place. They each lost two months' pay.

COLORED MAN WITH SNAP.
(Gets $720 a Year for Scrubbing Public Servants.)

In 1900 W. H. Ridley, a negro, came to Washington for the purpose of taking one of the Richardson's positions. They compromised by paying him $10 a month each, and he went home, where for eight months he received the money. The Richardsons appear to have had several close calls for their positions, and to have been saved more than once by the inability of the applicants for their places to bathe congressmen and take care of the bathroom satisfactorily. Ridley damned them and threatened them after they had together paid him $20 per month for eight months, but they stopped the payments, having been compelled to give up $160 in addition to the $240 above noted in order to keep their positions.

It is shown that one superintendent of the document room paid $400 ecived $240 from the Richardsons, who continued to discharge their duper annum from his salary of $2,000 per annum toward a fund for men who had to be looked after. Later, when Mr. Alward was made a reading clerk at a salary of $3,600 per annum, he paid over $1,600 per annum for the same sort of fund. Disbursing Clerk Robinson testified that Alward retained $2,000 of his salary of $3,600; that A. C. Smith got $1,200, and the remaining $400 went to the general fund to increase the pay of others on the rolls, or to pay persons not on the rolls at all.

You will understand that these things occurred in former congresses and that we are not telling tales on the present congress, for we have no testimony of the kind which was elicited for the use of the Civil Service Reform league. What the present incumbents of the elective offices will do in the next congress, or what they are doing in the present congress, is not affirmed.

The Civil Service Reform league discovered and exposed one of the newspaper correspondents who was drawing a salary of $2,000 a year. He had charge of the subscription lists and the files of newspapers. Not more than 20 or 25 people a day consulted those newspapers, and the newspaper man simply had a soft snap. A colored man, who received a salary of $1,400 per annum as a messenger, kept the files in order.

The house of representatives has on its pay roll 385 employes, and their salaries aggregate $420,000 each year. Commenting on this statement, the league committee says that if such peculiar practices can exist where only 385 men are employed, we may well imagine what excesses might be reached if the 86,000 people now in the civil service were thrown upon the mercy of the spoils system. Out of the facts gathered and here epitomized the civil service reformers make great contention for the extension of their system.

Fosston and Crookston have commenced proceedings against the officials of Columbia county to stop them from doing business.

The rush for County office in Columbia county could only be compared to a panic in a theater, when the cry of fire is heard. Young men middle aged men, and men old enough to know better were engaged in strife, with the battle cry of, I'm the man that did it. The county Commissioners are H.G.Mitchell Engebret Larson, Olof Stadig, L.J.O' Neal and Halvor Uff, who were chosen at the time of getting up the petition, as men being well qualified to wrestle with the dificltys of starting a new county, but they could not appoint everbody to office, and as a consequence are unpopular among the ones who fought and lost. The following were appointed to be turned over to the voters to deal with at the next primary election, (but none of them wanted it) when the people can choose their own officers.

Auditor, Charles McCarty; Treasurer F.E.Lepage; Sheriff, Ed. L. Stow; Register of Deeds, Andrew Trovaten; surperintendant of schools, D.J. Aakhus; clerk of court, Geo. E. Flaten; judge of probate, A. I. Solberg; attorney, H. W. Stark; surveyor, Johannes, Beim; court commissioner T.R. Brownlee; cororner, Dr.A. McEachran

Complaint is being made, that the commissioners of Clear water county went outside of their territory to select county officers and did not appoint a County attorney that has a legal residence within its borders. Our friends over the line should remember that the creation and organization of a new county out of the territory of an old county is a propositition that requires ability and good judgement, to see to if that the people of the new county get a fair and equitable division of the property belonging to the whole county. A. R. Holston who the Commissioners have appointed for county attorney of Clearwater county has had more experience in county division fights than any other attorney in northern Minnesota, in fact he has been mixed up in all the division scraps since 1892.

He was to have been the appointee of Columbia county six years ago for this important office, and the people of the new county of Clearwater can congratulate themselves that they have a man that is so well qualified to look after their intrest in the division of the property as A.R.Holston.

By an interesting coincedent the German government has just presented the United States government with an exhaustive report on the condition of its navy. This report according to a dispatch from the Berlin corespondent of the Daily News, shows that in "the event of war the kaiser would be able to command the services of 74,000 trained sailors, against a total of 21,000 enlisted officers and men constituting the personnel of the United States navy." There are obvious reasons why that report should receive the attention of the states men in congress when they come to consider the new naval bill. —Chicago News.

We are of the opinion that the kiser will not have so many trained sailors or ships, after a forty minute mix up with Dewey and his merry men in South American waters.

WHO WILL RETIRE?

County Auditor Petterson of Polk county, who will retire and become a drivate citizen of mcIntosh on january 6th next, was presented by his office force last Tuesday with a beautiful gold chain and charm, the latter bearing a handsome ruby. Mr. Petterson has made an excellent auditor and this token is evidence that he is popular with his office force as well as with the public. McIntosh Times.

The Christian Name.

The term "Christian name" is used in England and America only. "Baptismal name" is used in other countries. The term seems to have been used first after the reformation, when Biblical names were used as a reaction against the use of the saints' names in the calendar. It is evident that all Biblical names are not Christian, but the reaction went so far as to consider everything in the Bible as Christian and everything not in the Bible as pagan or certainly non-Christian.

A Fish Story.

"Talk about fish and things of the sea!" said he who claimed to be a seafaring man. "Twas in the year—well, it was a good while ago and we were floating somewhere around—well, one of the oceans. One day we were heading sou' by sou'west, latitude—I forget exactly which—when a ripple in the water suggested the presence of a shark. You can always tell a shark by its ripple. He's got one of his own. We never landed a good specimen, and when he showed his head I could well tell he was a ten footer. I always was quick and precise. A knife in me mouth, a jump, and I landed headforemost between the shark's jaws. Quick as a flash I turned around. With me knife I cut holes through his sides for my legs and arms to pass through and swam back to the ship. Well, he was a fine morsel, that fish was, and we lived on him for weeks. Is it true? Well"—and he displayed a splinter from the handle of the knife.—Harper's Monthly.

Taste of Brogue.

An Englishman met a man at a French table d'hote, who addressed him in French. His accent betrayed him, and, rather rudely, the Briton said, "Ah, you are English."

"The devil a doubt of it, darlin'," replied the stranger.

"An Irishman, too, still better," went on the other.

"Well, thin, isn't it strange," said the man, "my French always shows me to be English and my English to be Irish?"

The First Step.

The children were having a writing lesson.

"Set me copy, too!" pleaded little Ronnie.

"But you can't write, dear!" the governess reminded him.

"Then set me some blots!" commanded Ronnie.

He evidently considered blots a step toward writing.—Home Chat.

Dinner Among the Romans.

The Romans in the time of Cicero and Augustus took an early breakfast, from 3 to 4 in the morning, a luncheon at 12 or 1 and at about 3 o'clock the cœna or principal meal of the day, corresponding with our dinner. Concurrently we read of some not dining until sunset.

Monkey Policemen.

In Hindustan monkeys are made useful, and they do police duty after a fashion and often really assist the police in quelling disturbances or suppressing riots. Sometimes these four handed policemen act as protectors to the weak and helpless, as this incident will show:

At Agra on the platform of a public warehouse a little street arab had spread his rug in the shade of a stack of country produce and had just dropped asleep when one of the wealthy residents strolled up with a pet leopard that had learned to accompany him in all his rambles.

A troop of monkeys had taken post on the opposite side of the shed, but at sight of the spotted intruder the whole gang charged along the platform and, instantly forming a semicircle about the little sleeper, faced the leopard with bristling manes, evidently resolved to defeat the suspected purpose of his visit.

Ocean Cliffs Set on Fire by Waves.

It is not often that the waves of the ocean can set cliffs afire, but they do sometimes. At Ballybunion, on the west coast of Ireland, the waves which for unnumbered centuries have been beating against the shores one day broke into a great deposit of iron pyrites and alum. A rapid oxidation took place which produced a fierce heat and set the whole cliff to burning. For weeks the cliff burned like a volcano, and great clouds of smoke and vapor rose in the air. When the fire died out, great masses of lava and clay burned to brick were seen in every direction.

In the arctic regions there is another such burning cliff, which when last seen was on fire for twenty miles. The burning material was composed largely of lignite, but is believed to be made up of several other combustible chemical substances, which had been set on fire when the waves reached them.

Sugar and the Hygienists.

Sugar is doubtless a food. It is a food of great energy. But we must not abuse it, says the Revue Scientifique. Why? Because, according to M. G. Bunge, the physiologist, pure cane sugar is lacking in lime and iron. Now, lime and iron are necessary to the organism. It is better to take the sugar in the form of legumes and fruits rich in hydrocarbons. And what is honey worth? Very little also. It has the same inconveniences—it also is wanting in lime and iron.

It will be observed, however, that if we consider all the advantages which, according to the hygienists, attach to various foods, we shall find that it is almost impossible to get any nourishment at all if we want to adjust our diet to scientific teaching.—Literary Digest.

Dumas and His Porthos.

Dumas, like Balzac, was fond of his own creations. Among them all he loved Porthos best. The great, strong, vain hero was a child after his own heart. One afternoon, it is related, his son found Dumas careworn, wretched, overwhelmed. "What has happened to you? Are you ill?" asked Dumas fils. "No," replied Dumas pere. "Well, what is it, then?" "I am miserable." "Why?" "This morning I killed Porthos—poor Porthos! Oh, what trouble I have had to make up my mind to do it! But there must be an end to all things. Yet when I saw him sink beneath the ruins, crying, 'It is too heavy, too heavy for me!' I swear to you that I cried." And he wiped away a tear with the sleeve of his dressing gown.

Suspicious.

"Did Benny ask you for my hand last night, papa?"

"Yes, my daughter."

"And what did you think of the young man?"

"I don't like suspicious men, my dear. I like a man who looks you in the eye."

"Well, didn't Benny look you in the eye, father?"

"No; all the time he was asking for your hand in marriage he had his eyes on my feet."—Yonkers Statesman.

Good Enough For a Beast.

A droll little story is told of Mr. W. S. Gilbert. He put up his horse one day at a small country inn, on the signboard of which was painted conspicuously the notice, "Entertainment For Man and Beast." When his lunch was brought, he looked dissatisfied and surprised the waiter by saying, "This is all very well so far, but where is the entertainment for the man?"—London Tit-Bits.

Nutritious Value of Oysters.

The popular belief that the oyster is a most nutritious article of diet does not rest upon any scientific basis. The oyster as a food could not satisfy the demands of the human body. While the oyster, when not stewed, is very palatable, wholesome and easily assimilated by weak, impaired stomachs, it cannot be contended for a moment that it contains such elements and nutrition as may be found in beans, rice or potatoes. There is very little, if any, fatmaking or muscle building material in the oyster. Its composition is largely nitrogenous, and, being rich in phosphates, it is generally regarded as an excellent food for the brain, but a man reduced to an exclusive diet of oysters would soon find himself deficient in adipose tissue and in those elements that go to make up physical force and vitality in the human body.

Something Harder.

Auntie (finding Jackie sobbing in a corner)—Why, Jackie, what has happened to make you feel so bad this morning?

Jackie—M-ma m-issed some jelly.

Auntie—Ho, ho! I see. And her suspicions fell on you, eh?

Jackie—No, auntie; it was her slipper.—Boston Courier.

A Delicate Position.

Wedding presents are frequently distinguished for their uselessness, and giftmaking at any time is attended with some danger. A faithful Irish employee announced his desire to take a month's holiday to visit his brother. He had worked so well and steadily that his employer not only granted the request, but made him a present of a new traveling bag.

The night before Tim was to leave he received the gift, accompanied by a few appreciative words.

Tim stared at the bag for a moment and then asked, "What am I to do with that?"

"Why, put your clothes in it when you go away, of course," answered the employer.

"Put me clothes in it, is it?" said Tim. "An' phwat will Oi wear if Oi put me clothes in that?"

Not a Compliment.

"Old war horse" has long been a complimentary and affectionate sobriquet bestowed on veteran political workers by their party confreres and admirers. A Washington correspondent once endeavored to compliment Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and other women suffragists by referring to them as "old war mares." He protested that he had heard them say there could be no opprobrium in sex, but the old ladies kicked like young fillies, and the correspondent lost his job.

Two Dinners, One Meal.

"I have a lawyer friend whose name is not Henry Peck, but it might be," said a city official.

"Last week my wife and I were invited to his house for dinner, and you never saw finer silver and china on a table, but food was at extreme low tide. My wife gave me a significant glance, and I saw the color rise to the cheeks of our host, but he played the agreeable without a word or look of disapproval.

"Both my wife and I were awfully hungry when we started for home, and she at once accepted my invitation to enter the first restaurant we saw for a good square meal. We were no sooner seated than we saw our dinner host come sneaking in and take a seat in an obscure corner.

"'Make believe that we don't see him,' said my wife, with a woman's tact. We did make believe, and, the funny part is, so did our late host. By the friendly aid of a mirror I saw when he first observed us the color come to his cheeks, as it had at his own table. He turned as far from us as possible and ate as though he were not enjoying his meal very much."—New York Herald.

The Word "Cafe."

It is really difficult to understand how the word "cafe," a French term, has come into such general use in this country and how it happens that it is so grossly misapplied. The term means coffee, or a place where coffee is sold, and what relation there is between a coffee shop and a place where liquors are sold we are at a loss to know. It is not improbable that the idea comes from combinations of bar rooms and restaurants, in the latter of which of course coffee is sold, but to our mind nothing seems more absurd or more emphatically marks the modern disposition to follow blind custom than sticking up on the window where only beer, liquor and wines are sold the word "coffee," and that in a foreign language. Were it not that an age of misnomer gives recognition to this anomaly we would just as soon the word "meat" or "bread" signalized places where liquors are sold. Either would have as much sense and logical application as "cafe."—Exchange.

Improving on Euclid.

The Pioneer of Allahabad tells stories of some "kindergarten" classes in the English army. Among the definitions given in an examination is one of a circle peculiarly happy, which gives a freshness to Euclid. It is, "A straight line which starts at a certain point and gets back to the same point as quickly as possible."

Unfair.

"Don't you sometimes feel that wealth is unfairly distributed?" asked the social reformer.

"I do," answered Senator Sorghum. "Many is the dollar I have given away in a campaign that didn't do me a cent's worth of good."—Washington Star.

"No. But he thinks his hat would come down over the old man's ears all right."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Willing to Help.

"You have wounded me," he sadly said, as he rose from his knees—"wounded me so deeply that I shall never"—

"Wait," she said, picking a book off the table. "Let me see what 'First Aid to the Injured' says to do in such a case as yours."

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.

A medicine that has restored so many women to health and can produce proof of the fact must be regarded with respect. This is the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which cannot be equalled by any other medicine the world has ever produced. Here is another case:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I was troubled with falling of the womb, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains, backache, headache, dizzy and fainting spells, and stomach trouble.

"I doctored for about five years but did not seem to improve. I began the use of your medicine, and have taken seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three of Blood Purifier, and also used the Sanative Wash and Liver Pills, and am now enjoying good health, and have gained in flesh. I thank you very much for what you have done for me, and heartily recommend your medicine to all suffering women."—MISS EMMA SNYDER, 218 East Center St., Marion, Ohio.

"FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN."

Women would save time and much sickness if they would write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice as soon as any distressing symptoms appear. It is free, and has put thousands of women on the right road to recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

No Changes.

Governor Van Sant will retain all his heads of departments except Oil Inspector Schiffman. He announced the reappointment of his office force and of the heads of important state departments directly under the governor. The persons thus given assurance of further tenure of office are the following:

Robert Jamison, Excelsior, private secretary; Charles J. Moos, St. Cloud, executive clerk; Minnie Helwig, St. Paul, executive stenographer; David E. Bensley, St. Paul, governor's messenger.

Elmer H. Dearth, St. Paul, insurance commissioner.

John W. Olsen, Albert Lea, superintendent of public instruction.

E. A. Nelson, Hallock, librarian.

Elias D. Libbey, St. Paul, adjutant general.

O. M. Norsley, Red Wing, military storekeeper.

W. W. P. McConnell Mankato, dairy and food commissioner.

John O'Donnell, Minneapolis, commissioner of labor.

John P. Gibbs, commissioner of Itasca park.

William C. Masterman, Stillwater, surveyor general of logs and lumber, first district.

This cleans up the slate, and relieves the governor of pressure, except for appointments on the various boards. Public Examiner S. T. Johnson holds over for another two years. Executive Agent S. F. Fullerton is elected by the game and fish commission.

The Healthiest City.

Health Commissioner Ohage, of St. Paul, yesterday received from Paris a bronze medal giving St. Paul first place in the hygienic and public health competition, the findings being those of the directorate of the Paris exposition.

The medal is a circular disk of bronze, two inches across its face, bearing on one side the coat of arms of the French republic and on the other the exposition design and words "Grand Prix."

The statistics for this competition were prepared by Dr. Ohage two years ago and taken from the public records. They included the population, mortality, drawings of the sewerage system, waterworks, pictures of the public baths and statistical information generally pertaining to St. Paul's health as a community.

Nearly every city and community in the new and old world was represented in this competition, and the awarding of the "grand prix" to St. Paul is an honor the health department is proud of. The award was made on the health of St. Paul as statistically recorded two years ago.

Since that time the population has increased and the death rate is even lower per thousand.

Fish Spawn.

Senator W. W. Dunn, of St. Paul, says that nearly forty times as many fish spawn can be produced at the fish hatchery than at present without any additional cost of maintenance, if the facilities for hatching are provided. Attention is directed to the fact that, while Wisconsin, with half as many lakes, has two up-to-date hatcheries, Minnesota, with more lakes than any state in the union, has only one hatchery. Money is now available for the purchase of a tract of land adjoining the hatchery, with a spring discharging as much water as the spring which now furnishes all the water used at the hatchery.

What is needed most now, says Executive Agent S. F. Fullerton, is an appropriation for building pools and houses to utilize the water of the spring on the land to be acquired, the rebuilding of the old plank fish pools and the erection of much larger hatching-houses.

News Notes.

John Dombronski, of Springfield, was frozen so badly he will probably be a cripple.

The State Board of Control will soon award contracts for furnishing the new wings at the Hastings and Anoka insane asylums.

During 1902 130 homesteads have been proved up in Hubbard county, which adds about 20,000 acres to the taxable property. There is practically no more government land in the county.

Fire yesterday morning completely gutted the Rivers building, a tenement flat in the east end. The building was occupied by the poorer class of tenants, many of whom suffered severe losses.

The first fine paid for selling wood alcohol "Jamaica ginger" was reported to Dairy Commissioner McConnell from Moose Lake, where Swanson Bros., keepers of a general store, plead guilty and paid a $25 fine.

THE WOEFUL WHEEL.

George Thought He Was Doing His Duty, But It Was Labor Lost.

A young man in a cricket shirt and straw hat was wheeling a baby carriage backward and forward along the pavement in front of a small house in Westgate-on-Sea.

The hot afternoon sun poured pitilessly down upon him, and he was angry as any man in the neighborhood, relates the Manchester Guardian.

"My dear," came a voice from the upper window of the house.

"Let me alone, can't you?" he shrieked back, and went on wheeling and mopping his face.

An hour later the same voice came from the window in earnest, pleading tones:

"George, dear!"

"Well, what on earth do you want?" he shouted. "Have the water pipes burst?"

"No, George, dear," wailed the voice, "the water pipes are all right, but you've been wheeling Amy's doll all the afternoon. Hadn't you better let baby have a turn now?"

Indigestion, congested liver, impure blood, constipation, these are what afflict thousands of people who do not know what is the matter with them. They drag along a miserable existence; they apply to the local doctors occasionally, and sometimes obtain a little temporary relief, but the old, tired, worn-out, all-gone, distressed feeling always comes back again worse than ever, until in time they become tired of living, wonder why they were ever born, and why they are alive unless to endure constant suffering. To such sufferers there is a haven of refuge in Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops, which is a wonderful medicine. One trial will convince the most sceptical that any or all of these difficulties may be removed, and a perfect cure effected, by taking Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops. Get a bottle at once, before it is too late.

His Little Scheme.

He was cutting an item from a newspaper. "It tells how a house was robbed, and I want to show it to my wife," he explained.

"What good will that do?" a friend inquired.

"A whole lot," was the reply. "You see, this house was robbed while a man was at church with his wife."

"Say!" exclaimed the friend, excitedly, "you haven't got a duplicate copy of that paper, have you?"—Chicago Post.

California, the State of Big Things.

California produces 22 per cent. of the country's barley, 40 per cent. of the country's gold, 70 per cent. of the country's beet sugar, 99 per cent. of the country's raisins, and from 90 per cent. to 99 per cent. of a great many other important commodities. California is one of the largest producers of beans in the world and the only producer of Lima beans for commercial purposes in the United States. California yields more honey than all the rest of the Union. California supplies nearly all the vegetable and flower seeds to the markets of the world. California sends outside her borders 20,000,000 bushels of wheat every year. San Francisco, the metropolis of California, is now the sixth city in financial importance in the United States.

A Popular Calendar.

The popular calendar issued every year by the North-Western Line (Omaha Road) is now ready for distribution. This is without doubt the most useful calendar issued, and will be found in more business houses and homes than any other. It is distinctively a calendar for the "busy business man." It is ten by fourteen inches in size, has a nice silk cord for hanging and runs a week to the page. The figures are two inches in height and may be easily seen the length of a large room. Copies of this very useful calendar will be sent postpaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage and wrapping, by T. W. Teasdale, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Casualties and Fires, Personal and Political Notes, Business Failures and Resumptions, Weather Record.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

CONGRESSIONAL.

The senate reconvened on the 6th after the holiday recess and the time was mostly occupied in discussing the coal situation and a joint resolution was introduced providing for the admission of anthracite coal free of duty. The omnibus statehood bill was discussed....In the house the bill to create a general staff in the army was the issue, but no action was taken.

Senator Hoar made a notable speech in the senate on the 6th on his bill regulating trusts and Senator Vest attacked protected industries. Senator Hoar argued that if his bill should become a law and prove effective no corporation engaging in the commerce which is within the jurisdiction of congress can keep its condition a secret. ....The house passed the bill for the creation of a general staff for the army and also a bill to increase the pension of soldiers totally deaf from $30 to $40 per month.

On the 7th the senate discussed the bill for the reorganization of the militia and also the statehood bill. A resolution was adopted for an immediate investigation into the entire question of coal supply and the relation between wholesale and retail prices in the District of Columbia....In the house the senate bill for the redemption of the silver coinage of the Hawaiian islands and its recoinage into United States coin was passed, and a resolution was adopted to request state authorities to cooperate with the census office in securing a uniform system of death registration.

In the senate on the 8th Senator Vest's resolution to put anthracite coal on the free list was debated, Senator Aldrich (R. I.) speaking against the resolution. Senator Nelson (Minn.) continued his remarks against the omnibus statehood bill. A few minor bills were passed, and the senate adjourned until the 12th....In the house two administration measures, drawn by Attorney General Knox and aimed to control trusts, were introduced. They provide for publicity and a commission with ample power to enforce its demands. Mr. Griffith (Ind.) introduced a bill limiting the individual wealth of any one man to $10,000,000.

DOMESTIC.

President Roosevelt will attend the banquet of the Canton (O.) Republican league in honor of the birthday of former President McKinley, Jan. 27.

H. Finkelstein, his wife, daughter and grandson were asphyxiated by illuminating gas at their home in Chicago.

In his message to the Pennsylvania legislature the passage of a compulsory arbitration law was urged by Gov. Stone, who said the strike cost the state $1,000,000

The excitement over the closing of the post office at Indianola, Miss., by President Roosevelt is spreading over the south and a general uprising against negro officeholders is threatened.

Andrew Carnegie has offered to give the city of Philadelphia $1,500,000 toward the extension of its free library system.

The thirty-third session of the legislature of Minnesota convened at St. Paul.

Robbers took $2,000 from the private bank of Silliman, Williams & Co., at Ordway, Col.

News of the wreck off the coast of Washington of the Norwegian bark Prince Arthur and the drowning of 18 of the crew has been received at Port Townsend, Wash.

Gov. Van Sant, of Minnesota, was sworn in and in his message declared his purpose to prosecute the railway merger suit.

The nonunion men continued to occupy the attention of the coal strike commission in Philadelphia in presenting evidence of lawlessness in the anthracite coal region during the strike.

The public library for which Andrew Carnegie gave $350,000 was dedicated at Washington with addresses by the donor and President Roosevelt.

The Pennsylvania road has divided ownership of the Reading with the Vanderbilt interests, the two now controlling almost the entire eastern anthracite and bituminous coal industry.

Paul Woodward, aged 17 years, was hanged in Camden, N. J., for the murder last October of John Coffin, aged 11, and Price Jennings, aged 14 years.

KNOX ON THE TRUST QUESTION.

Attorney General Makes Public His Views Which Represent Attitude of Administration—Recommendations for Legislation.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The following abstract of the attorney general's recommendations regarding trusts and combinations, which were made public at some length Tuesday, was given out at the white house. It represents the general attitude of the administration on this subject, and was authorized by the president.

Preliminary.

The people do not desire the business of the country to be interfered with beyond the regulation necessary to control combinations where they act improperly and to correct any tendency toward monopoly. In this country, where money is cheap and abundant and within the reach of keen and capable men, monopoly will be impossible if competition is kept free.

Small enterprises have certain advantages over large combinations, and will live and thrive if assured of an open and fair field. Rebates and discriminatory rates constitute one of the chief restrictions on competition. They unjustly swell the earnings of favored concerns and, supporting a vast volume of capital stock which represents nothing but unfair advantage over rivals, contribute largely to the upbuilding of monopoly.

The situation respecting transportation discriminations and the entry of independent capital into new industries has lately been improved. It is now known that the amount of capital embarked in independent enterprises in the past two years at least equals the total capital of the great combinations formed within the previous 12 years. With assurance against predatory competition, this improvement will continue. Individual industrial experience with the certainty of secure employment of capital may be trusted to compete effectively with such selfish combinations as are not formed for sound economic reasons, but merely in order to capitalize the country's prosperity for the benefit of their promoters. The existence of most of those combinations has not increased the productive capacity of the country, they have merely acquired the ownership of preexisting industries.

Legislation Recommended.

The attorney general offers the following recommendations for immediate legislation:

That all discriminatory practices affecting interstate trade be made offenses to be enjoined and punished. Such legislatin to be directed alike against those who give and those who receive illegal advantages, and to cover discrimination in prices as against competitors in particular localities resorted to for the purpose of destroying competition.

In order to reach producers guilty of these offences who are as producers merely beyond national control, a penalty should be imposed upon the interstate and foreign transportation of goods produced by them, and federal courts should be given power to restrain such transportation at the government's suit. Such legislation is necessary because the existing interstate commerce law does not give an effective remedy in this class of cases against either shipper or carrier.

The casus omissus in the interstate commerce act should now be supplied by imposing a penalty upon carrier and beneficiary alike, and by giving to the courts the right to restrain all such infractions of the law.

The prohibition against carriers should be limited to those subject to the act to regulate commerce. Only carriers operating a line of railroad or a rail and water line as one line are required to publish their rates and adhere to them. It is impracticable to control lines operating wholly by water. Rates of water transportation are necessarily open to the freest competition, are invariably low by comparison, and thus naturally furnish the standard of reasonableness without express regulation.

It should be made unlawful to transport traffic by carriers subject to the interstate commerce act at a less rate than the published rate, and all who participate in violating the law should be punished.

Provision should also be made to reach corporations and combinations which produce wholly within a state, but whose products enter interstate commerce. This provision should relate, first, to concerns which fatten on rebates; second, to concerns which sell commodities below the general price in particular localities or in any other way in particular localities seek to destroy competition.

There should be a comprehensive plan to enable the government to get at all the facts bearing upon the organization and practices of concerns engaged in interstate commerce, not with a view to hampering any legitimate business of such concerns, but in order to be in position to take action if necessary.

Favors a Commission.

To this end a commission or a special bureau in the proposed department of commerce should be created, whose duty it should be to investigate the operations of concerns engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, to gather information and data enabling it to make recommendations for additional legislation to report to the president. This would be a first step in securing proper publicity. This commission should have authority to inquire into the management of any concern doing an interstate business whenever it becomes necessary or desirable; it should have the authority to call for reports from them, to compel testimony from all witnesses and by the production of books, papers, etc.

These recommendations are based on the central thought that the first step should be taken by a law aimed at what are certainly known to be unreasonable practices directly restrictive of freedom of commerce, and by a law securing some governmental supervision as outlined above. A special act should be passed at once to speed the final decision of cases pending or to be raised under the present anti-trust law, providing for the hearing of such cases by a full bench of circuit judges and for a direct appeal from the circuit courts to the supreme court of the United States.

TO TREAT CONSUMPTIVES.

Henry Phipps, Steel Magnate, to Donate $1,000,000 for Hospital in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—As a result of the investigations into the method of the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis as carried on by Dr. Lawrence F. Flick at his sanitarium at White Haven, Pa., Henry Phipps, former director of the United States Steel corporation, has notified Dr. Flick of his intention to build, equip and endow a hospital in this city for the isolation and treatment of consumptives in an advanced stage of the disease. It is estimated that Mr. Phipps' gift to humanity will entail an expenditure of considerably over $1,000,000, all of which will be paid out of his own pocket. The money is immediately available, and Dr. Flick expects to start the hospital within the next two weeks in a temporary building in the slum district.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, Jan. 6.—The thirty-third legislature of the state of Minnesota began as an existing body at noon today.

Yesterday marked the beginning of a session which will be eagerly watched by the voters of the state and its enactments and omissions will be closely scrutinized by all.

There was nothing spectacular about the opening of either house. Lieutenant Governor Jones found some roses on his desk, but this was the extent of any decorative attempt. The routine of swearing in the members and electing officers was performed in the same manner as for many years back. But one slight difference was noted in the swearing in of the house members, who this time took their oath in squads of ten.

The house caucus did not finish its business Monday night, and was continued yesterday morning. Everything before the caucus had been decided upon during the night, so there was virtually nothing for the caucus to do except adopt the report of its committee.

Dr. Babcock, of Wadena, being elected speaker the house organized as f[illegible]s:

Chief clerk, Julius A. Schm[illegible] [illegible]edwood Falls, reelected.

First assistant clerk, Adolph [illegible]n-son, Minneapolis.

Enrolling clerk, Frank A. Holc[illegible] Paul.

Second assistant clerk, Knu[illegible]-dum, Bricelyn, reelected.

Engrossing clerk, W. A. Gullick, Minneapolis.

Sergeant-at-arms, E. Fanning, Stewartville.

Assistant sergeant-at-arms, R. S. Leich, Duluth.

Postmistress, Mrs. Adele M. Van Smith, St. Paul.

Assistant postmistress, Mrs. M. A. Soule, Litchfield.

Chaplain, Rev. Robert Forbes, Duluth.

The thirty-third session of the senate was opened at noon precisely by Lieut. Gov. Ray W. Jones, who after calling the body to order, spoke in part as follows:

"I am fully mindful of the responsibility of my position as the presiding officer of the senate and am deeply sensible of my lack of legislative experience and knowledge of parliamentary procedure, but I will endeavor to discharge my duties honestly and fearlessly and will expedite business in every way.

"It will be my effort to treat every senator courteously and I look for similar consideration from the members of this body."

Senator Hiler H. Horton of St. Paul, was then named to act as temporary secretary and only two members failed to respond to the roll call. These were Senator Durant and Schaller, but they arrived in time to take the oath administered to the several districts in numerical order by Chief Justice Start of the state supreme court.

Rules—Senators E. E. Lord, Smith, Hawkins, Pugh, Somerville, Shell, Horton, Brower, Schaller.

Mileage—Senators Collester, Cole, Coller.

Senators Wilson, Ward and Thompson were appointed a committee to arrange for a joint meeting of both bodies for the purpose of hearing the governor's message, and the first named, when the notification from the house was read announcing that this morning at 10:30 had been decided upon by the members of that body, entered an informal protest, contending that common courtesy would suggest that the convenience of the governor and the senate might at least be first consulted, before the time was fixed.

St. Paul, Jan. 7.—Less than ten minutes sufficed for all the business coming before the senate yesterday. The roll call was hurried through, and when the order of business was read out, it was received with silence.

Then Senator Brower introduced the first bill of the session, providing for the appropriation of $150,000 for the expenses of the session. Under suspension of rules, the bill received its third reading in less than one minute, 46 votes being recorded in its favor.

The lieutenant governor announced the appointment of seven pages, as follows: George Brandt, St. Paul; Max J. Levi, Minneapolis; Fred Williams, Minneapolis; Henry Korngable, St. Paul; Raymond Ornberg, Grove City; J. Wackman, Detroit, and Robert Olson, Willmar.

This completed the routine proceedings, and the senate waited nearly twenty minutes until Chief Clerk Schmall of the house of representatives arrived with the information that that body was waiting to meet in joint session, for the purpose of hearing the governor's message read. Both branches adjourned.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—The legislature finished all preliminary work this morning and both houses settled down to real work. Four bills were introduced in the senate and a like number in the house and, having gone this far, both bodies adjourned until Monday night.

The senate session was a quiet one and lasted but a short time. In the house the report of the committee on rules stirred up some opposition from an unexpected source. The report provided for an increase in the number of house employes and Representative Haugland was much opposed to it. The report was adopted, with but four votes cast against it.

Senator Wilson introduced a bill providing for the submission of a similar tax amendment to that which was lost at the last election. Senator Gjertsen's bill abrogates the rule which permits the management of the soldiers' home to require old soldiers to pay the home a portion of their pensions.

The report of the committee on rules was the first business of the house. The joint rules of the last legislature were adopted. The old house rules were adopted with two changes, in rules 62 and 63.

Four bills were introduced, the first by Representative Johnson. It provides for the abolition of the system of "working out" road taxes and provides that the tax shall be paid in cash. The Good Roads Association is responsible for this measure.

Representatives Haugland and Gandrud each introduced a bill providing that separate colored ballots shall be used, when constitutional amendments are before the voters at election. This is part of a recommendation contained in the governor's message, and it is hoped by this change to get sufficient votes on an amendment to pass it. Heretofore the great majority of voters overlooked the amendments entirely.

Representative Gandrud also introduced a bill relative to the loaning of money from the permanent school and university funds to cities, towns and counties. The bill raises the limit of bonded indebtedness from 7 to 15 per cent of the assessed valuation. A bill similar in character to this one was defeated at the last session.

THE next move on the county division checker-bord will be a fight for County seat, between the strong teams of Fosston and McIntosh. We hope they will not start up until onr lumberman get a fiew logs in, as it is liable to get so hot the snow will go off.

THE report of the last grand jury of Polk county shows that what has been said about the robbery of the tax payer by the County printing gang were facts. The jury says "The records also show that bills have been paid for public printing largely in ex cess of actnal measurment and price named in the contracts."

About all the evils complained of grew out of the fact of the county being to large and a determination on the part of one end of the county to keep even with the other end in the presentment of bills.

WE have not fully investgated all the reasons for the partial defeat of the republican county ticket last fall. We are dull of comprehension, aud slow to anger but shall hew to the line on this question as the defeated candidates are entitled to something more tangible for their part of $18.000, put up for campaign expences than a friedly pat on the back and a congratulation, for makeing a good campaign. We wonder if the candidates noticed that some of the committee was prosperous and enthusiastic and the editors seemed to not have any patictnlar interest in the campaign of the county ticket. The defeated ones can now congratu late themselves that they will not he hurdened with the cares of a county office, but can sit and smoke and occasionly read the poem, of Maud Muller.

THE presidents action in dis continueing mail service at Indianolia, becaus a fiew hot heads and a neagro postmistress could not live in peac, was certianly an injustice to the business men of that place. The president can not reconcile the people of the south to the fact of considering the negro their equal, and he had better use all his eye sight and energy to watch the movements of England Germany and Co. insted of stiring up stife in America ahout a negress postmistress.

THE message of Gov. Van Sant to the Minnesota legislature is an able document and the recommendatios idicate an active interest in the welfare of the state. The note of warning is souded to the law makers to use every means in their power to aid the enforcement of the laws already upon its statute hooks against the consolidation of transportation Companys, and to pass any additional laws that may he advisable to accomplish this object.

The message shows that the Gov. ment what he said in the campaign, and was not talking to gain votes, on this question of vital importance to the people of the north west.

Curiosities About Observatories.

The first recorded observatory was on the top of the temple of Belus. The tomb of Osymadias in Egypt was the second. This last contained a golden astronomical circle 200 feet in diameter. Another at Benares, India, is believed to he almost as ancient as either of the other two. The first in Europe was erected at Cassell in 1561. That of Tycho Brahe at Uranienburg was built in 1576. The Paris observatory dates from 1667, and that of Greenwich is two years older. The one at Nuremberg was erected in 1678 and that at Berlin in 1711. The famous Bologna tower was built in 1714. The Stockholm, Utrecht, Copenhagen and Lisbon observatories were built in 1740, 1650, [illegible] and 1738 respectively.

DEATH TO LOCUSTS.

Washington, Jan. 7 —There will be no more dreaded plagues of grasshoppers or of locusts. Farmers may plant their crops in the spring without fear that their fields will be laid bare by the first-named pest, and orchardists may feel certain that when their trees bud in the spring they will not be denuded of leaves and of fruit by any from of the latter insect, seventeenyear or otherwise.

All this is because the departmant of agriculture has discovered a plague to kill the plague —the germ of an extermely contagious insect disease that can wipe out the vastest swarm of locusts or of grasshoppers in a single night. The discovery is the result of years of patient investigation by Professr L. O. Howard, entomologist of the department, and his discoveries are not in the theoretical stage but have been demonstrated by government agents and private individuals acting as such all over the world from South Africa to the Philippines and back again.

The next time a grasshopper pl ague prevails in any section of the United States tubes of gelatine containing the germs will be sent for the inoculation of a few insects and the entire swarm will be destoryed.

Poe's Placid Eyes.

Poe's neck was rather long and slender and made him appear, when sitting, rather taller than he really was. He also appeared when sitting to have a gentle and rather graceful taper of the bust and shoulders upward. This was very peculiar. His eyes were of a neutral violet tint, rather inclining to hazel, and shone not with a dazzling or brilliant sparkle, but rather with a mildly subdued serenity of intellectual splendor—perhaps on account of the dark shadow cast upon them by the overhanging and rather impressive cloud of his moonlike brow—giving them that soft, celestial glow of soul which characterizes the loftiest enthusiasm. Their lashes were long, dark and silken, hanging over them like willows naping [?] by the moon—lake—or cumuli of chaos over the God suffused waters of the eternal wells. When the heaven of his brow was free from clouds—which appeared always to he the case when his soul was not racked either by the thoughts of his poverty, of the remembrance of the manifold insults he had received from anonymous correspondents, who pestered him from envy of his genius and his uncompromising hostility to the basest ignorance—the intellectual placidity of his mildly becoming tres was beautiful.—Poe-Chiver Papers in Cen-

The Racing Camel.

The ordinary camel, which will never hurry under any circumstances, has been transformed in southern Algeria into an animal so different in size, temper and appearance that it may almost be looked upon as a different race. This is the racing camel, prized for its speed. The result of many generations of careful breeding, which has been encouraged by valuable prizes, it can he depended upon for nine or ten miles an hour, which it can keep up for sixteen or seventeen hours, almost without a stop. Its value is five or ten times that of the beast of burden. The camel races are popular sport and are made exciting by the evident interest of the creatures themselves in winning.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll he a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fix a day for yer deeing and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

One of our popular young men made a trip to McIntosh last week, which requires an explanation. All we want to know, is, did he go to McIntosh to file on a valuable claim, or to get a marriage license? Until this question is satisfactorly answered there will be an increase in the demand for cow bells.

Cards are out announcing the marriage, of Bennie Newton and Miss Dora Narveson, of McIntosh, Jan.22,. Well we have known Bennie, boy and man 18 years, and congraultate him, in his luck, in his matrimogial venture, as Miss. Narveson is one of the most highly respected yaung ladies of McIntosh.

The Character Scared Him.

David Garrick had a brother in the country who was an idolatrous admirer of his genius. A rich neighbor, a grocer, being about to visit London, this brother insisted on his taking a letter of introduction to the actor. Not being able to make up his mind to visit the great man the first day, the grocer went to the play in the evening and saw Garrick in "Abel Drugger." On his return to the country the brother eagerly inquired respecting the visit he had been so anxious to bring about. "Why, Mr. Garrick," said the good man, "I am sorry to hurt your feelings, but there's your letter. I did not choose to deliver it. I happened to see him when he did not know me, and I saw that he was such a dirty, low lived fellow that I did not like to have anything to do with him."

Intellect and Hair.

"From the color of a man's hair may be learned a good deal in regard to his intellectual ability," says a professor of the University of Lille who has for some months been closely studying the subject. Schoolboys with chestnut hair, he maintains, are likely to be more clever than any other and will generally be found at the head of the class, and in like manner girls with fair hair are likely to be far more studious and bright than girls with dark hair. In mathematics and recitation these boys and girls, he claims, specially excel. On the other hand, he says that boys and girls with brown hair are most likely to attain distinction through their individuality and style and that those with red or auburn hair do not often excel in any respect.

Pecan Hunts In Kentucky.

In the Kentucky bottom lands along the lower Ohio and its tributaries . . . apple orchards and "sugar bush" . . things of tradition, says the Indianapolis News. Their places have been taken by the pecan, which yields a much greater revenue. The pecan orchard is usually distributed throughout one of those immense cornfields of several hundred acres that formed the antebellum plantations. Here they are enriched by constant cultivation as well as by the fertilizer from the overflow of the Ohio that occurs always once and frequently oftener a season. The pecan season opens special festivities. Society in the neighboring towns and cities takes it up most enthusiastically with pecan "tours," picnics, dinners—in truth, all varieties of fetes that such ingenuity can originate. The right to gather the nuts is purchased and a professional climber hired. A woods dinner is the most pleasing feature of the occasion—bacon, chicken, broiled on a spit before a fragrant fire; Irish potatoes and the real, old fashioned red sweets, onions baked in a crater of hot coals, kimmel rye bread, roasted cheese, gingerbread and crabapple cider from the farmhouse.

Three Curious Words.

Filibuster, freebooter and buccaneer are words curiously interrelated. The French and the English sea adventurers once made common cause against Spanish settlements in the new world, and all three of these words came in time to describe the rude sea soldiers who despoiled the Spanish main and the towns upon the coasts of the Spanish possessions. Filibuster is said to be the result of an attempt to make a French word of freebooter, and the English borrowed it back from the French because it sounded less frankly brutal than the English word.

Buccaneer was originally French in form, and it meant at first one who hunted the boucan or wild cattle and hogs of the West Indies; then one who made jerked meat of their flesh, and finally, because this meat was used to provision the ships of the sea rovers, a filibuster or freebooter.

Hunting the Wild Boar.

In Germany the boar hunt occurs annually. Trained hounds are held in leash until the lair of the boars is sniffed, and then they are let go. Off rush the bristling beasts. They run fast, and the faster they skip along the wilder and "madder" they get. Sometimes they are shot, but the correct style of killing is to use a long spear or a short swordlike knife. The hunter spies his boarship speeding along in an almost straight line, blinded with rage and ferocity. Bending over sideways to the earth, the sportsman thrusts his spear dull end downward in the soil and the sharp point slanting upward and turned directly to the boar's path. Straight on the wild hog rushes, and with all the impetus of his long flight he plunges upon the spear point and there, impaled, dies a bloody death.

"Ich Dien" or "Eich Dyn."

"Ich dien," the motto which belongs to the Prince of Wales, is usually translated "I serve," and tradition has it that it was taken by the Black Prince from the royal helmet of the blind king of Bohemia, who was killed on the field of Crecy. It is a notable fact, however, that the late Dr. William Ihne, professor of English literature at Heidelberg, rejected this theory. He held that the motto was of Welsh origin and took its rise at the time when Edward I. presented his newborn eldest son to the Welsh chieftains at Carnarvon castle as their future sovereign. He held the child up in his arms and exclaimed in Welsh, "Eich dyn," meaning "this is your man." The explanation is accepted by many antiquarians.

Hats In London.

No stranger can do business in London without a silk hat. It is the style from Monday to Saturday to wear this kind of head covering, with a frock coat, and on Sunday to appear in a "boulder" (the conventional derby) and a sack. Cutaways are much worn with silk hats, and not infrequently dressy men are seen in the outlandish combination of silk hat and sack.—New York Press.

How Ships Are Named.

French ships are usually named after French provinces or towns, victories, ideas or sentiments, but no French names, excepting those of great men in their history, are made use of. German ships bear the names of German rivers, ports, poets, states and characters in German literature. Spanish ships are almost invariably named after their cities or great commanders.

Parents.

Here is a little gem clipped from a small boy's essay on parents: "Parents are things which boys have to look after them. Most girls also have parents. Parents consist of pas and mas. Pas talk a good deal about what they are going to do, but mostly it's the mas that make you mind."

The Easy Way.

A schoolboy, being asked by his teacher how he should flog him, replied:

"If you please, sir, I should like it upon the Italian system of penmanship—the upward stroke heavy and the down one light."

The Trouble In Arguing.

Nine out of ten persons with whom you argue say, "But you don't understand!" That's what you think about them—they don't understand.—Atchison Globe.

Some claim that coeducation encourages matrimony. Why not? Isn't matrimony coeducation?—Saturday Evening Post.

Vogue.

"I've been thinking of it ever since I started on my present trip," said the drummer thoughtfully, "and I'm banged if I can make up my mind just what she was aiming at. You see, some time ago I realized that, traveling about the country as I am, I was taking a good many chances; so I decided to take out an accident insurance policy.

"'My dear,' said I to my wife after I had acted upon the thought, 'I have done something today that I should have done when I first started on the road. I have taken out an accident insurance policy on my life. If I am killed, the company pays $5,000. If I am injured, then I get $25 a week.'

"'For how long?' she asked.

"'As long as I am laid up.'

"'But it might be only a week.'

"'Yes.'

"'And you would only be entitled to $25?'

"'That is all.'

"'And if you get killed you get $5,000?'

"'You would,' I answered patiently.

"Well, the next morning when I started on my trip she threw her arms around me and cried:

"'Now, John, for heaven's sake whatever you do don't get injured!'"—Detroit Free Press.

An Artist's Training.

Rosa Bonheur used to say that her youth was one of great poverty; then she would add some droll stories about the family method of regulating its finance. The studio was a collection of odds and ends, and M. Bonheur knew how to turn that disorder to account.

When he received money for his work, he would take a handful of coin and throw it at random about the room. Then in times of stress, when there was apparently not a farthing left in the house, the entire family would set to work searching in nooks and corners. Sometimes they would find a five franc piece, and that warded off starvation.

To perfect herself in her study of animals young Rosa spent days in a slaughter house. The men were perplexed at seeing a young woman there and sometimes made it disagreeable for her, but good M. Emile, a butcher of great strength, announced that whosoever annoyed her would have to reckon with him. Then she was able to work undisturbed.

Baccarat.

Baccarat is a very simple game. The dealer and each side of the table have two or three cards. The object is to get as near nine as possible, and tens and court cards do not count. If the two first cards dealt do not together amount to five, the player asks for another. If above five, he does not. The sole question in doubt is whether a player whose two cards together make five ought to draw a third card or not. Because of this doubt it has been ruled by French courts that baccarat is not a game of chance, and yet it is a mathematical certainty that either the chances of bettering the hand are improved by drawing a third card or diminished. Considering, therefore, the large sums that are risked at this game, it is somewhat curious that no one has ever taken the trouble to work out the probabilities.

A Narrow Escape.

An actor named Suett having offended another actor, the aggrieved party was determined on revenge and therefore waited at the theater door to punish him.

The night was extremely wet and dark, and as the actors passed, most of whom were muffled in their cloaks, the enraged man was obliged to inquire of each of them lest he should cudgel the wrong one.

At length Suett arrived.

Rushing in, wrapped in his cloak and drenched with rain, he was addressed with the usual query:

"Are you Suett?"

"No," replied he; "I'm dripping," and so passed safely into the theater.

A Great Wheel.

Laxey, in the Isle of Man, is the headquarters of the lead mines of the island, more than half the ore being obtained there. It is celebrated also for its great wheel, which was erected in 1854. Its diameter is seventy-two feet, and so splendidly is it set that there is no oscillation, and it has been going practically ever since its erection.

Quicker Than Thought.

A little boy, hearing some one remark that nothing was quicker than thought, said he knew better than that; whistling was quicker than thought.

Being asked to explain, he said:

"In school the other day I whistled before I thought and got a licking for it."—Evangelist.

He Could Afford It.

"John," she said, "do you think you can afford a new gown for me?"

He looked at her sharply.

"Have you ordered it?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Then," he said, with a sigh of resignation, "I can afford it."—Chicago Post

Immortality.

Kettle Bridges.

Perhaps the most remarkable bridges in the world are the kettle bridges in Russia and Siberia, of which Cossack soldiers are expert builders. They are built up of the soldiers' lances and cooking kettles. Seven or eight lances are placed under the handles of a number of kettles and fastened by means of ropes to form a raft. A sufficient number of these rafts, each of which will bear the weight of half a ton, are fastened together, and in the space of half an hour a bridge is formed on which an army may cross in confidence and safety.

Mackay's Sarcastic Wit.

Once when the press in the Carson City Appeal had just started to run, John Mackay rushed into the editorial sanctum and called to Sam Davis in an excited tone of voice: "Sam, stop the press! Stop the press!" "What's the matter, John?" Davis asked in alarm "Why, old man Crooks" (famous for his stinginess)—"old man Crooks has just presented a peck of apples to the orphans' home, and he'll be broken hearted if you don't have a column and a half about it in the paper this afternoon!"

Hundreds of Grateful Letters Daily tell how the Free trial of Doan's Kidney Pills brought relief to Invalid-Drifting People.

OAKLAND, CAL.—"I got your trial box of Doan's Kidney Pills and thank you very much for them. I think they are worth their weight in gold. I gave them to my son and they helped him so much that I bought two boxes. They have done him more good than the doctors could do. They said he had Bright's Disease and could not get well. His urine was green and his back nearly killed him. Now he is nearly well. I have five other sons whom I have advised to write you, as I would like to convince them of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills."—Mrs. LEIGETT, 762 East 17th Street, Oakland, Cal.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"I take pleasure in congratulating you on your Doan's Kidney Pills. I received and used the sample and then purchased a box of C. L. Cusack & Co., Ltd. I must say I have been cured of dizziness by them, and have not had the slightest sign of this so-called vertigo since the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I will recommend them to a great many others whom I know suffering from dizziness and kidney complaint. It is true, since using the pills, every one I meet remarks about how well I look. Thanking you for your free trial box."—GEO. JUNNOVILLE, care of Preston & Stauffer, New Orleans, La.

THE THEATER TALKER.

An Intolerable Nuisance Quickly and Quietly Suppressed by a Little Wit.

They had been reading a Rolfe annotated edition of the play, and there was nothing in "Julius Caesar" that they were not perfectly familiar with. Before the performance was half through there was nothing that they knew which everybody within half a dozen rows did not hear about; for among the three of them—a man and two women—there were such capacities for superfluous conversation as are met with nowhere except in a theater, says the New York Mail and Express.

In tones that alternately hissed and brayed and rasped till spinal columns all around them ached they told one another that Antony was much better done than Brutus, that Portia would come on in a minute in the garden scene; that Casca was supposed to be a gruff old Roman; that Caesar actually did have fits—think of it! that it was a pity (this in a whisper that shivered far down the aisle and splintered at least a score of vertebrae) Roman ladies didn't wear corsets. So on, ad nauseam.

At last the ghost and the distraught Brutus met and there was a thrilled sidence in all the crowded house save in row Q, where a strident voice complained:

"I can't hear a word the ghost says. Why doesn't he speak louder?"

A man behind the querulous disturber, quite beside himself with rage, leaned forward and said in tones as courteously sweet as the sting of a honey bee:

"Perhaps the ghost is a gentleman, and does not like to annoy people."

Which, of course, was very rude, though it did fill many hearts with an unholy joy.

Insurance Has Its Humor.

An enterprising insurance agent induced an Irishman to take out an accident policy for his wife. A few days later, while conversing with a friend in his office, he was startled to see the Irishman rush in, brandishing fiercely a stout cane.

"Ye rascal!" he yelled, springing toward the agent, "ye wanter cheat me?"

Fortunately the enraged man was disarmed and held fast by the agent's friend, who was a powerfully built man. The Irishman, struggling to get free, shouted:

"Let me git at the spalpeen. Think ov it, chargin' me foive dollars fer an accident ticket fer me ole woman, an' she jest broke her leg a-fallin' down stairs. Wot's the good of the ticket, anyhow?" —N. Y. Times.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Saved by Nerve.

Pinned by his foot under the wreckage of his dismantled engine, near Dayton's bluff, St. Paul, with escaping steam scalding his flesh and slowly torturing him to death, Engineer C. J. Wood, of the Burlington road, searched his pockets for his knife and deliberately amputated his left foot at the ankle.

Crawling away from the fury of roaring steam he sat shivering in the raw air staunching the flow of blood with a neckerchief until the crew of a wrecked switch engine with which an incoming freight train collided, and several switchmen and brakemen hurried to the scene and, placing him upon another engine, took him to the St. Paul union depot whence he was removed to St. Joseph's hospital.

The wreck occurred at 2:50 in the morning and was charged to the dense fog. The freight train of which Wood was engineer, was approaching the city. Fog, gray and heavy deadened the switch lamps into faint glimmers and baffled the rays of the headlight. The rails glistened dimly with clinging moisture and the long train was sheathed with vapor.

Bold Bandits.

Within a stone's throw of police headquarters, Minneapolis, two desperadoes entered a saloon, and, at the point of a revolver, commanded James Vasey, the proprietor of the place, to throw up his hands.

Vasey did as he was commanded. One of the robbers covered him with his revolver while his accomplice jumped behind the bar and rifled the cash drawer of its contents.

Simultaneously, Detectives Crummey and Brown pushed into the saloon through a rear door and, with drawn revolvers, halted the two robbers and commanded them to drop their weapons. One of the desperadoes, Wm. English, who had been covering Vasey with his gun while his associate was gathering up the cash, wheeled around and pointed his revolver directly at Detective Crummey.

One of the robbers was caught but the other escaped.

A Gambling Raid.

The city council and police force made a raid on the Northwest Hotel at Tracy and bagged an elaborate gamblers' outfit. The floor of the room in which the paraphernalia was found was thickly covered with heavy quilts and blankets, to prevent any noise from reaching adjoining rooms. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of the gamblers. A confederate gave them the tip before the papers could be served and they immediately left for parts unknown. One of the saloonkeepers is under surveillance for running a gambling-room. If the case can be proven his license wil be demanded immediately. Mayor Burlingame and the council are determined to rid the town of the gambling fraternity.

A Bad Fire.

An early morning fire, wiped out the Opera House block at Elk River, the biggest building in the town, caused a loss of $54,000, partially covered by insurance of $36,800.

The flames were discovered at 3 oclock in the morning in the basement of the hardware store of the Roberts Mercantile Company and rapidly spread through the block.

The volunteer fire department was inadequate to the emergency, as modern apparatus was lacking, but the citizens worked like Trojans to stay the flames, and by the time apparatus arrived from Minneapolis the fire was practically out.

Heavy Feeding.

Railway live stock agents state that there are at the present time between 80,000 and 100,000 sheep being fed at the local and South St. Paul stockyards. The shipment of the sheep to Chicago and eastern markets will soon begin and will continue until the local yards are depleted.

The movement of the animals from the western ranges has been heavy this year. It is ended, as is all live stock movement from that territory. The cattle shipments ended some time ago. Railway live stock men profess to be well pleased with the proportions of the live stock movement this year.

Prize Banners.

W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, now has three attractive banners, each awarded to Minnesota in recognition of the superiority of North Star butter. The third banner was won last October at Milwaukee at the annual convention of the National Creamery Buttermakers' association. Buttermakers from this state obtained the banner for the "highest average score."

Mr. McConnell will have ornamental cabinets made in which his trophies may be suitably displayed at the new state capitol.

News Notes.

Peter Grytdahl, aged 75 years, died at the hospital in Duluth as the result of freezing his legs on Christmas night.

The regents of the university at a meeting elected Dean W. M. Liggett purchasing agent for the department of agriculture.

A movement is on foot to organize a lodge of Elks at Red Wing. There are about a dozen Elks in Red Wing, all belonging to the Mankato lodge, and these will form the nucleus for an independent organization.

The new pipe organ for the People's church, St. Paul, arrived. It will require a month to put it in place. It is said to be the finest in the northwest.

The state health board sent a representative to Alexandria and Evansville to investigate the reported cases of unquarantined smallpox.

The total receipts of the Duluth United States land office for the last quarter amounted to $117,909.20.

HEALTHY WOMEN

Praise Pe-ru-na as a Cure for Colds and a Preventive of Catarrh.

MISS ELIZABETH UBER — MISS SYBYL A. HADLEY

MRS. M. J. BRINK

MISS SARA McGAHAN.

FIRST STAGE OF CATARRH

A Serious Mistake Which Thousands Are Making.

The first stage of catarrh is what is commonly known as "catching cold." It may be in the head, nose, throat or lungs. Its beginning is sometimes so severe as to cause a chill and considerable fever, or it may be so slight as to not hinder a person from his usual business. In perhaps a majority of cases little or no attention is paid to the first stage of catarrh, and hence it is that nearly one-half of the people have chronic catarrh in some form.

To neglect a cold is to invite chronic catarrh. As soon as any one discovers the first symptoms of catching cold he should at once begin the use of Peruna according to directions on the bottle, and the cold is sure to pass away without leaving any bad effects.

Unless this is done the cold is almost sure to end in the second stage of catarrh, which is making so many lives miserable. If Peruna was taken every time one has a cold or cough, chronic catarrh would be practically an unknown disease.

Miss Elizabeth Uber, No. 57 Bassett street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"I have always dreaded unsettled weather because of my extreme liability to catch cold, when a catarrhal trouble would quickly develop through my entire system, which it would take weeks to drive away. I am thankful to say that since I have taken PERUNA I do not have any reason to dread this anymore. If I have been at all exposed to the damp, wet or cold weather, I take a dose or two of PERUNA, and it throws out any hint of sickness from my system."—Miss Elizabeth Uber.

Mrs. M. J. Brink, No. 820 Michigan avenue, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"This past winter during the wet and cold weather I caught a sudden and severe cold, which developed a catarrhal condition through my entire system, and so affected my general health that I was completely broken down, and became nervous and hysterical and unfit to supervise my home. My physician prescribed for me, but somehow his medicine did me no good. Reading of PERUNA I decided to try it. After I had taken but three bottles I found myself in fine health."—Mrs. M. J. Brink.

Sibyl A. Hadley, 26 Main street, Huntington, Ind., writes: "Last winter after getting my feet wet I began to cough, which gradually grew worse until my throat was sore and raw. Ordinary remedies did not help me and cough remedies nauseated me. Reading an advertisement of what PERUNA could do, I decided to try a bottle, and you can imagine how glad I felt when it began to relieve me in a very short time. In less than two weeks I was completely cured."—Sibyl A. Hadley.

Miss Sarah McGahan, No. 197 3d street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"A few months ago I suffered with a severe attack of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve. My hearing became bad, my eyes became irritated and feverish. Nothing seemed right and nothing I ate tasted good. I took PERUNA and within two weeks I was perfectly well."—Sarah McGahan.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

SHE WAS AHEAD.

When It Came to Ornamental Letters on Packages Her Father Had Theirs Beaten.

An uptown reader tells of the "break" made by a little tot of the family who was one of a party of little girls at a recent strawberry festival in the vicinity of her home. She had been valiantly boasting of the manifold advantages of belonging to her family, and had managed to hold her own against the vainglorious and ingenuous discourses of her companions, relates the Philadelphia Times. They had gone from clothes to personal appearances, then to interior furnishings, then to the number of tons of coal consumed in the home of each during the last winter, and finally brought up at parental dignity. The minister little girl boasted:

"Every package that comes for my papa is marked 'D. D.!'"

"An' every package that comes for my papa is marked 'M. D.!'" retorted the daughter of a physician of the neighborhood.

Then came a fine snort of contempt from the heroine of this anecdote. "Huh!" she exclaimed. "Every package that comes to our house is marked 'C. O. D.!' There now!"

A Popular Calendar.

The popular calendar issued every year by the North-Western Line (Omaha Road) is now ready for distribution. This is without doubt the most useful calendar issued, and will be found in more business houses and homes than any other. It is distinctively a calendar for the "busy business man." It is ten by fourteen inches in size, has a nice silk cord for hanging and runs a week to the page. The figures are two inches in height and may be easily seen the length of a large room. Copies of this very useful calendar will be sent postpaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage and wrapping, by T. W. Teasdale, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Unnecessary.

Constipation Will Undermine Your Health.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

When the sewer of a city becomes stopped up, the refuse backs into the streets where it decays and rots, spreading disease-creating germs throughout the entire city. An epidemic of sickness follows. It is the same way when the bowels fail to work. The undigested food backs into the system and there it rots and decays. From this festering mass the blood saps up all the disease germs, and at every heart beat carries them to every tissue, just as the water works of a city forces impure water into every house. The only way to cure a condition like this is to cure the constipation. Pills and the ordinary cathartics will do no good.

MULL'S GRAPE TONIC

is a crushed fruit tonic-laxative

which permanently cures the affliction. The tonic properties contained in the grape go into every afflicted tissue and creates strength and health. It will quickly restore lost flesh and make rich, red blood. As a laxative its action is immediate and positive, gentle and natural. Mull's Grape Tonic is guaranteed or money back.

USES STRONG WORDS.

Senator Tillman Speaks on Coal Situation and Denounces Attorney General Knox.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The senate Thursday passed the resolution introduced by Senator Hoar Wednesday, calling upon the president to inform the senate what government is now existing in the island of Guam, and asking why Mabini is detained in that island.

The Vest resolution regarding the removal of the duty on coal was taken up and Senator Tillman resumed his remarks. He declared that the railroads are absolutely in the saddle on the coal question. They mine and market coal and fix the price, he charged, without regard to a solitary independent operator. He said it was an infamy the way the press of the country was prostituted and lending itself to befuddle the minds of the people, and deceive them into the idea that the railroads are willing and anxious to relieve the distress occasioned by the coal famine, but that somebody, somewhere, called an independent operator, is responsible for the present condition of affairs.

The president deserves no credit, said he, except for his attempt to effect a settlement of the question, "but the actual fact is," he added, "that J. Pierpont Morgan gave orders to his coconspirators or servants to attempt the arrangement between the monopoly and strikers." The attorney general had been, he said, derelict and criminal, and he is the man to whom the people can point and say: "You have murdered all those who have frozen to death. You are the man who deserves the opprobrium and hate of the poor and oppressed of this land." In the course of his remarks Mr. Tillman stated, after being closely questioned by Mr. Spooner, that W. R. Hearst had charged that the United States district attorney of New York had received orders from the attorney general not to submit his report of his investigation regarding trusts.

COASTERS ARE KILLED.

Bobsled and Express Train Meet at a Crossing—Five Boys Lose Their Lives.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 16.—Five boys, whose ages range from 13 to 15 years, while coasting Thursday night, were struck by a train on the Philadelphia and Reading railway and instantly killed and another was fatally injured. The dead are: Denis McGinley, John Coyle, Owen Cahill, Patrick Cahill and an unknown boy, who was mangled beyond recognition. John Heubner, the sixth victim, is said to be at the point of death. The boys were coasting on a bob-sled. The railway crosses the street at the bottom of the hill, and the sled and express train reached the crossing simultaneously. The engineer was not aware of the tragedy until he reached the station, a mile distant from the scene of the accident, when the blood and bones on the pilot of the engine gave him the first intimation of the occurrence.

Manila, Jan. 17.—At the continuation Friday of the trial of Maj. Edwin F. Glenn of the Fifth infantry, who is charged with unlawfully killing seven prisoners of war in Samar, a Spaniard who was at one time held prisoner by the insurgents testified that while he was confined at the headquarters of Gen. Lukban, in Samar, in May of 1900, he saw an American prisoner roasted to death. The Spaniard said sticks were driven into the man's body and he was slowly burned over the fire until dead. The body was then left to be devoured by hogs. He did not know the man's name but thought he was an officer. Several American officers and men were captured or reported missing in Samar in 1900 and the victim is believed to have been one of these.

Says Treaty Will Be Ratified.

Washington, Jan. 16. — President Roosevelt was assured Friday by Senators Aldrich, Lodge and Spooner of their belief that the Cuban reciprocity treaty would be ratified by the senate. The three senators had a conference with the president prior to the cabinet meeting and went over the situation with him carefully. It was stated that the treaty as amended by the foreign relations committee was practically satisfactory to every republican senator and that the opposition now was confined to the democratic side.

In the senate bills were introduced to pension police officers in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants; to do away with all forms of bucket-shop dealings; to repeal the corrupt practices act of 1895, requiring all elective officers to file a statement of expenses and disbursements.

St. Paul, Jan. 15.—Business in both branches of the legislature was yesterday confined to the introduction of bills, some of them of an important nature, and others purely local in character.

The only incident of note in the house was Representative Burns' second installment of advice to "new members," which was brought on by an attempt to secure the passage of a local bill under a suspension of the rules.

The report of the statute revision committee was received in both houses. The house appointed a special committee to consider it, but the senate laid it over for debate.

The senate will investigate the freight rates on lignite from North Dakota, as there is a large shipment of fuel expected from that state.

The only bills of importance introduced in the house were Stevenson's tax amendment bill, identical with that introduced by Senator Wilson, and the Smith bill, relating to the Hennepin county sheriff's office.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—Senate Files 27 and 28 (Calhoun) were the only bills that aroused any interest in the senate. They were for the benefit of Hennepin county, providing for $500,000 in bonds, $150,000 of which is for the permanent improvement fund, and $350,000 for the permanent improvement revolving fund. This is for the benefit of street improvements in Minneapolis. Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis delegations.

A bill by Senator Ferris proposes the establishment of a state sanitarium for consumptives near Walker at a cost of $150,000. A maintenance fund of $50,000 is asked. Under the terms of the bill the institution is to be under the control of the Board of Control.

The following bills were introduced in the house

By Perley—Costs in justice courts. Judiciary.

By Shearer—Authorizing cities of more than 50,000 to issue bonds for permanent improvements. Hennepin delegation.

By Shearer—Authorizing cities of 50,000 to create revolving fund for permanent improvements. Municipal legislation.

By Johnson—Regulating automobiles on public highways. Roads and bridges.

By Armstrong—Legalizing certain sheriff's certificates. Judiciary.

By Bennett—Incorporation of villages. Municipal legislation.

By Rosenwald—Giving farm laborers a lien on farm products for labor. Judiciary.

St. Paul, Jan. 17.—The senate session yesterday limited fourteen minutes and then adjournment was taken until Tuesday.

Senator Barker introduced a bill under the provision of which, if it passes, it will be the duty of the surveyor-general's department to scale all wood, edgings and slabs that come into the Twin Cities.

Senator Johnson introduced a bill appropriating $6,000 for the relief of Beda Wingstrand, who was severely injured in the laundry of the hospital for the insane at St. Peter.

A bill by Senator Laugen is to cede Barren Island in the Mississippi river to Wisconsin, giving La Crosse police jurisdiction over the park. Judiciary committee.

The senate committee on municipal corporations has recommended for passage Senator Ricke's bill legalizing acts of village officers, enacted in good faith.

Two bills of especial importance which have engaged the attention of legislatures and which have been anticipated for some time made their appearance in the house yesterday.

Mr. Johnson introduced the expected gross earnings bill, increasing the rate of taxation on railways in the state from 3 to 4 per cent of the gross earnings.

Mr. Morley introduced a bill amending the board of control bill passed two years ago in such manner as to remove from the control of the board most of the educational institutions of the state.

The gross earnings bill introduced by Mr. Johnson is practically the same as that which appeared two years ago, except that it has been so drawn as to remove the objections offered by certain of its opponents.

THAT POLITE CONDUCTOR.

He Was Very Accommodating—Too Much So, the Passenger Afterwards Thought.

When it was all over the man in the light overcoat said he believed the conductor put the nickel there himself, just as a trap, but of course he didn't. He merely happened to see it lying on the floor as he passed through the car, and he picked it up and asked the man in the light overcoat if it belonged to him, relates the New York Press.

The man wasn't sure. "Perhaps I did drop it when you gave me change," he said. "Hold on a minute and I'll find out."

He clutched a strap with his left hand and dug his right hand down into his capacious overcoat pocket, whence he presently withdrew it bloated with small coin. The counting of all the nickels and dimes thus fished up was a bigger job than the man had expected, and before it was finished the car gave a tremendous lurch forward, and the whole handful of change was scattered into the laps of near-by passengers, from which halfway point it rolled on the floor and proceeded to hide itself in inaccessible chinks and crannies.

The conductor was very accommodating in the emergency.

"We'll find it when we get to the barns if we have to take the whole floor up," he said. "Just give me your name and address, please, and I'll send it to you; or, if you like, you may call for it at the office."

But the man in the overcoat curtly deprecated this proposed excessive activity. "Oh, never mind," he snapped. "I guess I can stand the loss. Whatever money you find is yours. I want to get out at the next corner."

The conductor said "Thank you" with extraordinary gentleness and rang the bell half a minute ahead of time. When the man reached the sidewalk he kicked the curb viciously.

"How much did you lose?" asked the woman who had been waiting for the storm to break.

"About a dollar, I guess," said the man. "Gee, but that fellow made a good haul. I'll bet anything he put that nickel there on purpose to make me spill all that change."

The woman argued the point. "How could he?" she said. "How did he know you had a pocketful of chicken feed?"

"Humph!" said the man. "You're dead easy, you are, but he can't fool me. I'll bet five dollars he put it there on purpose."

ONE-SIDED WOMEN.

The Result of Standing Habit Throws the Whole Figure Out of Line.

Very few women walk well and probably fewer still stand properly. They contract mistaken habits of standing, in early youth and by the time maturity is reached the figure has grown irrevocably into one or more slight deformities. The majority of women have one hip more prominent than the other because through their formative years they fell thoughtlessly into the habit of standing with all the weight on one leg and the other side thrown out. How often we see girls standing this way, yet most of them would break the habit if it was kindly explained to them that it would make them grow "one-sided," says American Queen.

Another equally common bad habit is that of standing with the shoulders bent back from the waist and the abdomen, therefore, perhaps unconsciously, thrust forward. This is generally done with the virtuous feeling that they are standing "straight," when, as a matter of fact, they are not straight at all, and are simply cultivating a distressingly prominent abdomen for middle life.

The proper way of standing is easily learned, soon becomes habitual, and one does not so quickly become fatigued after assuming it as when improper attitudes are taken.

Stand with equal weight upon the soles of each foot, the stomach held in, the chest expanded and thrust slightly forward, the head erect, and the arms either hanging naturally at the sides or engaged with some necessary occupation. Stand this way in church, in school at your work—whenever you stand; it will soon become natural and your form will grow straight and symmetrical.

Scrambled Pork.

Freshen nice salt pork, cut it in small mouthfuls and partly fry it. Just before it is done, break six eggs into a dish, stir a little, and then mix quickly with the pork. If there is too much fat for the eggs it should be turned off before eggs are put in.—Boston Globe.

John Was Humble.

He was a noble lord, and he was in an awful rage with one of his footmen.

"It is intolerable!" he exclaimed. "Are you a fool or am I?"

"Oh! my lord," replied James, with humility, anxious to appease the great man. "I am sure you wouldn't keep a servant who was a fool."—Tit-Bits.

With Senator Stephens chairman of the senate committee on drainage, and representative Krostue chairman of the house committee on drainage,the Red River valley is likely to see some more state ditches dug in tbe near future,and they are needed.
—Crookston Journal.

Yes they are needed and our Senator Stephens will try to get them,as he does not take the word of any-one for the benefit of the Lost river state ditch, as he made a personal visit to it last fall in company with Gov. Van-Sant, and while he did not go quite as "deep"into the mystery of the loss of the river as the Gov.he went far enough to see the benefit it was to the farmers by haveing the aid of the state to dig the needed ditch.

We do not understand what created the impression among the officials of the N. P. Railway,that the present legislature is composed of cheaper men than that of two years ago.

At the last session they issued annul passes over all their lines to the law makers,but this year they bave cut them down to three months with the promise, that if they are good and vote for ALL the railway measures that come up they may extend the pass to the end of the year.

If you want to win the tender and equally rare affections of an editor,just drop into the office occaionally and visit with his employes during working hours,talk incessently,whistle for a change, lean on the stone,finger the type, monkey with the presses,occupy the private office and make yourself generally obnoxiqus to a busy man who is endeavoring to dig from a shattered intellect food for thought for a lot of people, who are waiting an opportunity to cuss him.

Sunday in the Olden Time.

The mother in her best black gown and with her foot stove, if the weather was cold; the father, freshly shaved in his high black stock and equally uncomfortable tall black hat, and such of the sisters as were at home filled the two broad seats of our wagon, with perhaps one of us youngsters wedged in, though we preferred to walk in good weather. Then the vehicle moved out of the front gate and joined the procession of carriages going in the same direction, impelled by the same pious duty. With the foot stove or without it went luncheons for the noonday hour, for the religious exercises were an all day affair, with forenoon and afternoon services, and the Bible class and Sunday school in the interval which the minister took for rest between his sermons. It was not supposed that his hearers needed rest. There were sheds for the vehicles, and the man who was kind to his beasts usually put into his wagon with the family sandwiches a small bag of grain for his team. The services began at half past 10 and were over at half past 3 unless the afternoon sermon was "lengthy," as it was very apt to be.—I. T. Trowbridge in Atlantic.

Transportation Facilities.

Moritz Gottlieb Saphir, a journalist and one of the wittiest men of the Jewish race in Germany, once criticised King Ludwig's verses so sharply that he was ordered, says Household Words, to quit Munich within twenty-four hours.

The court chamberlain waited upon the journalist with the king's command and, having delivered it, considerately asked:

"Do you think that you can get away in that time?"

"Yes, I think so," Saphir said, "but if my own legs can't take me quick enough I'll borrow some of the superfluous feet in his majesty's last volume of verse."

The Japanese Stable.

We can learn from the Japanese a thing or two about stabling horses. In Japan horses are backed into their stalls; then a door is closed at the head, which has a grain and hayrack conveniently constructed, to which the nag is secured. When needed, the door is swung back and the horse led forth. No one gets kicked, no refuse matter is visible to the visitor, and it seems to be a sensible way to construct a place for any horse.

He Demanded Protection.

Senator Van Wyck of Nebraska in speaking had a peculiar style of delivery, and as he warmed to his subject it was his habit to move restlessly from one side of the chamber to the other, continually talking. He talked so fast that he often "spluttered," and senators were careful to keep out of range of the moisture he hissed through his closely set teeth.

Mr. Ingalls and Mr. Spooner once sat directly in front of "Mr. Punch," as Senator Van Wyck was often called because of his resemblance to that noted character, when he was delivering an impassioned utterance, and an atom of spray rested upon the hand of the immaculate Ingalls.

He adjusted his spectacles, carefully inspected his soiled hand and deliberately signaled for one of the pages to come to him. Then in one of his famous whispers, which penetrated the entire chamber, Ingalls said:

"Boy, bring an umbrella for Senator Spooner and a rubber overcoat for me."

The incident provoked general laughter, but it did not interfere with Van Wyck's speech. He simply shifted his position so as to get beyond range of his always faultlessly dressed and sarcastic colleague.—Washington Post.

Terne.

It is truly surprising what erroneous ideas are entertained by the general public concerning the true meaning of many terms in general use. A striking example of this is the word "terne" as applied to tin plate. Usually it is understood that this word is derived from the French one, meaning "dull." This is totally incorrect. Terne plate is a sheet or plate of iron and steel covered with an alloy of tin and lead in the proportion of two-thirds lead and one-third tin. It is this union of the three metals—iron, lead and tin—that gave rise to the word terne plate, terne being an equivalent to the English terne, meaning "threefold." The origin of the erroneous definition of this term was the fact that because of the large percentage of lead used in coating terne plates it is duller in hue than the ordinary tin plate, which is frequently designated "bright plate" in contradistinction to the former.

The Racing Camel.

The ordinary camel, which will never hurry under any circumstances, has been transformed in southern Algeria into an animal so different in size, temper and appearance that it may almost be looked upon as a different race. This is the racing camel, prized for its speed. The result of many generations of careful breeding, which has been encouraged by valuable prizes, it can be depended upon for nine or ten miles an hour, which it will keep up for sixteen or seventeen hours almost without a stop. Its value is five or ten times that of the beast of burden. The camel races are popular sport and are made exciting by the evident interest of the creatures themselves in winning.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fix a day for yer dying and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

The Loss of a Horseshoe.

The loss of a horseshoe exerted a tremendous influence in the history and reign of Henry VIII. of England. After the fall of Anne Boleyn the papacy prepared overtures of reconciliation so favorable to the king that he concluded to accept them. A representativa was sent from Rome with the dispatchea, and when only a day's journey from Calais the horse cast a shoe and fell lame. As the horse was a favorite animal, the messenger determined to wait for a day rather than take the chances of losing the horse. The next day the journey waa resumed and London was reached, to find that Henry that day had been married to Jane Seymour, a Protestant, that Anne had been beheaded the day before, and all hope of a reconciliation was lost. The messenger was a day too late, and the horseshoe had changed the bent of the nation's history.

Weeping Trees.

In the forests of Oregon, Washington, Montana and British Columbia there is a species of tree that has a continuous and copious dripping of pure, clear water from the ends of its leaves and branches. This extraordinary sight may be witnessed at all seasons when the leaves are on and seems equally plentiful on clear, bright days as on damp, cloudy nights. The tree is a species of fir, and the "weeping" phenomenon is attributed to a remarkable power of condensation peculiar to the leavea and bark of this species of evergreen.

In the island of Ferro there are many species of "weeping trees," but in this latter case the "tears" appear to be most abundant when the relative humidity is [illegible]

Suspending Judgment.

A keen critic once said to a young woman about to begin the study of painting: "When you look at a picture, do not say at first, even to yourself, 'I like it,' or 'I don't like it.' Try to see what there is in it."

The advice was sound, and it need not be stretched thin to cover a much larger region of life than that which belongs to art. The quick, instinctive like or dislike which many a woman conceives in the first hour of her acquaintance with a person may be well founded or it may be ill founded. If it justifies itself, she remembers it and prides herself on her knowledge of human nature; if it proves false, she forgets all about it and in a year would deny that she had ever disliked the person, or at best she would defend her mistake by quoting, "'Tis safest * * * to begin with a little aversion."

In point of fact, the power of suspending judgment on book, picture, man, woman or plan is the mark of a well trained mind. The judgments worth anything are based on something stronger than "a woman's reason — I think him so because I think him so."—Youth's Companion.

Lincoln Saw a Way.

A young sergeant distinguished himself by his gallantry at Donelson and was recommended for promotion. He was summoned to appear before a military board at Washington and closely questioned by West Point graduates. None of his answers was satisfactory. When the report reached President Lincoln, he fidgeted for a moment, laid the paper on his desk, then, taking one gaunt knee in his hands, said: "I don't know what to do with this case. Here's a young fellow who knows nothing of the science of losing battles. He doesn't even know the technical name of the fortification on which he ran up the stars and stripes in the face of the enemy." He thought a moment, then indorsed the report:

Give this man a captain's certificate.
A. LINCOLN.

The Coronation Is an Old Flower.

Pliny refers to the carnation as having been used in the days of Augustus Cæsar to give a spicy flavor to wine. While greatly loved and admired by the ancients, its improvement was not much advanced until it found a home in England. The date of this event is not quite clear, but is believed to be about the year 1200. Chaucer wrote of its cultivation in 1386, from which date it has been considered a florist's flower. It was first called carnation by Henry Lyte in 1578 and designated as a pink in 1600. Edmund Spenser called it "coronation," which found little favor. Shakespeare in "A Winter's Tale," act 4, says, "The fairest flowers o' the season are our carnations." He also alludes to it in "Henry V."

Great Dog, Great Chicken.

"Talking of dogs," said the colonel, "a friend of mine has a Gordon setter. She's the most sympathetic dog I ever heard of. She has the maternal instinct so strong that she has brought up a litter not her own."

"I've known of such cases," said a hearer.

"There was a hen had a chicken. The hen died, and the chicken was in sore distress. This dog took pity on it and brought up the chicken."

"Yes," said another listener, "that's curious, but it is not uncommon."

"And now," continued the colonel solemnly, "that chicken barks."

A Little Uncomfortable.

A story which will go straight to the hearts of shooting men is told of a clerical gentleman who was invited to join a shooting party. In the course of the day the host felt himself prodded in the back and, turning around, found the amiable cleric poking at him with the muzzle of his gun, and his look of interrogation was met with the remark, "Can you tell me how to let down these beastly things?" alluding to the hammers of the gun, which was at full cock and loaded.—London Standard.

His Idea of the Matter.

"Do you think you ought to demand so much money for campaign purposes?" said the man who resents modern election methods.

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum thoughtfully, "if I were rich enough to put up a campaign fund all by myself I don't know that I would be in politics at all."—Washington Star.

Divided Booty.

"Johnny," said his mother severely, "some one has taken a big piece of gingercake out of the pantry."

Johnny blushed guiltily.

"Oh, Johnny!" she exclaimed. "I didn't think it was in you!"

"It ain't all," replied Johnny. "Part of it's in Elsie."—Philadelphia Press.

Texts On Tiles.

"Now, here is something you'll like," said the manager of the works as he was showing some ladies the process of manufacture; "texts of Scripture on tiles for fireplace ornamentation."

"Oh," replied Mrs. Fangle, "I've often heard of textile manufactures, but I never saw them before."

On the Scrub Team.

"Yes, sah, when Ah was at Yale Ah was on the scrub team, sah!"

"What! Did you play football?"

"No, sah; Ah was connected with the Commons laundry, sah!"—Yale Record.

Taking It Literally.

"I see that New York spends $200,000,000 a year for the meat she eats."

"Seems tough, doesn't it?"

"Yes, most of it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Our first regular factory for manufacturing glass was established at Temple, N. H., in 1780 and was operated by imported German glassmakers.

The Fire God's Wrath.

A curious story comes to us from the suburbs. A resident in the near neighborhood of London has a museum in his house in which the principal curiosity is a fire god which has been worshiped for many centuries in an Indian temple. Once when the owner of the house took a party of people to look at the museum he proposed in fun that they should all kotow to the image. This they all laughingly consented to do, all except two ladies, who declared it was wicked. The fire god was revenged within two months. One of the ladies had her house burned to the ground the week after, and the other one on a later date fell backward into the fire and sustained some terrible burns. We give the tale without comment.—London Chronicle.

Both Were Shocked.

Little Elsie was a faithful attendant at Sunday school and had listened earnestly when plans for a coming Christian Endeavor convention were discussed, her interest increasing to enthusiasm over the mysterious affair when she learned that her auntie was to attend as a delegate.

Coming into the library one day, auntie saw the little maid busily engaged in writing a letter to a cousin with whom she kept up a juvenile correspondence. She scrawled industriously for a moment; then stopped. There was a puzzled expression on her fat, ink stained face as she dangled her short legs and wriggled uncomfortably on her high perch.

"Auntie," she said, "how do you spell 'devil?'"

"Oh, Elsie," said her auntie, "I am shocked! Why are you using such a word as that in your letter? Nice little girls never say such things."

It was Elsie's turn to be shocked.

"Why, auntie," she cried, "I'm only telling her about the Christian and devil convention!"—Harper's Magazine.

Hard to Believe.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Bliggins.

"What's the matter?" asked her husband in a startled tone as he turned around from his shaving glass.

"The idea of a grown man like you standing there for five minutes at a time admiring yourself!"

"I'm not admiring myself. My feelings are those of astonishment, not admiration. I can't realize that I'm the same person who years ago was called 'precious pet' and held on people's knees and kissed by the neighbors. It's an awful thought."—Washington Star.

Only In the Pail.

An Irish soldier was crossing a barrack square with a pail in which he was going to get some water.

A sergeant, passing at the time, noticed that Pat had a very disreputable looking pair of trousers on and, wishing to make a report, stopped the man and asked:

"Where are you going?"

"To get some water."

"What! In those trousers?"

"No, sergeant; in the pail!"

Mean Advantage.

On attempting to question a loquacious patient one day the late Dr. Sands was irritated beyond all endurance. After vainly endeavoring to stem the torrent of gabble, he said sternly:

"Madam, let me see your tongue. That's good. Now keep it there while you hear what I have to say to you."

No Annihilation.

Though man can gather and scatter, move, mix and unmix, yet he can destroy nothing. The putrefaction of one thing is a preparation for the being and bloom of another. Thus a tree gathers nourishment from its own fallen leaves when they are decayed, and something gathers up the fragments that nothing is lost.

A Color Clash.

"Madam," said the maid, "the dyer has brought your silk dress back and says it is impossible to dye it to match your hair, as you requested."

"Well," said the lady, "ask him what he would charge to dye my hair to match the silk. The colors clash as they are now."

Paper of the Ancients.

The interior bark of trees was formerly used to write upon, and its Latin name (liber, a bark) seems to intimate that its use was as ancient as the art of writing itself. In one respect the bark was superior to the leaf. It could be rolled into a volume, while the leaf would crack if subjected to such a process.

The Unbridged Channel.

The teacher asked the boy in the geography class whose French grammar is the one bane of his life:

"What separates France from England?"

"The irregular verbs," answered the boy earnestly.

Dry.

To have a perfect stomach a man or a woman must dine well and breakfast and sup simply.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Poe's Placid Eyes.

Poe's neck was rather long and slender and made him appear, when sitting, rather taller than he really was. He also appeared when sitting to have a gentle and rather graceful taper of the bust and shoulders upward. This was very peculiar. His eyes were of a neutral violet tint, rather inclining to hazel, and shone not with a dazzling or brilliant sparkle, but rather with a mildly subdued serenity of intellectual splendor—perhaps on account of the dark shadow cast upon them by the overhanging and rather impressive cloud of his moonlike brow—giving them that soft, celestial glow of soul which characterizes the loftiest enthusiasm. Their lashes were long, dark and silken, hanging over them like willows naping [?] by the moon—lake—or cumuli of chaos over the God suffused waters of the eternal wells. When the heaven of his brow was free from clouds—which appeared always to be the case when his soul was not racked either by the thoughts of his poverty, of the remembrance of the manifold insults he had received from anonymous correspondents, who pestered him from envy of his genius and his uncompromising hostility to the basest ignorance—the intellectual placidity of his mildly becoming eyes was beautiful.—Poe-Chiver Papers in Century.

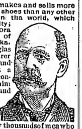
Mrs. F. Wright, of Oelwein, Iowa, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Young New York Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"My trouble was with the ovaries; I am tall, and the doctor said I grew too fast for my strength. I suffered dreadfully from inflammation and doctored continually, but got no help. I suffered from terrible dragging sensations with the most awful pains low down in the side and pains in the back, and the most agonizing headaches. No one knows what I endured. Often I was sick to the stomach, and every little while I would be too sick to go to work, for three or four days; I work in a large store, and I suppose standing on my feet all day made me worse.

"At the suggestion of a friend of my mother's I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is simply wonderful. I felt better after the first two or three doses; it seemed as though a weight was taken off my shoulders; I continued its use until now I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. Young girls who are always paying doctor's bills without getting any help as I did, ought to take your medicine. It costs so much less, and it is sure to cure them.—Yours truly, ADELAIDE PRAHL, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City."—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

$3.00 W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES $3.50
UNION MADE



W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 and $3.00 shoes than any other two manufacturers in the world, which proves their superiority; they are worn by more people in all stations of life than any other make.

Because W. L. Douglas is the largest manufacturer he can buy cheaper and produce his shoes at a lower cost than other concerns, which enables him to sell shoes for $3.50 and $3.00 equal in every way to those sold elsewhere for $4 and $5.00.

W. L. Douglas $3.50 and $3 shoes are worn by thousands of men who have been paying $4 and $5, not believing they could get a first-class shoe for $3.50 or $3.00.

He has convinced them that the style, fit, and wear of his $3.50 and $3.00 shoes is just as good. Placed side by side it is impossible to see any difference. A trial will convince.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Leprosy Hospital.

The government commission appointed to investigate the extent of leprosy existing in the United States has submitted a report to congress which may result in the establishment of a leprosy colony in Minnesota.

This state in particular may be selected for the reason that it has more lepers than any other northern state in proportion to population. It is said that there are now fifteen lepers in the state, who are permitted to live with their families and are under the observation of the state board of health only.

The commission is of the opinion that two leprosy institutions ought to be established in this country, one for northern patients and one for the southern. This is recommended because it would not be practicable to transfer lepers from one extreme climate to the other with any promise of long continuing the life of the patient.

Dr. H. M. Bracken of the state board of health is in accord with this idea and says an institution as a permanent colony for lepers would not be anything to cause an alarm.

With proper management such a place would be no menace to the health of the state or even to the locality. The system would be a great improvement over the present method of keeping the disease under control.

A farm of 500 or 600 acres would be sufficient for the proper care of all lepers in the northern tier of states, but nothing definite has been done to decide that Minnesota is to be the place.

Cattle for State Fair.

Secretary Randall of the Minnesota state fair has returned from Chicago, where he met the directors of the American Shorthorn Breeders' association and the American Hereford Breeders' association, and with each of these organizations he arranged for another exhibition of cattle and auction sale, to be held at the Minnesota fair in September.

In each case the arrangement for 1902 was duplicated. This means that $4,000 in premiums will be offered for Shorthorn cattle at the fair this year, and that a like amount will be given for Herefords, but it also means that the display of cattle will be larger than in 1902, and that the number of heads offered for sale at auction will be much increased.

Killed by Cars.

William Hoyt, aged 12 years, son of Lyman Hoyt, was killed beneath the wheels of a Great Northern freight train near Fridley. He was returning from school, and, trying to steal a ride on the train, he was thrown beneath the wheels, but the engineer knew nothing of the accident until the train reached Minneapolis when one of the arms was found clinging to a truck. Coroner Ewing decided that death was accidental.

News in Brief.

The state board of control announces that the new plan of sending a menu expert to examine and improve the cuisine at the state institutions is proving immensely satisfactory.

The state game and fish commission elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Uri Lamprey; vice president, W. P. Hill, Fairmont; secretary, E. W. Meeker, Moorhead, and treasurer, H. G. Smith, Winona.

Alvah Cornelius, janitor of the First Presbyterian church of Duluth, was murderously assaulted by an unknown man in the church early Sunday morning and narrowly escaped with his life. The assault was made with a heavy hardwood pointer, which was broken over the victim's head. The assailant escaped.

The Great Northern coal shed at Morris burned. A large amount of coal also burned. The fire was caused by the explosion of a gasoline engine.

Warren C. Jones, aged 50 years, was convicted in municipal court of Minneapolis of giving intoxicating liquor to a 14-year-old girl and was sentenced to pay a fine of $75 or spend eighty days in the workhouse. He was given ten days in which to raise the money.

T. C. Wing's residence at St. Cloud was damaged to the extent of $1,000 by fire at 1 o'clock this morning. It stands near Lawrence hall, the ladies' dormitory of the normal school, which was soon filled with smoke. About 200 girls packed their effects and made ready to leave. The loss on the residence is covered by insurance.

Albert L. Morey, 65 years of age, arrested in Minneapolis by Capt. J. W. Lawrence, a secret service man, on a charge of counterfeiting, was taken before United States Commissioner Howard S. Abbott for preliminary hearing.

The Masonic social dance at Cass Lake was suddenly broken up by fire. The ladies were hurriedly taken from the hall and the fire was quenched with difficulty. Investigation showed that the fire was the work of an incendiary, who left a two-gallon can of kerosene where it would have exploded in a few minutes.

Governor Van Sant reappointed S. H. Towler, of Minneapolis, as a member of the Soldiers' Home board. W. H. Harries, of Caledonia, was appointed to fill the place of J. R. Parshal, deceased, and R. H. Dunnington, of Redwood Falls, was re-appointed a member.

An unidentified man was found by a policeman lying in the street at Eighth avenue S. and Second street in Minneapolis complaining that he had been struck by a switch engine. When the officer called the patrol wagon, which was to carry him to the hospital, he arose and ran away.

A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Rev. H. Stubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubenvoll is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

"Jack," said a visitor to the son the other day, "what are you going to be when you grow up?" UNITED STATES AND COLOMBIA REACH AGREEMENT REGARDING CANAL.

Washington, Jan. 23.—At the last moment and on the eve of an official declaration that negotiations were off, the government of the United States of Colombia met the views of this government and Thursday a treaty was signed which gives to this country perpetual control of the Panama canal strip across the isthmus. This determines the location of the interoceanic canal at that point on the isthmus and disposes of the Nicaragua canal, at least until the Panama canal has been given a fair chance.

The Treaty.

The treaty signed Thursday conveys from the republic of Colombia to the United States of America the perpetual control of a strip of territory from Caribbean sea to the Pacific ocean, six miles wide at its narrowest point. It provides that the United States shall not only have the right to excavate and construct a canal sufficiently large to afford passage for ships of the greatest tonnage and draft now in use, but that it may perpetually maintain, operate and protect this canal, this last right being carefully guarded. The treaty also provides for the right to maintain and operate the Panama railroad during the building of the canal and as long thereafter as may be desired. It is specifically provided, further, that the United States shall exercise police and civil jurisdiction over the strip of territory, and particularly over the ports at each end of the canal, so as to preserve order and prevent epidemics. It is further stipulated that the United States of America shall have the right to establish and maintain the judicial tribunals necessary to preserve respect for civil and criminal law as well as sanitary regulations and all the rules necessary for the building, operation and protection of the canal and the ports at either end.

Cost of Canal.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The canal treaty provides for the payment by the United States to Colombia of $10,000,000 in gold and a rental of $250,000 annually thereafter, after the expiration of nine years. The lease of a zone six miles wide for 100 years is granted. The United States has the right to send troops to protect its property in case Colombia cannot do so.

Colombia Rejoices.

Colon, Colombia, Jan. 24.—The news received here that the canal treaty between the United States and Colombia had been signed caused much jubilation throughout the isthmus and hopes are expressed that the United States will soon begin the completion of the canal.

ASKS FOR RELIEF.

Aguinaldo Petitions Congress for Aid for the Philippines—Would Borrow $100,000,000.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Aguinaldo, formerly leader of the Filipino insurgents, has petitioned congress, through Gov. Taft, to take steps to relieve suffering and famine in the Philippines by extending a loan and credit of $100,000,000 to the agriculturists of the archipelago. He urges the establishment of a bank under the civil government to handle the money, and he works out the details of his relief plan in such a way that he claims the loan would be repaid in 20 years and a balance left in the bank to continue the work.

Secretary Root submitted Aguinaldo's petition to the senate and house. It is a remarkable presentation of conditions in the Philippines and supports Secretary Root's statements to congress and points out, as he did, the necessity for prompt action to check suffering and disaster. The secretary attached particular importance to Aguinaldo's profession of desire to do all in his power to aid Americans in developing the islands and carrying out relief measures.

The Agricultural Bill.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The house committee on agriculture on Tuesday reported the agricultural appropriation bill. It carries $5,238,860, an increase of $29,900 over the last appropriation and $400,000 less than the estimates.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Trade Is Generally Good Throughout the Country with Dealings More on a Cash Basis.

New York, Jan. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Heavy transactions in merchandise are reported, but there is much complaint regarding the slow movement of freight. The situation as to general lines is aggravated by the precedence given fuel over all other freight except live stock and perishable goods. Notwithstanding the extensive increase in transporting facilities during the past year, some roads have been compelled to decline consignments, and in many cases where a large number of cars were desired only one was provided.

Firmness has characterized the course of the leading staples, an abundant demand being in evidence, while available supplies are restricted by traffic conditions.

BENNETTE BEHIND TIME.

IT seems to us that the roast's of B.S.Bennett. by the McIntosh papers for the introduction of a bill to prohibit a county from contracting a debt while its legality was being contested in the courts, is uncalled for, so far as Columbia county is concerned. We supported B.S. Bennett for election and about all the complaint we heard against him, was that he was to slow, and now he has proven just what the other fellow said, by the introduction of this bill at this time.

Columbia county is established aud is doing business under the proclamation of Gov. Van-Sant issued by advice of the Attorney general under a rouling of suprem court made six years ago. They are issueing license legalizeing marriage, probateing estates and doing all business that any of the countys of the state are doing. It would be astonishing news to a blushing bride that was led to the alter in January, to have her supposed husband inform her in the month of April that she was not his wife, and as married life was not just up to his expectation he was going to start for the west in the morning, and had just dropped in to say good-by.

The wole talk of setting aside the organization of Columbia, or Clearwater county, is a ridiculous farce gotten up by attorneys?for the purpose of colecting fees from clients, that are in the position of a drowning man that will grab at a straw.

That residents of the pounty do not fully understand the law governing the payment of wolf bounties was demonstrated yesterday, when a young man carrying the entire carcass of a wolf entered the office of the county auditor. He explained that the animal had been shot by John Loma, at Embarrass river, and Loma had asked him to go to Duluth and get the bounty.

The hunter had neglected to secure a certificate from the nearest town clerk and therefore the youth was compelled to return without getting his money.

The law requires,'' said Deputy County Auditor Rakowsky, "that a person killing a wolf must go to the nearest town clerk with the carcass of the animal and make affidavit in the presence of a witness that be killed it. He will then be issued a certificate'which he must bring in person to the county auditor, and also the skin and scalp of the wolf. The ears of the latter will be perforated and he will be given an order on the treasurer for the bounty besides being allowed to retain the head and pelt."

The failure of Public Examiner Johnson's slenth-hounds to establish even a shadow of a case against Engineer Ralph; together with the fact that certain officials against whom grave charges were made but a short time ago were unmolested, makes it look very much as though the examiner's office was being used for purposes other than the protection of the public and the furtherance of justice. we hope that this is not the case: but this straining at nits and swallowing of camels, while it may serve the purpose of making a record for the examiner, does not look very well to one conversant with the facts.

A Gully taxpayer in the last weeks Thirteen Towns, gives the Comissioner of Columbia county a calling-dow on their method of organization of Columbia county. We will not deny that taxpayer is right in some of his statements, but is wrong in others. He is mistaken in saying that there was a political pull divsion debt to be paid, as can be proven by one item viz: the letting of county printing. We worked long and faithful for Columbia county, without any compensation, and when it came to the letting of priuting the $1,200 a year auditor, or his$500 a year clerk coulden't afford a 1c postal card to let us know about it and the printing was let on the q.t. to the remnant of the old Polk county printing ring Foss of Fosston and Lenman of McIntosh, and now Foss is ready to howl about the robbery of the tax payer by the Columbia county "gang"and he is in a good position to prove it.

Drinking Through the Nostrils.

The Indian sages do not practice their breathing exercises simply for the sake of repose and sleep. During the inbreathing energy is increased. These Indians are not the only people who believe that with the inbreathing of pure air there comes something still more vital than oxygen. But the Indians have developed the art of breathing more than any other people.

One of their favorite exercises is to inhale through the left nostril, to hold the breath for a time and then exhale through the right nostril.

Another of their exercises is to drink water through the nostrils, and after it has been retained for a short time it is expelled through the nostrils and the mouth. This is said to cool the head.—Chambers' Journal.

Growing Bananas.

Bananas are as a rule planted out systematically in rows, the "suckers" being placed at an average of ten feet apart. The banana plant bears only one bunch at a time, but it is a quick grower, yielding its fruit in twelve to fourteen months. When the plant is about six months old, a second "sucker" or shoot is allowed to spring from the root, a third after the ninth month, and so on, so that after the first year there is a continuous crop being reaped.

Bees and Ants.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell, so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which man's efforts in making such things are insignificant. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Trifles.

There is no such thing in life as a trifle; every event and action, however unimportant seemingly, has a root below and a branch above which twist and turn into some other root and branch, making part of the great substance on and in which we live. Postoffices and Addresses.

One of the rules of the postoffice department which often provokes dissatisfaction is that which prohibits a postmaster or any member of his family from giving out the addresses of patrons of the office. A person may be looking for some one whose address has been lost or misplaced. What is more natural than to go to the postoffice and ask for the information? But the postmaster, if he obeys the regulations, will not give it. The government acts on the theory that it is not its business to disclose the whereabouts of the patrons of the postoffice. Debtors may be pursued by importunate creditors; young women may be subjected to unpleasant attentions; hundreds of people for various reasons, good and bad, may desire to conceal from somebody their place of residence. It is not the business of the government to expose them to annoyance.—Youth's Companion.

The Racing Camel.

The ordinary camel, which will never hurry under any circumstances, has been transformed in southern Algeria into an animal so different in size, temper and appearance that it may almost be looked upon as a different race. This is the racing camel, prized for its speed. The result of many generations of careful breeding, which has been encouraged by valuable prizes, it can be depended upon for nine or ten miles an hour, which it can keep up for sixteen or seventeen hours, almost without a stop. Its value is five or ten times that of the beast of burden. The camel races are popular sport and are made exciting by the evident interest of the creatures themselves in winning.

Wonder what makes so many farmers liveing near Fosston and McIntosh start this way when they go to mill? Can it be that it is because they begin to see the woodchuck in the Fosston mill wood pile? or is it because they get better flour and more of it at this mill? We will ask some of them and let you know, as we know of some people that are doing a good deal of worrying about it.

A DARING BURGLARY.

A daring burglary took place about one o'clock Friday night right in the business part of town. It was done by two or three men but only one of them have been caught up to the present time. They broke in a front window in Hovee's restaurant, stole Mr. Hovee's overcoat, about 500 cigars and various other articles, nearly all of which have been recovered. A trial was, held over the captured one Saturday afternoon, when he was bound over, awaiting the action of the grand jury of Columbia county which meets some time in March. Sheriff Stowe took the prisoner down to Crookston Tuesday for safe keeping in Polk County's strong box. He gave his name as Chas. Meyer.

More Than Justice.

Mrs. Newriche—Now, here's my latest portrait in oils, and I must say I'm perfectly satisfied with it. I'm sure it does me justice. Don't you think so?

Mrs. Cuttinge—Yes, indeed; justice tempered with mercy!—Brooklyn Life.

She Was a Poor Guesser.

Husband—How's that?

Wife—I don't know whether he is economical or has a grudge against the gas company.—Chicago News.

"Is this, then, to be the end of our romance?" he asked.

"No," she answered. "My lawyer will call on you in the morning. I have a bushel and a half of your letters."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Exercise.

Miss Primrose—Don't you ever give your dog any exercise?

Miss Hollyhock (fondling a fat pug dog)—Of course. I feed him with chocolates every few minutes just to make him wag his tail.

His Fad.

She—Have you heard the news? Mc-Solomon is to marry again, the fourth time, I believe.

He—Yes, I've heard about it. Beats all how the rage for collecting will take hold of a man. Sometimes it's old books or playbills and sometimes it's postage stamps. In McSolomon's case it appears to be wives.—Boston Transcript.

PHOSPHORESCENT OCEAN.

Little Gelatinous Organisms Which Create the Appearance.

A milky opalescence, permeating the entire sea for immense distances bounded only by the horizon, is a somewhat rare phenomenon. It appears quite suddenly, lasts perhaps for several hours and passes away as rapidly as it came, and this without apparent cause. At midnight we had the singular whiteness enveloping the sea, while the more brilliant kinds of phosphorescence shone in the midst of flashing green, yellow or bluish lights, as the case might be—a gorgeous nocturnal display.

During these hours my surface trawl net drifted astern of the ship. The water was alive with countless myriads of little gelatinous sacs measuring one-sixth of an inch in length—delicate tunicate organisms which required the aid of a microscope to reveal their perfect structure. A few specimens placed in an empty meat tin in a darkened cabin could be seen laden with the naked eyes careening madly around in the salt water, each one glowing with that peculiar opalescent light which saturated the entire sea for so many miles. It was a small species of salpa, nearly related to a much larger kind on the side of which the late Professor Moseley wrote his name with his finger, the signature being visible on the dead body throughout the night, glowing with the brightest phosphorescent light.—Cornhill Magazine.

Speaking English.

Almost any one who speaks English might be put down successively in half a dozen places where English is supposed to be the mother tongue and hear as many dialects spoken, not one of which he would understand until it was interpreted. An old Lancashire worthy and a London lady were one day occupants of a railway carriage. The train had been waiting long at a certain station, and there was no appearance of it starting when the worthy remarked:

"They're a gly, tanglesome lot here."

"I beg your pardon," said the lady.

"I'm sayin' they're a gey daidlin' lot here."

"I really beg your pardon, sir."

"I'm observin' they are a vera dreich lot here the aicht."

"Really I must again beg your pardon. I don't comprehend you."

"I was just tryin' to say that the train was late."

"Indeed, sir, it is—very late," agreed the lady and then collapsed.—London Tit-Bits.

Sulphur.

Sulphur occurs very widely distributed in the mineral kingdom, partly free and partly combined with other elements. The free sulphur is either found pure in regularly formed crystals or intimately mixed with earthy matters. In its native state sulphur is largely found in Sicily and Italy and as a general rule in abundance in volcanic districts. The brittleness of sulphur renders the cleavage imperfect.

Sulphuric acid is an important combination and a very dangerous one in inexperienced hands. Sulphur combined with a number of elements, such as iron, copper, lead, etc., furnishes the sulphides. In the vegetable kingdom sulphur is a small constituent of the albuminous bodies and of certain volatile irritant oils. Moreover, the vegetable juices contain it in the form of certain sulphates.

An East Indian Amulet.

In India a variety of gems and stones are used as amulets. The most common is the salagrama, a stone about as large as a billiard ball and which is perforated with black. This is supposed to be found only in Gandaki, a river in Nepaul. The person who possesses one of these stones is esteemed highly fortunate. He preserves it in a clean cloth, from whence it is sometimes taken to be bathed and perfumed. He believes that the water in which it is washed, if drunk, has the power to preserve from sin. Holding it in his hand, the dying Hindoo expires in peace, trusting in a stone rather than in the living God.

"No Kick Coming."

A railroad engineer who has been in the service so many years that his hair has grown iron gray and his visage as stern as a warrior's while he has driven his iron monster over the parallels of iron recently experienced his first collision. He came out of it with a badly demolished engine and a sufficiently smashed up leg for any occasion.

The surgeons took him in charge and by dint of splints, bandages, skill and patience saved his injured limb and got it on the road to recovery.

The other day he walked out for the first time, and as he hobbled along on crutches, the injured member looking very unwieldy indeed, a friend hailed him with: "Hello, Jim! How's that leg of yours getting along?"

The veteran has gray eyes, as clear and penetrating as a youth's, and they twinkled with a tonic effect as he said, laconically:

"Oh, I can't kick!"—New York Times.

Strange Ideas of Beauty.

Babies in Penjdeh have the back of the head flattened artificially by their mothers, and as another mark of beauty their noses are sharpened and a dimple formed on their chin. The head is flattened by making the child sleep with it on the hard soil or inside an earthenware pot. Each day the mother presses the nose with her fingers to make it long and pointed and indents the chin with a stem. In some cases the legs are straightened by means of bands. In America the Chinooks flatten the forehead.

The rattles of British American Indians are frequently made in the form of birds or small animals.

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

ROCKDALE, TEX., Dec. 30, 1902.—"When I received the trial package of Doan's Kidney Pills I could not get out of bed without help. I had severe pains in the small of my back. The Pills helped me at once, and now after three weeks the pain in my back is all gone and I am no longer annoyed with having to get up often during the night as formerly. I cannot speak too highly for what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I am now 57 years old, have tried a great many medicines, but nothing did the work until I used Doan's Kidney Pills."—JAMES R. ARTHUR.

CLEVELAND, KY., Dec. 28, 1902.—"I was laid up in bed with my back and kidneys. I could not get myself straight when I tried to stand, would have to bend in a half stooping position. HIT BEFORE THE SHOT.

The Villain in a Melodrama Gives an Exhibition of Marvelous Marksmanship.

It was in a downtown theater recently, and the climax of a tragedy was approaching. Leading up toward this supreme moment, the villain, lolling in a summer garden, had been challenged to a duel with the hero, says the Chicago Tribune.

"Fight me! Fight me!" and the villain, too full for further utterance at the moment, pointed toward a bottle standing empty on a table thirty feet away.

The hero turned with a supercilious glance and looked.

"Watch!"

It was the villain's cue word, and he was so intent upon seeing that none of its laconic force was lost on the audience that he must have been slow with the action. Just as his revolver appeared from a rear pocket and was rising in the villain's right hand——.

"Bing-le-ting-le-ting!"

The neck of the bottle burst in a dozen pieces and clinked to the floor; the astonished villain, with the unexploded weapon in his hand, stood there with fallen jaw and lowering arm, while the gallery simply went to pieces in the delirium of its joy.

You must walk a long time behind a gander before you find a peacock feather.—Judge.

First Need of a Doctor.

Wu Ting Fang is fond of relating a story about a Chinese doctor who didn't satisfy his patient. The sicker the patient grew, the more indignant his friends became at the unsuccessful physician. At last, when the sick man was in a final stage and death was imminent, the relatives laid violent hands on the unfortunate doctor, and, tying him up to a tree, started to administer a smart beating. But while his assailants were looking for a stick with which to beat him, the doctor freed himself, and, jumping into the river, swam to safety. When he reached home he found his son, who was studying to be a physician, poring over a book on medicine. "Put it up, put it up, shut it up," said the doctor, grimly; "the first requisite of a doctor is to know how to swim, not to cure."—San Francisco Argonaut.

WEAK WOMEN.

CONSTIPATION STARTED YOUR SUFFERING, CURE IT AND YOUR AFFLICTION WILL VANISH.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

When the bowels move irregularly the entire bodily system must suffer. Constipation more frequently occurs among women and it manifests itself in provoking profuse leucorrhea and other serious female diseases. Regular bowels will result in a complete cure when you use Mull's Grape Tonic. Unlike pills and ordinary cathartics, this remedy is a mild, gentle laxative in addition to being a greater flesh-builder, blood-maker and strength-giver than cod liver oil or any other preparation recommended for that purpose. Mull's Grape Tonic will permanently cure the most obstinate case of constipation, and the numerous afflictions that invariably follow in its wake. No matter if it is piles, liver complaint, kidney disorder, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, diarrhea or the self-poisoning which follows when the undigested food remains in the bowels where it putrefies and empties highly diseased germs into the blood, such as typhoid and malaria, Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure. Large sample bottle will be sent free to any address on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage, by the Lightning Medicine Co., Rock Island, Ill. Send name of your druggist. All druggists sell Mull's Grape Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, Jan. 21.—In the van of the avalanche of bills which came down upon the house yesterday—there were twenty-six in all—there were two bills from members of the Hennepin delegation of special importance.

Representative Helliwell's H. F. No. 48 seeks to re-enact the income and inheritance tax bill, which has twice gone through the legislature, only to be declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, and Representative Deming's bill, H. F. No. 49, which gives power to city councils and park boards to so establish easements to prevent any one property holder from injuring the property of a residence street or district by an unsightly or badly situated building.

As in the other bills which became laws, Mr. Helliwell's income and inheritance tax bill levies a 1 per cent tax on lineal heirs, and 5 per cent on collateral heirs over and above the $5,000 exemption provided in previous bills passed.

Chairman Stevenson of the judiciary committee introduced a bill H. F. No. 53 legalizing all foreclosure sale instruments heretofore recorded from the date of their execution, notwithstanding that the acknowledgement of such instrument was taken before a notary public who was the attorney to whom the authority ran and who was authorized to make the foreclosure.

Of the other bills introduced, Erickson's H. H. No. 70 defines the bucket shop and provides legislation for it in the same manner as does the bill already introduced in the senate and a bill introduced in the house for the maintenance of a state camp ground at Lake City introduced by Senator Eberhart last week.

Senator C. M. Buck introduced a bill yesterday which bids fair to be the cause of much discussion before the present legislative session is over.

It provides that the state university, the state normal schools and the school for the deaf, dumb and blind at Faribault be placed in the control of the boards of directors of the institutions, which, in the case of the university, means the board of regents.

Senator Buck is of the opinion that it is unsatisfactory to have the above-named schools under the management, or the partial management, of the board of control.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—Representative Yoerg's resolution calling for an investigation of the charges made by President Mellen of the Northern Pacific met a swift and almost peaceful death in the house yesterday morning.

Representative Jacoby, of Ramsey, did not call up his coal and wood resolution, as was expected. The summary treatment meted out to the pass resolution by his colleagues had a deterring effect. Mr. Jacoby said after the session he was afraid the house would get into the habit of voting them down and he decided to wait. The resolution will be called from the table Friday.

The house committee on taxes and tax laws held a meeting immediately after adjournment yesterday. The gross earnings bill was not touched upon, but preparation was made for its future consideration.

Senator Samuel Lord introduced a bill yesterday which will precipitate a long discussion on taxation. The bill proposes an amendment to sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 of article IX of the constitution, and which is a basis for the system of taxation in Minnesota.

A discussion on the merits of a free lumber resolution introduced in the senate yesterday by Senator Henry A. Morgan, of Albert Lea, will be one of the interesting features of today's session of the upper house. The resolution is a memorial to the Minnesota delegation in congress, asking for the removal of the lumber tariff. Senator Wilson, of Hennepin, gave notice of debate.

Senator Wilson's reciprocity resolution, which is held to relate particularly to Canadian grain and lumber, will come up at the same time.

If the two bills before the legislature relating to desertion become laws, the wife will not only be able to testify against her husband, but convictions will be more frequent.

Senator Wilson yesterday introduced a bill amending the present law so that when desertion does not extend over a period longer than six months it is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not to exceed $100 or by imprisonment not to exceed ninety days.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—At the opening of the senate session Senator Thorpe asked that Senator Wilson's resolution anent reciprocity with Canada and Senator Morgan's free lumber resolution be laid over until Tuesday of next week.

The secretary read a telegram from the Arizona legislature asking the senators to influence the Minnesota congressmen to work for the omnibus statehood bill, and it was referred to the committee on federal relations.

The following bills were introduced:

In the adjustment of insurance losses, provides for the appointment of referees by the district court instead of the parties involved. Insurance.

To amend ch. 178, gen. laws 1901, entitled, "An act to provide for the incorporation, re-incorporation and regulation of life insurance companies on the stipulated premium plan." It provides among other things that no new or amended by-laws shall in any manner modify or change any existing contract without the express consent of the insured in writing. It also provides that the companies must file full details of losses, liabilities, expenditures, assets, receipts, etc., with the insurance commissioner. Insurance.

Mr. Fust, the lone Democrat from Hennepin county in the house, had the distinction of presenting the only bill which came from the hands of a member of the delegation yesterday morning.

The telegraph companies doing business in the state of Minnesota are in danger of a considerable reduction in revenue from H. F. No. 99, introduced by Sam D. Peterson yesterday. His bill limits the amount of toll which may be charged for a telegraph message within the limits of the state to 25 cents for a message of ten words, exclusive of names, address and signature, and two cents for each additional word. A penalty of $200 for violation of the law is provided.

Mr. Peter's H. F. No. 89 gives Dakota county $3,500 to improve the Cedar avenue bridge across the Minnesota river on the St. Paul and Shakopee road, and Sinclaire's H. F. No. 101 appropriates $30,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection of a ladies' home at the Winona state normal school.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—With the senate in general orders for the first time, Senator Horton took the opportunity offered to explain the necessity of passing the bill making the limit of expenditure for the new capitol building $4,500,000.

The following bills were indorsed:

Relating to costs in action to recover the value of a great price of labor or services performed. Judiciary.

Appropriating $8,000, or whatever may be necessary under that amount, out of the revenue fund for repaying sums paid into the state treasury under inheritance tax laws, which laws have been declared unconstitutional. (Claims.)

Appropriating $196,000 for state aid to high schools; that is, making the appropriation for each school under the act $1,600 instead of $1,000. Claims.

To repeal the law providing that an abstractor cannot examine records of the clerk of courts for the purpose of certifying to the abstract. Judiciary.

In the house Mr. Deming introduced one bill appropriating $500 for the aid of a state horticultural society, and $2,500 annually for the printing of 4,000 copies of the society's annual report.

From the committee on military affairs a bill was presented appropriating $40,000 for the erection of a monument to the Third, Fourth and Fifth regiments, Minnesota volunteers, and the First Minnesota battery, on the field of Vicksburg. The plans for this monument are in accord with those presented to Governor Van Sant in the report of the Vicksburg park commission.

Among the other bills presented was one by Mr. Erickson, H. F. No. 104, allowing county commissioners in counties having a population of 50,000 or less and an assessed valuation of $1,500,000 or over, $5 per day and ten cents per mile, when engaged on county business, "except when serving on committee on poor," and $3 a day when serving on committee on roads and bridges.

Mr. Tighe's bill, H. F. No. 107, appropriates $5,000 for repairs at the state training school at Red Wing.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP. RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

Congressman Geo. H. White's Case.

A Noted Sculptress Cured.

The world of medicine recognizes Grip as epidemic catarrh.—Medical Talk.

LA GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful Grip had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Pe-ru-na for Grip.

Mrs. Theophile Schmitt, wife of the Ex-Secretary of the German Consulate, writes the following letter from 3417 Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"I suffered this winter with a severe attack of la grippe. After using three bottles of Peruna I found the grip had disappeared."—Mrs. T. Schmitt.

Mrs. Celeste Covell writes from 210 N. avenue, Aurora, Ill.:

"Only those who have suffered with la grippe and been cured can appreciate how grateful I feel that such a splendid medicine as Peruna has been placed at the door of every suffering person."—Mrs. C. Covell.

Noted Sculptress Cured of Grip.

Mrs. M. C. Cooper, of the Royal Academy of Arts, of London, England, now residing in Washington, D. C., is one of the greatest living sculptors and painters of the world. She says:

"I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh and la grippe. I have suffered for months, and after the use of one bottle of Peruna I am entirely well."—Mrs. M. C. Cooper.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barbers' Union, writes from 15 Western Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Lieutenant Clarice Hunt, of the Salt Lake City Barracks of the Salvation Army, writes from Ogden, Utah:

"Two months ago I was suffering with so severe a cold that I could hardly speak.

"Our captain advised me to try Peruna and procured a bottle for me, and truly it worked wonders. Within two weeks I was entirely well."—Clarice Hunt.

Congressman White's Letter.

Tarboro, N. C.

Gentlemen: I am more than satisfied with Peruna and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."—George H. White, Member of Congress.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer Independent Order of Good Templars, of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctors called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned. Peruna cured me."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Health Before Wealth.

Nine out of ten ailments first show themselves in constipation. Medical statistics show that a greater number of people suffer from constipation than from all other diseases combined. A great talk is made about consumption, but, constipation kills more people than consumption. Within the last few years a medicine has been discovered of such merit in curing constipation and its consequences that now over ten million boxes of CASCARETS are sold every year, the greatest sale ever attained by any one medicine in the world and this is the strongest proof that it is the best and will do all and more than claimed. If you are a sufferer give CASCARETS a trial, and right here we want to warn you to get the genuine, because all great successes breed imitations. The genuine tablet is put up in metal boxes and has the word CASCARETS with the long-tailed "C" on the cover. Every Cascaret tablet is stamped C. C. C.

The rich man is the trustee of humanity. In this way, you see, humanity's money is kept profitably invested, instead of being spent for food and drink and other frippery.—Puck.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Official Figures.

The government statisticians have figured up the agricultural results for the past year, and are out with a report in which Minnesota appears very prominently. The state holds its old position of pre-eminence in wheat, having produced 79,752,404 bushels from an area of 5,737,583 acres, the yield per acre averaging 13.9. At 61c per bushel, which is the average price the government figures that farmers received for their wheat, the crop brought $48,648,966 to the state. North Dakota is next to Minnesota in the production of spring wheat, showing 62,872,241 bushels raised from 3,954,229 acres, having a value of $36,465,900. Next in spring wheat is South Dakota with 43,973,033 bushels, taken from 3,604,347 acres, and bringing to the state $25,064,629. In making these estimates the government uses 61c as an average price for Minnesota, 58c for North Dakota, and 57c for South Dakota.

Minnesota with 667,500 acres planted to flax and a yield of 6,942,000 bushels shows up well, but it is North Dakota that takes the palm. The farmers of North Dakota planted 2,100,000 acres, the largest area ever devoted to flax, and from this immense area have taken about 25,000,000 bushels.

Renovated Butter.

The renovated butter business has increased more than 1,000 per cent in Minnesota during the past six months. There were 51,000 pounds of the product manufactured in the state in July, 1902, but since that time the business has increased, until in December 575,474 pounds were made. The output since July 1 has been 2,084,952 pounds.

The manufacturer of renovated butter, under the oleomargarine law, which went into effect July 1, 1902, must pay a tax of one-fourth of a cent on every pound produced. Although there were eight or nine renovated butter factories in the state when the law went into effect, only one manufactured any of the butter during July. Another factory took up the making of the butter in August, and the output for that month was more than three times that of July. There are now six factories in the state—two in St. Paul, two in Minneapolis and two at Duluth—and all are doing an immense business.

A State Demonstration.

Governor VanSant has returned from St. Louis impressed with the idea that the Louisiana Purchase exposition gives Minnesota an opportunity to demonstrate to all the world the wonderful resources of the state, and he desires to see the legislature appropriate a sufficient sum for this purpose.

The site selected for the Minnesota building is a commanding one, and adjoins the government building, on which $2,000,000 will be spent. The site is nearer to the fair proper than that of any state building, the Missouri building, which will cost $200,000, being excepted.

It is proposed that the Minnesota exhibit be made a comprehensive demonstration of the state's resources. For instance, it is suggested that in the mining section an iron mine in miniature be reproduced. The governor has been asked to aid in securing an exhibit showing the importance of river transportation.

Cats and Dogs.

J. M. Adams, one of the agents of the Humane society of Minneapolis, has conceived of a unique plan in disposing homeless or abandoned dogs and cats until the requisite fund, with which to open a regularly equipped home for this purpose, is forthcoming.

For some time Mr. Adams has been collecting these deserted creatures and taking care of them at his own home. As they increased in numbers, Mr. Adams found himself reduced to the extremity of advertising for homes for his forsaken pets.

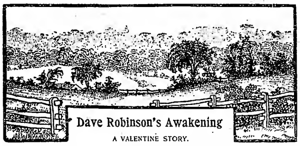
As a result, he has been receiving numerous letters from Pipestone, Stillwater, Watson and several other Minnesota towns, and even from South Dakota, offering comfortable homes to the dogs and cats, and even tendering money for the privilege of adopting them.

Married Too Soon.

Albert Green, a farmer, was convicted of perjury in the district court at Duluth for having sworn falsely to the clerk of court when he applied for a license to wed. Mrs. Jennie Devard, his bride, it appears, was divorced from her husband less than six months from the time Green made his application. Green had been informed of the law in such cases, but declared there was no legal impediment to his marriage.

Rode with Dead Man.

Dead, his form rigid and sitting upright in the cutter, his glassy eyes staring in front of him Alexander Dodd was driven through the streets of Duluth by Lieutenant Briggs of the local police, who did not discover he had for his companion a corpse until the Red Cross hospital was reached. Dodd was ill and was being taken to the hospital for treatment. Exposure to the cold air brought on death.



Dave Robinson's Awakening

A VALENTINE STORY.

"THAT there's a mighty queer window to take your fancy, Sam." And the speaker, a tall, broad-shouldered farmer, gave a hearty laugh as Sam Scott, his neighbor, turned quickly around, with an embarrassed smile on his good-looking, sun-burned face.

"Why—you know, Dave—it's Valentine's day," he began, hesitatingly.

"Don't know nothin' of the kind," broke in his friend.

"Well, you know it now, old fellow, and I'm lookin' for some little fixin' to take Milly for a valentine. We began that way, you see, when we was first married—keepin' aniversury days, by me a buyin' her a keepsake. It pleases her, and don't hurt me. You know how women like to be remembered by their husbands. There's some ribbon in this window that'll just suit Milly to a dot. I'm going in to get it. See you later, Dave," and Sam Scott went into the store, leaving his friend staring after him with perplexity written in every line of his face.

"You know how women like to be remembered by their husbands."

Sam was wrong; he didn't know. The words haunted him—haunted him all day. Went with him to the various places where he had business to transact; kept him company at the restaurant when he ate his dinner. Much to his surprise (and annoyance), he found himself doing some thinking in an entirely new line.

As far as he could remember—and his memory was excellent—he had never bought a present for Susan. Of course, she had the egg and butter money every week; but it suddenly occurred to him that it was generally spent for the house and the children.

"There, now! What do you think of that for a bonnet?"

"Susan's as good-looking a woman as you'll find," he thought. "She'd look a heap better than Sam's Milly if she was a leetle more fixy. I'm as able as Sam Scott to give my wife 'keepsakes,' as he calls 'em. I wonder what on earth she'd think if I took her by surprise to-night? I swan, I'd like to try it, but I don't want to look foolish. I'll go and see about that cultivator I've got to buy, and put Sam Scott's notions out of my head."

But that was easier said than done. "Sam Scott's notions" had evidently come to stay, and late in the day, much to his own disgust Dave Robinson found himself actually stopping before shop windows, in which were displayed the "fixin's" that women like. Suddenly he drew up before a milliner's shop. "I've got it!" he exclaimed out loud, regardless of the amused looks of several passers-by. "I'll buy Susan a bonnet!" and wonderfully pleased with his happy idea, he went bashfully into the shop. He had never been in such a place before, and it was a terrible ordeal. He felt like the proverbial bull in a china shop. But he wasn't going to back out now, and went bravely up to the counter and stated his errand.

"A bonnet for your wife? Oh, yes. I think we can suit you," said the pretty young lady, with a smile. "What style is she? I mean, what color are her hair and eyes?" as poor Dave appeared helplessly dazed.

"Why—why she's got light hair, rather on the reddish order, and her eyes are blue," he stammered. As he spoke, he seemed to see Susan as she looked when he married her. Her hair was so fluffy and curly, and her eyes such a pretty, innocent blue. He hadn't thought of it for years; he had been too busy.

"Well, then," said the little milliner, "I feel sure this bonnet will be becoming to your wife. Blue is its prevailing color, and this particular shade goes nicely with such hair and eyes. Don't you think so, sir?"

Poor Dave was completely out of his depth, but he answered bravely that he agreed with her, and would take the bonnet, which the milliner had really chosen with great discrimination. The price startled him considerably, but he wasn't going to say so. "I've just paid a good round sum for that cultivator, and I won't kick at this."

He carefully placed the bonnet-box under the wagon seat as he rode home that night. To tell the truth, he exceedingly dreaded the presentation. Susan wasn't accustomed to this sort of thing, like Sam's wife and he didn't know how she'd take it. But in spite of these forebodings there was a pleasurable excitement in the unusual sensation that he was taking home a present to his wife "A valentine," he said, chuckling. (He pronounced it volentine, but what's the difference?)

He didn't produce the bonnet as soon as he got home. He waited till after supper when the chores were all done. Then he sat down by the table and began to read the weekly paper he had brought out.

But the reading was a failure, and he sat and watched his wife over the paper till she said: "What in creation's the matter with you to-night, Dave Robinson? Is there anything wrong with my looks? You've been a starin' at me like all possessed."

Dave gave an embarrassed laugh and retired behind the paper again.

Suddenly he spoke: "Did you know it's Valentine's day, Susan?"

"Bless the man, does he think I'd be apt to remember Valentine's day, with all I've got to think of? I b'lieve, though, I did hear the children a-talkin' about it. Whatever put it in your head, Dave?"

"Oh, heard about it down-town, and, Susan—Susan—I met Sam Scott to-day and—and he was a-buyin' a present for Milly and callin' it a valentine. It struck me 'twas a pretty nice idee, and as I'm as able any day to buy my wife a present as he is, why—I bought—you—this bonnet!"

And here he produced the box.

"Open it, Susan. Why don't you open it? Here, give it to me," for the poor woman's hands were shaking so that she couldn't untie the string. "There, now! What do you think of that for a bonnet?"

Susan had found enough voice now to say: "Why, Dave! Why, Dave Robinson!" over and over. But she was pleased; it was easy to see that. "You oughtn't to have done it," she said, as she held the pretty bonnet on one hand, and turned it round and round carefully. "It's too good for me, Dave, and I expect it cost a heap."

"Never mind what it cost," answered her husband, heartily. "Put it on, Susan, and let's see if it becomes you. By George, that milliner woman just hit it. It suits you to a dot. You look ten years younger."

And truly she did. But I think something besides the bonnet brought that pretty flush to her cheek, and brightness to her eyes.

Happiness is a wonderful rejuvenator, and "women like to be remembered by their husbands."

Susan turned away from the little looking-glass and tenderly placed the bonnet in its box. "I'll fix my hair a little different when I wear it—more like I used to," she said. And then, going over to Dave, who was pretending to read his paper, she timidly—very timidly, for they were not a demonstrative couple—kissed the little bald spot on his head.

"Thank you, Dave, for remembering me," she said softly; and her husband had his reward.

If he had told his thoughts, which were supposed to be on the paper, they would have been as follows: "Let's see, what's the next anniversary day? Oh, yes, it's Easter. Well, she shall have another keepsake then."—Ladies' World, New York.

MINNESOTA DIVORCE LAW.

THE Suuperior Ministerial association, have prepared a petition to the Wisconsin legisislature for a change in the mrriage law.

In the preambles the association, while admitting that the 1899 law was an improvement, states that the fiveday license clause works a hardship; that the object of the law—to prevent clandestine marriages, elopements, etc.—is not accomplished. as another clause provides for a dispensation from the former clause by a court of record: that many intending marriage find it more convenient to cross the border line into one of the four adjoining states where such provisions do not previl: that the present law results in finacial loss to the state.

It appears, that Wisconsin is going to make a movement to keep the profit derived from marriage in their own state, but how about Minnesota?. Chapter 208, of the session law of 1901 makes it a crime punishable by almost death for a divorced person to marry in this state for six months after the granting of the decree of divorce,and a clerk of court don't dare to look at a divorced person until after six moths. Who is the gainer by this law?.If a party gets a decree of divorce in Crookston at 4:'o clock he can take the 5:o'clock train to Grand Forks,put a little good Minnesota cashinto mrriage fees, and return to his home the same evening with his wife.

The same thing can be done at Duluth, or at any other place near the state line, which makes us wonder why the people elect men, pay them $5 00 a day and send them to St.Paul to work for the interest of some other state.

SOME of the bigotry, have made the statement to look out for John Lind, if a bill is passed for the election of a United States senator by the people. Don't get alarmed gentleman,we can give him ¼ of a mile the start on a mile race with Gov.Van-Sant in harness, and no one kows it better than, John Lind.

Crookston Journal: The state board of health will prosecute several persons in Otter Tail and Douglas counties for not giving required notice of smallpox cases. Ninety unreported cases were found in Millerville recently and forty in Dresser.The disease has spread partly through the ignorance of those afflicted,but ignorance of the law does not save one from punishment. If people are living in the United States it is their business to learn the law. If some prosecutions and punishments are meted out to those who, no matter for what reason, have neglected to take at least the legl precautions against that loathsome disease.it will have a wonderful effect in awakening some people to their duties as inhabitanats of the United States. Leniency in this matter may turn out to be exceedingly costly,

A petition is being circulated by the farmers liveing at the upper-end of the lost river ditch to get state aid to open the ditch further east.The ditch can dispose of all the water that come to it,but the river needs a little assistance, for about one mile. Their petition will be presented to the legislature.

WE wonder if Jhon has forgotten Perry, on lake Erie, or does he want Dewey to jog, his memory.

WE can not understand waht further use this state has for Cole Younger. It is not the purpose of our people to torture any human being,and he has had enoug. Let him go.

THERE is being to much prejudice show by some of our senators, against the admission of Oklahoma, as a state. It is not desireable to have to many pitchfork Tillman's in the American house of lords, but they will not be sent from Oklahoma as it is settled by people from the east and north, who do not use fire and brimstone as their principal diet.

ENGELAND and Germany have picked up the rong party to bluff when they tackle Uncle Samuel. They have began to show their teeth in Venezula waters, and our senate committee on military affairs want the adminestration, to make it plain that we will not be bluffed.If they do not want to fight they had better except the fair settlement offered by Venezuela and raise the blockade, as the American people are getting about warmed up to the fighting point.If war. is what Germany and Engeland are looking for all they have to do is keep bluffing around Venezula waters and they will find it,and when Dewey s guns crack they will not be fighting a little sand fort.

Serpent Worship In India.

Serpent worship, once very widely diffused, survives in India. Sometimes when Hindoos find a cobra in some crevice in the wall of their house it will often be reverenced, fed and propitiated, and if fear or the death of some one bitten by it induces them to remove it they will handle it tenderly and let it loose in some field. When Hindoos are bitten, they have far more confidence in their magic spell or "muntra" than in any medicine, even if they do not scruple to make use of medical aid.

Rice Paper Not Made From Rice.

Rice paper is not made from rice nor from rice stalks, nor has it any connection whatever with rice. It is of Chinese manufacture and is made from the pith of a certain tree resembling the elder. The pith is extracted from the tree in large cylindrical pieces, and with sharp knives the Chinese pare off the cylinder till instead of a cylindrical form they have a large flat sheet. This is pressed and other sheets until the required thickness is secured. The paper is then ready for use. It was called rice paper under the supposition that when it was first introduced that the paper was made from rice stalks, and the name has never been changed.

Postoffices and Addresses.

One of the rules of the postoffice department which often provokes dissatisfaction is that which prohibits a postmaster or any member of his family from giving out the addresses of patrons of the office. A person may be looking for some one whose address has been lost or misplaced. What is more natural than to go to the postoffice and ask for the information? But the postmaster, if he obeys the regulations, will not give it. The government acts on the theory that it is not its business to disclose the whereabouts of the patrons of the postoffice. Debtors may be pursued by importunate creditors; young women may be subjected to unpleasant attentions; hundreds of people for various reasons, good and bad, may desire to conceal from somebody their place of residence. It is not the business of the government to expose them to annoyance.—Youth's Companion.

The Racing Camel.

The ordinary camel, which will never hurry under any circumstances, has been transformed in southern Algeria into an animal so different in size, temper and appearance that it may almost be looked upon as a different race. This is the racing camel, prized for its speed. The result of many generations of careful breeding, which has been encouraged by valuable prizes, it can be depended upon for nine or ten miles an hour, which it can keep up for sixteen or seventeen hours, almost without a stop. Its value is five or ten times that of the beast of burden. The camel races are popular sport and are made exciting by the evident interest of the creatures themselves in winning.

Whales in the Thames.

In former times the appearance of a whale in the river Thames was considered ominous. One was caught off Greenwich three months prior to the death of Oliver Cromwell, and the common opinion was expressed by Heath in his "Flagellum." "It pleased God," he remarks, "to usher in his end with a great whale three months before, June 2, that came up as far as Greenwich and there was killed." Evelyn, in his "Diary," under the date of June 8, 1658, mentions that a whale was killed off Greenwich and that it drew an "infinite concourse to see it by water, horse, coach and on foot from London and all parts." According to Robert Hubert, in his "Catalogue of Natural Rarities," the tongue of this whale was exhibited daily for some time at the "Miter, near the west end of St. Paul's church."

In February, 1857, another whale was caught in the Thames, and in the Times of that month appeared an advertisement for a piece of ground, some 40 feet by 60 feet, "on which to exhibit a whale." The piece of ground advertised for was found in the Mile End road, and the whale was exhibited until March 14. In the same month—namely, on March 21—expired the house of commons, which had been elected in 1852.

Having Fun With a Tragedian.

On one of the times when Barry Sullivan, the great Irish tragedian, was playing Hamlet a certain clever low comedian named Hoskins was the gravedigger. After answering Sullivan's question, "How long will a man lie in the earth ere he rot?" Hoskins proceeded with the business of illustrating his reply.

Taking up Yorick's skull he spoke the words of the text: "Now, here's a skull that hath lain in the earth three and twenty years. Whose do you think it was?"

"Nay, I know not," replied Sullivan as Hamlet.

"This skull, sir," said Hoskins, "was Diavolo Antonio's, whom Booth fought in this city!"

The house roared with laughter, while Sullivan stamped and fumed, exclaiming: "Yorick's, sir! Yorick's!"

"No," said Hoskins coolly, when the tumult had subsided, and taking up another skull. "This is Yorick's skull, the king's jester; but t'other's Antonio's, just as I told you."—Kansas City Independent.

Bottom of a Sea Falling Out.

Scientists tell us that, counting from the sea level, the lowest body of water on the globe is the Caspian sea. For centuries its surface has been gradually settling down until now it is about eighty-five feet lower than that of its near neighbor, the Black sea, which also lies far below the level of the oceans. The common conclusion all along has been that the Caspian was simply losing its waters by evaporation, but recent investigation shows that this is not the case. Soundings made and compared with records of soundings made over 100 years ago reveal the astounding fact that there is even a greater depth of water now than then. This leaves but one hypothesis that would seem at all tenable—that the bottom of the sea is actually sinking. There is much speculation in scientific circles as to what will be the final outcome.

NATIONAL PHANTOMS

GHOSTS THAT HAUNT THE UNITED STATES CAPITOL.

A Story of Specters That Stalk at Night When the Halls of Legislation Are Gloomy and Deserted, as Told by One of the Old Guards.

Like most repositories of good stories, the ancient man who has spent decades as a guard in the capitol in Washington did not yield up the fullness of his narratory riches without a struggle.

"It's unpleasant to be made a mock of by the skeptical," he protested. "Do you believe in ghosts, young man?"

"If answering in the affirmative begets an interesting tale, I do," returned the writer.

"Well, starting on the premise that you do believe to some extent in the supernatural, I will admit you to my confidence," resumed the old guard, and here goes for the authentic yarn of the spooks that haunt the nation's capitol:

"In the long, monotonous watches of the night innumerable are the spooks, hobgoblins and the eerie, vapory things which glide from the shadowy nooks and crannies of the intangible nowhere to people the capitol's vast stretches of darkness. Of course you know of the extraordinary acoustic freaks which obtain in many parts of the great building—how a whisper, a breathed word at one particular point is audible at another scores of feet distant? Yes. Now, at night these acoustic spirits simply go mad. Where they by day were pygmies they expand into giants, and a whistle, a sudden sound, a footfall, resolves itself into a pandemonium.

"Weird, terrifying noises beat upon the eardrums of the watchmen as they pursue their lonely patrols through the seeming miles of corridors, and then the spooks, the shades of the nation's great, the astral bodies of those that toiled in obscurity for the nation's good, dodge the watchmen's step, some grand and awful in their speechless dignity, some creeping humbly about in apologetic silence, some laughing, some sobbing, but all of them horrible—horrible."

The old man paused to muse.

"Do you know," he said, breaking into his own reverie explosively, "Feb. 23 is a date dreaded by many of the capitol night guards? It was on this day, in 1848, that John Quincy Adams died in the chamber of the house of representatives, now Statuary hall, where the exact spot is marked by a brass tablet. Promptly at midnight on every anniversary of his death the shade of John Quincy Adams appears in a sort of phosphorescent glow over this brass tablet. Oh, dozens of guards have seen it from time to time as well as I, and I can refer you to many of them for affirmation of my assertions.

"Once over the spot the shade begins to gesticulate, after the manner of a member addressing the house. Then, all of a sudden, the fine face becomes distorted and agonized, the gracefully waving arms fall convulsively, and down sinks the shade with all the movements of an expiring man. Then the phosphorescent glow fades away, and the ethereal effigy dissolves.

"But, although lost sight of, its presence is still made known by the 'clump, flop, clump, flop,' of invisible footfalls departing down one of the long vacant corridors.

"Stranger than this is the ghost of the entire congress of 1848, which appears in vigorous if spooky session every once in a while in Statuary hall, the old hall of representatives, as I have previously remarked. Inaudible, but spirited, are the debates; energetic to the bursting point of vehemence are the silent political dissensions. Provoked by a doubting Thomas, a member of the capitol night watch several years ago made affidavit that he had seen this ghostly congress in session. Yes, he was a sober man and true.

"The shade of General John A. Logan is a frequent visitor at the capitol. Almost every alternate night at half past 12 o'clock this ghost materializes at the door of the room occupied by the senate committee on military and militia. Silently the door swings open, and out steps the looming and luminous presence, to stalk in stately dignity away into the swallowing gloom. This is a favorite phantom with the guards. Its conduct is exemplary.

"Then there is the shade of Vice President Wilson, who died in his room in the senate end of the capitol, you will recall. Its peregrinations are few and desultory. When it does come, there is always an expression of concern and self absorption in the ghostly face. The movements of the vapory body are restless and hurried.

"All of the older members of the night watch are well acquainted with Vice President Wilson's apparition and never fail to salute it, although, truth to tell, the shade remains haughtily indifferent to their deference. This spook rarely fails to put in an appearance when the body of a dead legislator or statesman of national renown is lying in state in the capitol.

"Deep in the subcellar vaults spooks of lesser magnitude revel in hordes. Immediately beneath the hall of representatives every night is to be found a tall, erect, gaunt specter, whose identity has remained a mystery for years in spite of unceasing efforts on the part of the night watch to uncover the secret of its origin and antecedents. Its hands are clasped behind its transparent back in a convulsive clutch, and the face evinces a condition of emotions prodigiously wrought upon. Many attempts have been made by guards with rubber soles on their shoes to catch this wraith unawares, but failure is the invariable result. Presto! it has blown into thin air before the sleuthing watchman is within forty feet of it."—New York Herald.

NAPOLEON'S AWFUL HAND.

One Theory of the Great Man's Failure at Waterloo.

Napoleon, according to Alexander Dumas, lost such battles as he did lose because he wrote such a fiendish hand. His generals could not read his notes and letters, typewriting had not been invented, and the trembling marshals, afraid of disobeying and striving to interpret the indecipherable commands, loitered, wandered and did not come up to the scratch, or not to the right scratch. Thus Waterloo was lost. Cannot you fancy Grouchy handing round Napoleon's notes on that sanguinary Sunday? "I say," cries the marshal to his aid-de-camp, "is that word Gembloux or Wavre? Is this Blucher or Bulow?" So probably Grouchy tossed up for it, and the real words may have been none of these at which he offered his conjectures. Meanwhile on the left and center D'Erlon and Jerome and Ney were equally puzzled and kept on sending cavalry to places where it was very uncomfortable (though our men seldom managed to hit any of the cavaliers, firing too high) and did no sort of good. Napoleon may never have been apprised of these circumstances. His old writing master was not on the scene of action. Nobody dared to say, "Sire, what does this figure of a centiped mean, and how are we to construe these two thick strokes flanked by blots?" The imperial temper was peppery; the great man would have torn off his interrogator's epaulets and danced upon them. Did he not once draw his pistol to shoot a little dog that barked at his horse? And when the pistol missed fire the great soldier threw it at the dog and did not hit him. The little dog retreated with the honors of war.

Such was the temper of Napoleon, and we know what Marlborough thought of the value of an equable temper. Nobody could ask Bonaparte to write a legible hand, so his generals lived a life of conjecture as to his meaning, and Waterloo was not a success, and the emperor never knew why. Of all his seven or eight theories of his failure at Waterloo, his handwriting was not one. Yet if this explanation had occurred to him Napoleon would certainly have blamed his pens, ink and paper. Those of Nelson at Copenhagen were very bad. "If your guns are no better than your pens," said a Danish officer who came in under a flag of truce before the fight and was asked to put a message into writing, "you had better retire."—Andrew Lang in Longman's Magazine.

SICKROOM PHILOSOPHY.

Never confine a patient to one room if you can obtain the use of two.

Never play the piano to a sick person if you can play on strings or sing.

Never stand and fidget when a sick person is talking to you. Sit down.

Never complain that you cannot get a feeding cup if there is a teapot to be had instead.

Never read fast to a sick person. The way to make a story seem short is to tell it slowly.

Never judge the condition of your patient from his appearance during a conversation. See how he looks an hour afterward.

Never put a hot water bottle next to the skin. Its efficiency and the patient's safety are both enhanced by surrounding the bottle with flannel.

Never allow the patient to take the temperature himself. Many patients are more knowing than nurses where there is a question of temperature.

Hot Cross Buns.

In its early days, when, it is to be hoped, it was more toothsome than it is now, the hot cross bun played some part in converting the people of these islands to Christianity. Pagan England was in the habit of eating cakes in honor of the goddess of spring, and Christian missionaries found that though they could alter the views of the people in reference to religious matters they could not induce them to withhold from the consumption of confectionery. So they put the sign of the cross upon the bun of the Saxon era and launched it upon missionary enterprise which has extended through the intervening centuries and survived till now.—London Tit-Bits.

A Wet Umbrella.

Never leave an umbrella standing on the point in the ordinary way when wet. The water trickles down, spoiling the silk and making the wires rusty. It is also a mistake to open it and leave it standing, as this stretches the silk, making it baggy so that it is impossible to fold it smoothly. The proper way is to shake out as much of the water as possible, then stand the umbrella on its handle to drain.

Comparisons Are Odious.

Perkins, Sr.—Pedigree! The question is, is he wuth anything? Why, boy, them sassiety folks what comes here in the summer has pedigrees.—Brooklyn Life.

A Barrier.

"What have you in the way of beefsteak today?" asked the cheerful customer who hadn't paid his bill.

"Well," replied the frank butcher, "I reckon about the only thing in the way is its price."—Baltimore News.

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State, but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

> "I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, Member of Congress.

THE season of catching cold is upon us. The cough and the sneeze and the nasal twang are to be heard on every hand. The origin of chronic catarrh, the most common and dreadful of diseases, is a cold.

This is the way the chronic catarrh generally begins. A person catches cold, which hangs on longer than usual. The cold generally starts in the head and throat. Then follows sensitiveness of the air passages which incline one to catch cold very easily. At last the person has a cold all the while seemingly, more or less discharge from the nose, hawking, spitting, frequent clearing of the throat, nostrils stopped up, full feeling in the head, and sore, inflamed throat.

The best time to treat catarrh is at the very beginning. A bottle of Peruna properly used, never fails to cure a common cold, thus preventing chronic catarrh.

While many people have been cured of chronic catarrh by a single bottle of Peruna, yet, as a rule, when the catarrh becomes thoroughly fixed more than one bottle is necessary to complete a cure. Peruna has cured cases innumerable of catarrh of twenty years' standing. It is the best, if not the only internal remedy for chronic catarrh in existence.

But prevention is far better than cure. Every person subject to catching cold should take Peruna at once at the slightest symptom of cold or sore throat at this season of the year and thus prevent what is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh.

Send for free book on catarrh, entitled "Winter Catarrh," by Dr. Hartman. "Health and Beauty" sent free to women only.

Since David Kaphokohoakimohokeweoaah resigned his office as postmaster at Keokea, Island of Maui, Hawaii, the fourth assistant postmaster general has been unable to find anyone to take the office. David of the unpronounceable name has been holding down the office ever since Hawaii was made a territory, but some time ago he got more lucrative employment on a sugar plantation at three dollars a month and left the government service, where he received $24 a year. Mr. Kaphokohoakimohokeweoaah is said to be a lineal descendant of the famous King Kalitapokamikokiwealoha, who, tradition tells, was "very fond of missionaries."—N. Y. Sun.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, Jan. 27.—The house alone was in session yesterday.

The tax program adhered to by the Democratic minority of the legislature during the extra session of 1902 yesterday made its appearance in the house in three bills introduced by Representative J. H. Dorsey, of Glencoe. The bills are almost exact copies of those introduced at the extra session. They provide for an amendment to the constitution and for the taxation of foreign and domestic corporations.

The proposed tax amendment to the constitution provides for the taxation of all real and personal property, credits, stocks and franchises at their true value in money, and for an income tax. It would allow the legislature to exempt from taxation any class or classes of property to preserve equality should an income tax be enacted. The amendment provides for the usual exemption of property used for educational, charitable and public purposes, and for an exemption of not more than $200 for each individual, as the legislature may enact.

The following bills were introduced: Authorizing townships to issue bonds, not to exceed 15 per cent of their assessed valuation, for the construction of roads. Towns and counties.

Providing that when roads are changed the old road shall remain open for use until closed and vacated by order of the county commissioners. Roads and bridges.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—Still the constitutional amendment bills keep coming in. Senator Alley came to the front of the senate yesterday with proposed amendments to sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 of article 9, providing in effect as follows:

That all taxes shall be uniform on the same class of subjects.

That the right of taxation shall never be surrendered.

That educational, charitable and religious institutions shall be exempt; also burial grounds and cemeteries.

That there shall be a personal property exemption of $300 for one member of each family.

That municipal corporation may levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements.

A bill introduced by Senator Steppens, by request, makes all rural free delivery mail routes in the state, public highways four rods wide throughout. Village trustees are authorized to keep the routes in good condition. Towns and counties.

The senators are disturbed over the disappearance of property from their desks.

House bills passed were H. F. No. 10, by Mr. Hickey, legalizing the issue of bonds for an armory by the city of St. Paul; H. F. No. 21, by Mr. Helliwell, legalizing certain transfers of cemetery property in Minneapolis; H. F. No. 28, by Mr. Bardwell, amending the law relating to forcible entry and unlawful detainer, and two curative acts.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The senate yesterday, after cleaning up the routine matters, passed the following bills:

To appropriate $150,000 for legislative expenses.

To provide that park earnings accruing in cities of more than 50,000 inhabitants go to the boards rather than the general city fund.

To repeal the act limiting the salary of the county treasurer of Scott county to $1,200.

To enable churches to acquire and transfer cemetery property.

To empower cities of not more than 10,000 inhabitants to issue certificates to the amount of $5,000 for a water works fund.

To divide the Thirty-third district, comprising the First and Second wards of St. Paul into two representative districts.

To prohibit counties purported to have been organized after Oct. 1, 1902, from incurring liability pending state proceedings to test the validity of their organization.

To repeal the special acts regulating the salaries of the officers of Mower county.

Speaker Babcock yesterday named the following committee to investigate the fuel situation in Minnesota, as provided for in the Jacoby resolution: Representatives Pehler, Hinton, Ole Peterson, Jacoby, Gillette, Bouck, Ruliffson, Hugo and Hawley.

The house entered upon general orders in the morning and passed H. F. 54 by Stark, changing the time of holding district court in the First judicial district of Kenebeck county; H. F. No. 75 by Wilson, providing that certain villages, boroughs and cities may designate the depositories for their money; H. F. 73 by Budd, amending the law relating to giving of security by certain officers, and H. F. 18 by Hugo, amending the laws relating to the incorporations of Masonic bodies.

After considerable debate, progress was reported on Erickson's H. F. 104, allowing county commissioners in counties of less than 50,000 population compensation of $5 per day and mileage, while on county business, and Stevenson's H. F., limiting the time for the commencement of action for the recovery of estates in dower or by courtesy. The latter bill was referred back to the committee on judiciary.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate finance committee yesterday discussed for three hours Senator A. F. Ferris' measure to appropriate $150,000 for a state sanitarium for consumptives near Walker, in Cass county.

After listening to the arguments the committee went into executive session, but arrived at no definite decision. Arrangements were made to make further investigations. The following bills were passed:

To legalize the incorporation of villages where technical mistakes have been made in the proceedings.

To legalize the issue of bonds for the construction of the Minneapolis court house and city hall.

Business was very light in both branches.

A simple but impressive commemoration of the birthday of William McKinley was held in the house yesterday. The members of the house, standing, sang the first verse of the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The house committee on prison labor and other members of the house yesterday visited the state prison at Stillwater. There were forty-two people on the special trolley car which carried the party to and from Stillwater.

A bill prepared by the Anti-Vaccination Society of St. Paul, forbidding compulsory vaccination, was introduced yesterday by Representative Joel E. Gregory, of St. Paul.

Eight bills were introduced and the following passed:

Fixing the time for holding general terms of the district court in the First judicial district, composed of Washington, Chisago, Kanabec and Pine counties.

Authorizing cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants to designate depositories, and relieve treasurers from liability for funds deposited.

Permitting the incorporation of Scottish Rites lodges of the Masonic orders.

Legalizing bonds issued by counties for the construction of roads and bridges.

St. Paul, Jan. 31.—The capitol appropriation bill, providing for an additional $1,500,000 for the completion of the structure, was passed in the senate yesterday without a dissenting vote.

Other bills passed were: To amend the law with reference to appeals from the probate court.

S. F. 45: Thorpe—To allow the voters of a township to hold elections in incorporated villages and cities located in the township.

Legislation against the grasshopper was introduced in the senate by Senator A. D. Stephens, of Crookston. The bill seeks to prevent the destruction of "grasses, grains and other crops" by the insects. It gives the county commissioners of each county full power to conduct a warfare of extermination.

MINNESOTA BRIEFS.

Congressman Said There Were No Petrified Songs in the Petrified Forest.

Some time ago in the house of representatives Congressman Lacey, who is chairman of the committee on public lands, was urging the passage of his bill to make a national park of the petrified forest in Arizona and telling the house that this tract was one of the wonders of the world, when Representative Robinson interrupted him, says a Washington exchange.

"May I ask," said the Indiana representative, "if this is the forest where petrified birds sing petrified songs on the petrified branches of the petrified trees—the one where petrified fish are swimming in petrified streams; where the petrified buffalo is seen suspended in the petrified atmosphere, having tried to jump across the canyon and having been petrified in transit and still hangs there because the force of gravitation is petrified, too?" "Oh, no," replied Mr. Lacey, "that is in the Yellowstone. There are no petrified songs in this forest; all the songs are up to date."

STANDING ON HIS RIGHTS.

Knew One Point of Law and He Used It for His Own Protection.

The next witness was a hard-fisted, resolute yoeman with a bristling chin beard, says the Chicago Tribune.

"Mr. Gigson," said the attorney for the defense, "are you acquainted with the reputation of this man for truth and veracity in the neighborhood in which he lives?"

"I reckon I am," replied the witness.

"I will ask you to state what it is."

"Well, sir, his reputation fur truth ain't no good. His rep'tation fur vrassity—well, that's diff'runt. Some says he does, and some says he don't."

"Witness," interposed the judge, "do you know the meaning of 'veracity?'"

"I reckon I do."

"What do you understand by the word?"

The witness twirled his hat in his fingers a few moments without replying.

Then he looked up defiantly.

"I refuse to answer that question, judge," he said, "on the ground that it might discriminate me."

A New Novel Attracting Attention.

"Lionel Ardon," by Malcolm Dearborn, is a new historical novel brought out by Dillingham & Co., in November last. It has many points on which to commend it for its superiority to the reading public. There is, at present, such a deluge of new novels that when one can be picked out whose interest is so intense and whose characters are so well drawn like all productions of true merit, it is soon placed in the first rank. At the time of the publication of this volume we had the pleasure of favorably reviewing it, and we are pleased to note the general appreciation of "Lionel Ardon" by the American press. The following is from the Boston Beacon:

"In this book the reader renews acquaintance with English history by means of a story delicately conceived and very interestingly told. The historical characters are well drawn and the imaginary ones are true to life past or present. This is the first novel to utilize the beautiful face and character of Lady Jane Grey and she makes a very attractive part of the story. Lionel Ardon from boyhood to manhood plays worthily the hero's part. The book is very strikingly bound in dark blue and gilt with a decorative touch by the outlines of the rose and thistle in colors and two inverted swords in white."

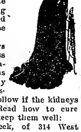
WOMEN SUFFER.



Hard to attend to daily duties with a back that aches like the toothache. A woman's kidneys give her constant trouble. Backache is the first warning of sick kidneys and should never be neglected.

Urinary disorders annoy, embarrass and worry womankind. Dangerous diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease are sure to follow if the kidneys are neglected. Read how to cure the kidneys and keep them well:

Mrs. James Beck, of 314 West Whitesboro Street, Rome, N. Y., says: "I was troubled with my kidneys for eight or nine years; had much pain in my back; as time went on I could hardly endure it; I could not stand except for a few moments at a time; I grew weak and exhausted; I could not even do light housework, let alone washing and ironing; I could not stoop or bend; my head ached severely; I was in pain from my head down to my heels; centering in the kidneys it was a heavy, steady, sickening ache; I could not rest nights, and got up mornings weak and tired. I thought I was about done for, when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for kidney complaints, and got them at Broughton & Craves's drug store. Within a week after commencing their use I began to improve, and from that time on rapidly grew better. I used five boxes in all and was cured. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many others, and my case ought to convince the most skeptical sufferer to give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. James Beck will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

MARTHA WASHINGTON

Well Fitted for Part of First "First Lady of the Land."

Martha Washington would not have been fitted for a place in history as the "first lady of the republic" if she had not possessed a mind of her own, and been capable of commanding her household, and occasionally her husband. It is recorded by Miss Bremer that a guest at Mount Vernon overheard her distinguished hostess giving George a piece of her mind after they had retired for the night. He listened in profound silence, and when she had said her say, he answered pleasantly:

"Now, good sleep to you, my dear."

The general's pet name for his wife was Patsy. That she made him happy in his domestic relations at all times is gathered from his letters and diary, in which he often alludes to his "domestic felicity."

Martha Washington was of plump figure, full of grace, sprightliness, and with an aristocratic bearing that was due to generations of refined and elegant prosperity. The world withheld from her no good thing; she was of a pure and innocent mind, and if there was some haughtiness in her nature, it never degenerated into hardness, but rather added dignity to her mature years. She was never an idle woman, for when she had ceased to fulfill the arduous duties of social life she taught the colored children of Mount Vernon to sew and cut out work every day for the negroes to finish, and knitted colored stockings for everybody on the place, and for numerous friends, who received them as treasures.

Martha Washington was of Welsh descent, which accounts for that rare blending of sterling domestic qualities with the lighter and more brilliant characteristics of Virginia birth and breeding, which were, however, not incompatible with fitness for housekeeping, in every branch of which she was versed.

Mrs. Washington survived her husband two and a half years, dying in 1802. A peculiarity of her later years was a marked resemblance to Gen. Washington, which is quite apparent in some of her portraits. A partnership of 40 years of such an intimate nature seemed to have developed the similarity of expression and feature which goes far to prove the theory that people closely united grow to resemble each other.

After Washington's death she destroyed her entire correspondence with him, unwilling that the confidence they had shared should ever be given to the public.

The sum of her virtues and qualifications may be thus estimated: She was worthy to share the pilgrimage and be the life companion of as illustrious a man as George Washington.—Detroit Free Press.

WASHINGTON'S MOTHER

Thought George Should Not Be Praised Too Much.

She was a beautiful girl, called the "Rose of Epping Forest." She married Augustine Washington, a widower and a gentleman of high standing and noble character, of large property and considerable personal attractions. She was brought to the large old-fashioned colonial house on the banks of the Potomac, where we can fancy the bride covertly exploring her new home and scanning the footprints of her predecessor. In this voyage of discovery she was arrested at a small, but rare treasury of books. The fly-leaf of one revealed the name of the owner, the first wife, "Jane Washington." Finding the inkhorn she wrote firmly beneath, "And Mary Washington," probably the first time she had written her new name. We all know how she read this book—it was Sir Matthew Hale's Contemplations — to her stepsons and her own sons; how it was reverenced by George Washington, and how it is treasured to-day at our national Mecca, Mount Vernon, where, both as mother and mistress, Mary Washington led and guided her boy into the manhood that made him his country's leader and guide. Here, also, as the revolutionary war went on, and her neighbors thronged her with plaudits and praises of her noble son — their idol and hers — she restrained their extravagant words, saying simply: "George seems to have deserved well of his country, but we must not praise too much; George has not forgotten his duty."

When she heard of the surrender at Yorktown she raised her hands and fervently thanked Heaven that all was over. She had not seen her son for seven years. Now he was coming home. No word of "glory" or "honors" fell from his lips or hers. Yet this king among men had his reward. His mother had lived to welcome him back!

One has only to recall the familiar story of this noble mother's life to recognize its molding power upon the patriot, the soldier and the statesman. His high temper and his habit of self-control were like her, as were his principles of equity and justice, his power of dealing with great and grave issues, and his habit of practical business detail. It was like her and like him, when she knew the world was regarding him as head of the nation, leader of victorious hosts, to say: "He has been a good son. I believe he has done his duty as a man."—Christian Herald.

TIME AND ROMANCE OF WASHINGTON.

There is a tendency in both literature and history, says the Chicago Daily News, to make mythical heroes of great men, to place them upon a serene Olympus and worship them as gods of our own making. This tendency has become so strong in the case of Washington that probably no American is unbiased by its influence.

Yet, after all, it is the real man, not the myth, which is important to us. When we have added our own cloudy generalization to a simple fact or truth we may or may not have added to the pleasure or instruction of mankind, but in doing so we have usually dimmed the lustrous fact at the center of our self-evolved nimbus.

Happily the tendency among historians to-day is toward the other extreme, and while as regards Washington there is frequently a natural irritation with those men who refuse to generalize, but search instead for facts, on the whole they have accomplished an excellent work in making Washington more of a real man to us than he otherwise would have been. The modern industrious historian in his search among archives and dusty records rarely lets any fact, however insignificant, escape him. And sometimes by means of this diligent dusting of records facts of genuine interest and significance are brought to light. We now know, for instance, from one of his letters, that Ben Franklin did not approve of that glorious old Boston tea party; that Henry Clay once paid $50 for a kiss at a church fair (and the girl was not very pretty, either), and that George Washington could, on occasion, dun a debtor with grave courtesy. All of Washington's letters that have come to light in comparatively recent years are alike in that they show the courtesy, the characteristic honor and honesty of a gentleman, and they increase our respect and admiration for a singularly lofty and noble nature.

Ford's life of Washington, while criticised in some quarters at the time of its publication, has also greatly contributed to our knowledge of the man whose memory the nation celebrates to-day. The careful study of Washington's youth and young manhood makes it clear to the reader of this history of his life how Washington developed from a plain, quiet young Virginia planter into the commander who was always calm and knew what to do when others were disturbed and in a flurry. Slow and diffident of speech, his patriotism was not of the fiery or passionate character of that of a Henry or a Lee, but when action was resolved upon it was to this quiet, dignified, collected man the nation turned and soon learned to trust him implicitly. That sober judgment, that unhesitating devotion to right and that constancy which could stand any trial were precisely the qualities needed in his place and enabled him eventually to wrest victory from what often seemed impending ruin.

America is singularly fortunate in possessing as a historical legacy the memory of George Washington, "the ideal American"—ideal as denoting the best qualities in the national character in what is now recognized as America's heroic age.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, 3.—Senator Charles Johnson, of St. Peter, yesterday introduced a bill to appropriate $2,500 to relieve the famine sufferers of Norway and Sweden.

An appropriation of $100,000 for the establishment of a state reformatory for women is called for in a bill introduced by Senator George P. Wilson.

Senator George P. Wilson's measure, which allows women to testify against their husbands in cases of non-support and makes non-support a misdemeanor instead of a felony.

A bill allowing the removal of the Minneapolis law library was passed.

The house yesterday killed its first bill of this session. The measure was that introduced by Representative J. D. Budd, of Two Harbors, which allowed town and school district officials to require surety bonds of treasurers, and to pay a reasonable amount for surety bonds furnished by officials. The vote was 57 to 28.

The following bills were passed:

Legalizing mortgage foreclosure sales in certain cases.

Providing for the sale of heat, light, water and power by villages to other municipalities before the same is sold to individuals.

Legalizing instruments authorizing attorneys to foreclose mortgages by advertisement.

Limiting the time for the foreclosure of mortgages by advertisement to fifteen years from their date without extension for any cause.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—The movement among the manufacturers of the state to construct on the state fair grounds a building for the display of their products yesterday took definite form when bills were introduced in both branches of the legislature calling for an appropriation of $50,000.

The house decided not to investigate the prison labor question.

The house and the senate committees on roads and bridges yesterday got together to agree on a measure for the promotion of good roads.

The following bills were passed:

Repealing section of the law of 1895 which holds the owners of traction engines liable to the extent of $50 damages done to bridges.

Authorizing county commissioners on petition to vacate, change or establish highways.

Relating to the inheritance of title to real estate.

Authorizing cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants to issue certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $5,000 not later than March 1, 1903, for the construction of water works.

Allowing Hennepin county to house in the court house and maintain the library of the Hennepin county bar association.

The senate yesterday, in committee of the whole, approved Senator William Harrington's bill to prevent the use of adulterating substances in the manufacture of vinegar. The measure, introduced by Senator A. R. McGill, to increase the salary of the attorney general from $3,500 to $4,500 was also approved.

The senate yesterday was in session scarcely an hour. There were no bills on the calendar for final passage, and those on general orders were not of great importance. The body will meet at 10 o'clock this morning.

St. Paul, Feb. 5.—The senate yesterday passed Senator B. E. Sundberg's bill, which authorizes townships to issue bonds for building roads.

The measure, as amended by the committee on towns and counties, stipulates that the bonds must not exceed 15 per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable property in the township and that the rate of interest must not exceed 6 per cent.

Senator O. N. Mausten, of Aitkin, yesterday introduced a measure appropriating $4,000 annually for two years for the support of the state farm school at Grand Rapids and $3,000 for a president's residence.

Senator O. G. Laugen, of Houston, introduced a bill to increase the apportionment for graded schools from $400 to $500.

In the house the following bills were passed:

Submitting a constitutional amendment providing that school loans may be made by the state board of investment to an amount not exceeding 15 per cent of the assessed valuation.

Authorizing county commissioners to reimburse persons for money illegally collected as probate fees under the law of 1885.

Relating to the determination of heirship of government homesteads of deceased homestead settlers.

Authorizing cities to acquire property by gift or devise and manage and control the same for public purposes.

Legalizing certificates of sales and the records thereof made under mortgage powers and executions.

St. Paul, Feb. 6.—Promise of legislation which will make impossible in this state the raising of railroad freight rates, the discontinuance of joint rates or any manipulation of rates which might be to the detriment of the shipper, was made by the introduction of H. F. No. 221, framed by the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, and bearing the name of Representative Ward Stone.

Owing to the several normal school and other junkets, the session of the house was as short as the attendance was small, but it was signalized by the introduction of the first bill to come from Speaker Babcock's hand. The bill was a modest effort, however, appropriating money for a wagon bridge in Wadena county.

Three bills on the senate calendar passed, S. F. No. 68, to regulate the manufacture and sale of vinegar; S. F. No. 29, appropriating $5,000 for the relief of Beda Wingstrand, and S. F. No. 19, fixing the salary of the attorney-general.

One bill on general order was recommended to pass, S. F. No. 83, to provide for water works and light in all villages in the state operating under special or general laws.

St. Paul, Feb. 7.—The senate yesterday recommended for passage Senator R. B. Brower's bill granting the 2 per cent tax on fire insurance premiums to firemen's relief associations.

The 200 students of the state university who volunteered their services in the Spanish-American war will not be forgotten if a bill is passed which yesterday was introduced by Senator R. E. Thompson, of Preston. The measure appropriates $1,500 for erecting a memorial on the campus of the university.

The following bills were passed:

To increase the salary of the attorney general from $3,500 to $4,500.

To appropriate $5,000 for the relief of Beda Wingstrand.

To prohibit the use of adulterating substances in the manufacture of vinegar.

The non-partisan nomination and election of judges are provided for in an amendment to the primary law, introduced yesterday by Representative P. E. Dowling, of Eveleth.

The house committee on towns and counties yesterday decided to recommend for passage the bill introduced by Representative A. L. Cole, of Walker, relating to the organization of new counties and the changing of county boundaries.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for the restoration to property owners of highways abandoned for more than three years in counties of more than 200,000 inhabitants.

Legalizing the $200,000 issue of bonds voted by the common council of Minneapolis for the erection of new school houses.

Fixing the time for holding general terms of the district court in Steele county.

Repealing the special law requiring bonds of county commissioners of Sibley county.

The Introduction of Forks.

Forks are articles of such common household necessity to us that we hardly realize that there was a time, and not so long ago either, when forks were entirely unknown. A knife was used at the table to cut up food, but the food so cut was afterward conveyed by the fingers to the mouth. Rich and poor alike were accustomed to this method and so thought it perfectly correct.

It was about the year 1600 and in the reign of James I. when forks were first introduced into England. This "piece of refinement," we are told, was derived from the Italians.

Responsibilities.

"Remember," said the serious citizen, "that wealth has its responsibilities."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "So long as you are humble and obscure you can say 'I seen it' and 'I done it' and eat with your knife all you want to."—Washington Star.

The Feet of Chameleons.

Chameleons, as no doubt readers are aware, all belong to the old world, and particularly to Africa. In their tongue, their feet and their eyes they differ remarkably from other lizards. Their feet, though possessing five toes, are divided into two grasping groups, looking like a hand-in mittens, and only by close examination you perceive the presence of the two or the three opposing respectively, but so close together as to appear like one broad one.

On the padded soles or palms of these grasping limbs you can feel and see the small—may one say—palpi, which enable them to grasp so firmly that it is difficult to detach a chameleon from its foothold. These clinging feet, together with their prehensile tail, enable them to sustain themselves on the branches in the strongest gale.

Paying a Call in China.

A Chinese bride called upon a foreign lady, says a missionary. On entering the room she deliberately turned her back upon her hostess and made an elaborate obeisance. Of course the foreign lady was amazed and annoyed, but she found out the reason of the strange proceeding afterward. The bride's conduct had conformed to Chinese etiquette.

She had performed her obeisance, her k'o-t'-ou, to the north because that is the direction of the royal abode. If the foreign lady was so ignorant as to stand on the south side of the room, that was not the bride's concern. She knew, if her hostess did not, in what direction to bow her head.

Boiled Oysters.

In "Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne" Swift writes to Stella, "Lord Masham made me go home with him to eat boiled oysters," and then he obligingly adds the recipe: "Take oysters, wash them clean; that is, wash their shells clean; then put your oysters in an earthen pot, with their hollow side down; then put this pot, covered, into a great kettle of water and let it boil. Your oysters are then boiled in their own liquor and do not mix with water."

Raphael's "Paul."

While Raphael was engaged in painting his celebrated frescoes he was visited by two churchmen, who began to criticise his work without understanding it. "The Apostle Paul has too red a face," said one. "He blushes even in heaven to see what hands the church has fallen into," replied the indignant painter.

An Early Norman Dinner.

The Saxon dinner arrangements were orderly compared with those of the early Normans, when the halls and passages were frequently the scene of a free fight between the servants bringing in the food and the crowds of hangers on endeavoring to snatch it from them. This nuisance became at length so intolerable that ushers of the hall and kitchen were established by King William Rufus to protect not only the cooks bringing in the dinner, but the guests arriving to partake of it. Upon the occasion of his great feast at Westminster 300 of these officers were on duty, some to guard the visitors as they ascended the steps and others to defend the threatened dishes.

Such was the uncivilized state of society at this period, but when later on the marauders disappeared from the great houses it became customary to carry in the dishes in procession, sometimes preceded by music and headed by the steward with his wand of office. It was the duty of an "asseour" or placer to arrange them upon the table; the ewers and napkins with which to perform their ablutions were presented to the guests by the esquires and pages, while it fell to the lot of the almoner to say grace.

A Great Feast.

There has never been prepared at any feast a bigger bowl of punch than that which was brewed by the Right Hon. Edward Russell when he was captain general and commander in chief of the forces in the Mediterranean seas. It was made in a fountain in a garden in the middle of four walks, all covered overhead with lemon and orange trees. In every walk there was a table the whole length of it, and on every table was a cold collation. In the huge fountains were the following ingredients: Four hogsheads of brandy, eight hogsheads of water, 25,000 lemons, twenty gallons of lime juice, 1,300 pounds of fine Lisbon sugar, five pounds of grated nutmegs, 300 toasted biscuits and a pipe of dry mountain Malaga.

Over the fountain was placed a great canopy, while in the midst of this lake of liquor there sailed a little sailor boy who filled the cups and replenished the glasses of all those who had a desire to drink. More than [illegible] put in an appearance at this feast.—London [illegible]

MADE TO STAND PULLING.

The Great Tensile Strength of the Government's Paper Money.

"The way some cashiers pay out small bills in exchange for large ones must make other men as tired as it wearies me," remarked an observing business man to another Washingtonian as they watched the cashier of a fashionable uptown cafe pull at and strip the ones and twos in exchange for a ten as though he were pulling a piece of molasses candy over a hook and hated to let go.

"It does," acquiesced his friend, who happened to be a United States treasury expert. "The way some cashiers jerk, snap and pull at bills as they pay them out is utterly absurd. The old adage about pinching a silver dollar until the eagle screams pales before the way the up to date flip cashier jerks the long green he handles.

"In this connection I will give you a fact that is not generally known, and that is the weight a new treasury single note, and four notes in a sheet, will sustain without breaking. The figures may be accepted as official and accurate.

"A single treasury note measures 3⅛ inches wide by 7¼ inches long and will suspend 41 pounds lengthwise and 91 pounds crosswise. Notes are printed four to a sheet. A sheet will suspend 108 pounds lengthwise and 177 pounds crosswise.

"The remarkable strength of a United States treasury note may thus be seen at a glance, and I venture to say that not one person in a million would have guessed the great tenacity of the paper which, when properly printed and stamped, becomes good money."

The cashier had interestedly listened to the treasury expert's explanation of the weight sustaining and necessarily resisting power of wear and tear of our paper money, and then he said:

"You see, it is this way: Bills stick together, see, and we cashiers have to make up any shortage out of our own pockets, and that's one reason why we snap and jerk the bills so hard, so we will not pay out two for one, as might be done. Again, a two dollar bill is frequently mistaken for a five, and vice versa, and by counting out our money as if it were drops of our lifeblood we are less liable to pass out one for the other."—Washington Star.

Half the trouble of this troubled world comes from the fact that, for one reason or another, women are not able to look up to the men with whom they have dealings.—"The Vultures."

A Couple of Inscriptions.

"I was in New York one day and took a trip down to Coney Island," said the agent of a Pittsburg nail mill. "I had heard of the slick fellows down there, and so I left my watch at home and carried a dummy across which I pasted a slip of paper bearing the words, 'Look inside for a fool.' I hadn't got the salt taste of the ocean yet when the watch disappeared, and it was three hours later, as I sat in a booth drinking beer, when I felt that watch in a side pocket of my coat. I pulled it out in amazement, and I found my slip of paper replaced by one bearing the words, 'Look outside for an ass!' It may be that I got the bulge on the gang, but somehow I have always thought that they came out a trifle ahead—just a trifle."

Barbering Used to Be an Art.

Time was when barbering was a way up art. In ancient times barbers were surgeons, the only persons who could scientifically "let blood." In London there is still a barber surgeon class. They possess a cap given the guild by Charles II. Around the barber's pole still twines the snake, the subtlest beast of the field; a survival of the brazen serpent lifted up in the wilderness, the symbol of the healing art.

Not Concerned.

"Why don't you try to hand an honored name down to posterity?"

"I don't know," answered Senator Sorgbum. "Maybe I don't look far enough ahead. So long as my signature is honored at the bank I can't see that my credit with posterity makes much difference."—Washington Star.

THE LONDON TAPSTER.

Hard Luck Stories That Take the Place of Open Begging.

The plain and open tapster who accosts you in the street purely to beg may generally be known by an amazing overpoliteness in opening the conversation. He is the only person I know who begs pardon for taking the liberty of speaking to you, and by this sign you shall know him. They all begin by begging pardon for taking this not so very rare liberty, but only the duffers go on straightway to tap. The proficient tapsters approach the tap sideways, so to speak. Something like this, with a quick touch of the hat brim:

"Beg pardon, sir, I'm sure I 'umbly beg your pardon for takin' the great liberty of speakin' to you in a public thoroughfare like this, which I am quite aware it is a great liberty, sir, though trustin' you will kindly pardon the great liberty of a pore, 'ardworkin' man, sir, in takin' the great liberty of askin' if this street is the 'Aymarket, sir?" (Or the way to the Strand or the day of the month, or something.)

You answer the question, but you don't stop the stream of apologetics. "Thank you, kindly, sir," pursues the tapster, pouring out the words, "thank you kindly, sir, if you'll 'so far pardon the liberty of a pore, 'ardworkin' man, sir, in askin' the question, which unfortunately I was forced to take the great liberty, sir, through bein' out of work eighteen months an' nothink to est since last Toosday fortnight, sir, upon my word of honor, which nothink but the cries for bread of fourteen young children in arms would prevail on me, sir—so igstreme kind as you've bin to me, sir, which I shall never forget—to take the very great liberty, sir, in a public thoroughfare, of askin' which is the nearest work'ouse?"

If once more you give him information instead of coppers, you only provoke another speech of the same sort, for he can go on like that for a deal longer than you want to listen. It is only in the extreme that he will directly ask for money, though I fancy that it is merely caution that marks his guarded way, as they say in the lyric, for if accused of begging by some watchful policeman he can always plead that he was only asking a harmless question. And the questions are endless in variety. I give my solemn word that I was once buttonholed by one of these seedy tapsters with the apologetic request that I would tell him the number of stars on the national flag of the United States! This is a simple fact.—Leonard Larkin in the Strand.

The Title of "Mrs."

The title Mrs. was in olden time applied to unmarried as well as to married women and to young as well as old. Sir Walter Scott spoke of Joanna (unmarried) as Mrs. Joanna Baillie. Although it was not perhaps so universal to address quite young children as it was those over twenty-one by the title of Mrs., yet it was frequently done. The most ludicrous example of this occurs in the register of burials for the parish of St. Margaret, Westminster. The burial of Milton's second wife and that of his infant daughter, named after her, who died at the age of five months, are both recorded in that register, the name in each case being entered as "Mrs. Katherin Milton," without any mark of distinction save the letter "C" for "child," after the second name. Even in the reign of George II., as we read in "Pope's Letters," unmarried ladies used to be styled Mrs.

Wonderful Insect Vitality.

It is a standing puzzle to the entomologists how frail little insects of the mosquito and butterfly order can brave the cold of an arctic winter and yet retain their vitality. The larva of the milkweed butterfly has been exposed to an artificial blast 68 degrees below zero. Taken out of range of this artificial blizzard and gradually "thawed out" this same worm was able to creep in less than half an hour afterward. Butterflies have been found flitting joyously about in the highest latitude man has ever penetrated, and the mosquitoes of Alaska and Greenland are known to be the healthiest specimens of that race of little pests.

Engagement Rings.

The custom of giving engagement rings ranks back to long before the Christian era. With the ancient Egyptians engagement rings were always of iron, to indicate the mutual sacrifice of liberty of the contracting parties.

One of the very earliest adornments of betrothal rings was a loadstone, which symbolized the attractive force which drew a maiden from her own family circle into that of her husband. It is believed that the fourth finger has always been the bride's ring finger.

Hard to Part With.

The man at our boarding house has the remains of a once prosperous pocket comb, from which the teeth have long since fled.

"Why," we ask him, "do you carry that thing around with you—that worthless old comb?"

And he replies:

"Well, I can't part with it."—Baltimore News.

That Cry—"Oh, My Back!"

The little missionary, Doan's Kidney Pills, "free trial," carries ease, rest, comfort. Most people need kidney help; they who choose Doan's get it—help that lasts.

DEERFIELD, IND.—"When I sent for the trial box of Doan's Kidney Pills I had been afflicted for two months with pain in my back so bad that I could not get from the house to the barn. It was called rheumatism. I could get no relief from the doctors. I began to improve on taking the sample and got two boxes at our druggist's, and, although 68 years of age, I am almost a new man. I was troubled a good deal with my water—had to get up four and five times a night. That trouble is over with and once more I can rest the night through. My backache is all gone, and I thank you ever so much for the wonderful medicine, Doan's Kidney Pills."—JNO. H. HUBER, President Ridgeville, Indiana, State Bank.

BELDING, MICH., Jan. 14, 1903.—"I received trial box of Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me lots of good. I can now go to bed and lie on my right side—the pain there is all gone, also the stomach distress and belching of gas is all stopped, with the use of two boxes."—MRS. E. S. BEEM, R. F. D. No. 2, Reading, Mich.

BEAUTY AND PURITY

Ancient and Modern Ideas on the Subject. Time and Disease the Effacing Agents of Beauty. What Has Science Done to Restore the Lily and the Rose?

Socrates called beauty a short-lived tyranny, Plato a privilege of nature, Theocritus a delightful prejudice, Theophrastus a silent cheat, Carneades a solitary kingdom, Homer a glorious gift of nature, Ovid a favor of the gods. Aristotle affirmed that beauty was better than all the letters of recommendation in the world, and yet none of these distinguished authorities has left us even a hint of how beauty is to be perpetuated, or the ravages of age and disease defied. Time soon blends the lily and the rose into the pallor of age, disease dots the fair face with cutaneous disfigurations and crimsons the Roman nose with unsightly flushes, moth, if not rust, corrupts the glory of eyes, teeth, and lips yet beautiful by defacing the complexion, and fills the sensitive soul with agony unspeakable.

If such be the unhappy condition of one afflicted with slight skin blemishes, what must be the feelings of those in whom torturing humors have for years run riot, covering the skin with scales and sores and charging the blood with poisonous elements to become a part of the system until death? It is vain to attempt to portray such suffering. Death in many cases might be considered a blessing. The blood and fluids seem to be impregnated with a fiery element which, when discharged through the pores upon the surface of the body, inflames and burns until, in his efforts for relief, the patient tears the skin with his nails, and not until the blood flows does sufficient relief come to cause him to desist.

Thus do complexional defects merge into torturing disease, and piqued vanity give place to real suffering. A little wart on the nose or cheek grows to the all-devouring lupus, a patch of tetter on the palm of the hand or on the limbs suddenly envelops the body in its fiery embrace, a bruise on the leg expands into a gnawing ulcer, which reaches out its fangs to the sufferer's heart in every paroxysm of pain, a small kernel in the neck multiplies into a dozen, which eat away the vitality, great pearl-like scales grow from little rash-like inflammations in such abundance as to pass credulity; and so on may we depict the sufferings to which poor human nature is subject, all of which involve great mental distress because of personal disfigurations.

If there were not another external disease known, eczema alone would be a sufficient infliction on mankind. It pervades all classes, and descends impartially through generations. While some are constantly enveloped in it, others have it confined to small patches in the ears, on the scalp, on the breast, on the palms of the hands, on the limbs, etc., but everywhere its distinctive feature is a small watery blister, which discharges an acrid fluid, causing heat, inflammation, and intense itching. Ring-worm, tetter, scalled head, dandruff, belong to this scaly and itching order of diseases. Psoriasis, our modern leprosy, with its mother-of-pearl scale, situated on a reddened base, which bleeds upon the removal of the scale, is to be dreaded and avoided, as of old. Impetigo, barber's itch, erysipelas, and a score of minor disorders make up in part the catalogue of external diseases of the skin. Thus far we have made no allusion to those afflictions which are manifestly impurities of the blood, viz.: swelling of the glands of the throat, ulcers on the neck and limbs, tumors, abscesses, and mercurial poisons, with loss of hair, because the whole list can be comprehended in the one word scrofula.

It is in the treatment of torturing, disfiguring humors and affections of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, that the Cuticura remedies have achieved their greatest success. Original in composition, scientifically compounded, absolutely pure, unchangeable in any climate, always ready, and agreeable to the most delicate and sensitive, they present to young and old the most successful curatives of modern times. This will be considered strong language by those acquainted with the character and obstinacy of blood and skin humors but it is justified by innumerable successes where all the remedies and methods in vogue have failed to cure, and, in many cases, to relieve, even.

The Cuticura treatment is at once agreeable, speedy, economical, and comprehensive. Bathe the affected parts freely with hot water and Cuticura soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. This treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning, and scaly humors, and points to a speedy, permanent, and economical cure of torturing, disfiguring humors, eczemas, rashes, and inflammations, from infancy to age, when all other remedies and the best physicians fail. The remedies constituting the Cuticura system will repay an individual scrutiny of their remarkable properties.

Cuticura Soap contains in a modified form the medicinal properties of Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure and purest and sweetest of emollients, combined with the most delicate and refreshing of flower odors. It purifies and invigorates the pores of the skin, and imparts activity to the oil glands and tubes, thus furnishing an outlet for unwholesome matter, which if retained would cause pimples, blackheads, rashes, oily, mothy skin, and other complexional disfigurations, as well as scalp affections and irritations, falling hair, and baby rashes. Its gentle and continuous action on the natural lubricators of the skin keeps the latter transparent, soft, flexible, and healthy. Hence its constant use, assisted by an occasional use of Cuticura Ointment, realizes the fairest complexion, the softest, whitest hands, and the most luxuriant, glossy hair within the domain of the most advanced scientific knowledge to supply.

Cuticura Ointment is the most successful external curative for torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, in proof of which a single anointing with it, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases by a full dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning, and scaly humors, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing, and healing the most distressing of infantile humors, and preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet of all ages, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, and hands far more effectually, agreeably, and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients, while free from every ingredient of a doubtful or dangerous character. Its "One Night Treatment of the Hands," or "Single Treatment of the Hair," or use after athletics, cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

Of all remedies for the purification of the blood and circulating fluids, none approaches in specific medical action Cuticura Resolvent. It neutralizes and resolves away (hence its name) scrofulous, inherited, and other humors in the blood, which give rise to swellings of the glands, pains in the bones, and torturing, disfiguring eruptions of the skin and scalp, with loss of hair.

Cuticura Resolvent extends its purifying influence by means of the pores to the surface of the skin, allaying irritation, inflammation, itching, and burning, and soothing and healing. Hence its success in the treatment of distressing humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, which fail to be permanently cured by external remedies alone.

The grandest testimonial that can be offered Cuticura remedies is their world-wide sale, due to the personal recommendations of those who have used them. It is difficult to realize the mighty growth of the business done under this name. From a small beginning in the simplest form, against prejudice and opposition, against mauled hosts, countless rivals, and trade indifference, Cuticura remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale. In every clime and with every people they have met with the same reception. The confines of the earth are the only limits to their growth. They have conquered the world.

To the test of popular judgment all things mundane must finally come. The civilized world has rendered its verdict in favor of Cuticura.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Cole Younger Pardoned.

Thomas Coleman Younger is free to return to Missouri.

A conditional pardon was granted to him today and he may return to his relatives and old home in Missouri. Twenty-seven years of absence have worked a great change. Of the three brothers who led the raid on the Northfield bank in 1876, two are in their graves. The third, known as "Cole" Younger, was then the terror of five states. Now he is sobered by twenty-five years' confinement and is an old man broken in health.

The pardon was granted by the state board on two conditions. One is that he never return to Minnesota; the second, that he solemnly promises never to allow himself to be exhibited to the public gaze in any place of amusement, though he may attend as a spectator.

Burned to Death.

Mrs. Leah Spafford, living about one and a quarter miles west of Long Lake, Hennepin county, was burned to death some time in the night.

Mrs. Spafford was 75 years of age, and lived alone. She was an old resident of the county, having come to Long Lake in 1866. Her brother resided a short distance from her, so she was in no sense a hermit, but was somewhat demented account of old age.

The fire started about midnight, how it is not known. Some think she set fire to the house herself; others think it was caused by a defective cook stove.

At the time of the blaze it was supposed that she had escaped and was wandering about. Later her body was seen in the ruins. The coroner was notified.

Want Our Corn.

Professor Haynes at the experiment station has received more requests for seed corn already this year than have been received before at the institution in all the years of its existence. The cause is the cold and wet summer that just past, which was exceedingly unfavorable to the corn crop.

In Minnesota, Montana, the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois this unfavorable weather prevailed, and the farmers in all these states had to feed what little corn they had to their stock. They have had to make requistion on their local experiment stations for corn from time to time, and even these stations are now calling on Minnesota to come to the rescue.

Honors for the Senator.

Senator Knute Nelson was given a great ovation in honor of his sixtieth birthday.

The Norwegian association of Washington had charge of the function, which was a surprise to the senator. Sixty guests, one for each year of the senator's life, sat at the banquet board.

Senator Clapp presided, and read a ringing letter from president Roosevelt, which was greeted enthusiastically. Senators Hanna, Allison and others sent letters of congratulation, while telegrams were read from the Minneapolis Viking association, State Auditor Iverson, James A. Peterson, the students of Decorah collage and many others.

Cost His Life.

Wesley O'Brien, a colored man of Minneapolis, made a bet that he could drink a quart of whiskey. He won the wager, and now his remains are in the county morgue.

The affair is said to have occurred in a Washington avenue saloon.

O'Brien had been drinking before he made the wager that cost his life. He and several of his friends were drinking in the place, when the question arose as to who could drink the most whisky.

O'Brien made a statement that he could down a quart, and was challenged by a man named Wiley.

The wiskey was produced and drank. O'Brien went home and died before morning.

Binding Twine.

The board of control and Warden Wolfer have fixed twine prices for the coming season as follows: Standard, 500 feet to the pound, 6¼c; sisal the same; standard mixed, 550 feet to the pound, 9½c; manila, 600 feet to the pound, 10½c; pure manila, 650 feet to the pound, 11½c.

These prices are considerably below last year's prices and are much lower than the prices asked by the independent twine concerns.

The output will be 7,000,000 pounds.

Saved the Baby.

A gasoline stove in the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knapp of Moorhead went wrong, and set the house on fire. In the effort to extinguish the blaze a little babe was left by the parents in bed upstairs, and Mr. Knapp, after quite a struggle to reach it, broke out the upstairs window and dropped the little one into the arms of the mother, who was waiting outside to catch it.

News in Brief.

The Rock Island has reported gross earnings on its Minnesota lines during 1902 of $334,585.80, which will yield to the state in taxes $10,037.57, an increase of $1,207.20 over the previous year.

Burglars entered the residence of J. W. Thomas, Jr., Minneapolis, early last evening and stole about $500 worth of silverware and jewelry.

Frozen stiff, and just as it was about to be worried to pieces by a large, black dog, the body of a male infant was found by two boys, at the foot of the steps that lead down to the flats at the river in St. Paul.

The Polk county commissioners appointed George A. Ralph engineer of all the county ditches now under construction. Bonds for their construction to the amount of $55,000 were sold.

> Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:
> Dear Sir:—"I cannot say too much in praise of Peruna. Eight bottles of it cured me of catarrh of the lungs of four years standing, and I would not have been without it for anything. It helped several Sisters of coughs, and colds and I have yet to find one case of catarrh that it does not cure."

THE SISTERS GOOD WORK.

In every country of the civilized world the Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs. With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent sisters have found Peruna a never-failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

> Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:
> Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after farther use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."—Sisters of Charity.

This young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat, with good results as the above letter testifies.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Constipation Cured

Those who have used salts, castor oil, and the many home and manufactured purgatives, know that in such treatment there is no possibility of a cure from constipation. These remedies are at most physics and do absolutely no good. In fact they frequently provoke piles fistula, female disorders and many cases of appendicitis are traceable to their use. Soon the ordinary doses of these physics fail to have any effect upon the bowels.

There never was a case of temporary or obstinate constipation that

SENATE RED LIGHTS.

When They Shine, August Body Is in Secret Session.

What Happens Then Behind the Well-Guarded Doors Nobody Gets to Know, Except in Isolated Cases.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THIS government of ours is divided into three branches, which are equal in power under the constitution. The executive, meaning the president, who controls all of the executive departments; the legislative, including the senate and house of representatives, and the judicial, which means the supreme court.

The executive and legislative branches of the government are elected by the people; but the supreme court is composed of individuals appointed by the president, and confirmed by the senate. Consequently, the supreme court is farthest removed from the people, although it is, and always has been, the safe conservator of the rights of the people under their constitution. It was the purpose of the framers of the constitution to give to the people everlastingly the right to choose their own president and legislators; but, with wise discretion, they removed from the direct power of popular impulse, the great judicial tribunal. Therefore, in this government of the people, by the people and for the people, the supreme court is free from the immediate power of the people.

Of course, the people elect their presidents, and those presidents nominate judges of the supreme court. Of course, the people, through their legislatures, elect the senators who confirm the judicial nominations, which are made by the president; but when those judges are installed they are so far removed from the people that their judgments are free from any political influence whatever. On this account, mainly, the decisions of the supreme court have universally been commended by fair minded men of all political affiliations. Even the famous Dred Scott decision is admitted to have been an absolutely correct interpretation of the constitution; because the constitution, unamended, gave the negro "no rights which a white man was bound to respect." Even the amended constitution does not compel that respect which was intended to be compelled, because there has always been a lack of vigor in the enforcement of the amendments and of the civil rights statute.

It has become the duty of President Roosevelt to select two justices of the supreme court, and those selections have met with popular approval, as well as senatorial consent. Other presidents have had great difficulty, at times, in selecting for these important positions men whose nominations were wholly in accord with the views of a majority of the senators.

The nominations sent to the senate by the president are always considered in executive session; and what senators say when all of the doors are closed cannot be ascertained by the general public. In those sessions the statesmen talk very freely, and vent their views without always maintaining that decorum of demeanor and that courtesy to each other, which are proverbial when the senate is in public session.

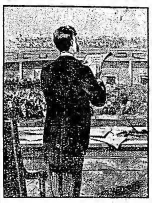
When the senate is in executive session a red light appears over the closed doors. It is a nest of electric lights dimly shining through scarlet bulbs, the whole enclosed in a ground glass bulb which is blood red. In other cities the red lights are significant of other conditions; while here, in the temple of national legislation over the entrances of the Sanhedrim of the chosen ones, the red light indicates that exclusiveness profound is ordered. On the inside the legislative deities are considering executive appointments and sifting treaties with foreign governments.

A POLITE REMINDER.

Not only do the red lights indicate that the senate is in executive session. The glittering uniforms of the capitol police officials who surround the chamber, keep the people moving in the corridors, while two sit at either side of each of the grand marble stairways leading to the galleries. Every public entrance is closed. It looks as though the senate had been hermetically sealed. The atmosphere is permeated with awe. One is so deeply impressed that a chilly sensation chases up and down your back, while shrinking from the sacred silence. If one moves too near a door, one of the men in uniform taps the shoulder of the intruder, and in an undertaker's whisper reminds him that the senate is in executive session.

Unless memory is unusually treacherous, it was in 1886 that a postmaster was appointed for Kankakee, Ill., whose nomination made the senate, in executive session, red hot. The enemies of the man appointed got so busy that they called him all sorts of names, and undertook to prove it. If the stories told in executive session at that time had been made public there would have been a lot of trouble in Kankakee.

Then again, in 1894, when the nomination of Alex. Charles to be postmaster at Cedar Rapids, Ia., was under consideration, the senate had an awfully hot time over the charges that were filed. It was alleged that Mr. Charles had done everything on earth except say his prayers and be a good citizen. However, he was confirmed, in the long run.



READING CUSHING'S LETTER.

But to return to the supreme court nominations. President Grant nominated Mr. Williams, of Oregon, to be chief justice, and Senator Sumner made such a hot fight against confirmation that the name was withdrawn. Then Grant nominated Caleb Cushing to be chief justice, but there was bitter opposition. Finally Secretary of State Fish went personally to the senate and begged for Cushing's confirmation. The opposition was melting away gradually, when Parson Brownlow sent to the clerk's desk and had read a letter from Caleb Cushing, dated March 20, 1861, to "Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy," recommending Archibald Roane, and saying: "He resigns his position in the attorney general's office from sentiments of devotion to that which alone he can feel to be his country, namely, the confederate states. I most heartily commend him as a gentleman to your confidence and esteem."

And that ended Cushing's nomination. Senator Conkling had been championing Cushing's cause; but he quit, promptly. The nomination was at once withdrawn.

Twenty years later President Cleveland experienced similar difficulty. He nominated William B. Hornblower to be associate justice, but Senator Hill prevented his confirmation. Then Cleveland nominated Wheeler H. Peckham, and Senator Hill made an awfully bitter fight, claiming that Peckham, as well as Hornblower, had been instrumental in defeating state tickets; so this nomination was defeated. Then Cleveland nominated Rufus W. Peckham, and he was confirmed.

While the corridors are awesome with dignity, the senate in executive session sometimes becomes a turmoil. This is especially so when friends of the administration are urging the confirmation of some nomination which is particularly objectionable to an individual senator. It is narrated that when a man whom Senator Pettigrew had cause to dislike, if not hate, was nominated to be postmaster at Sioux Falls, Senator Pettigrew resorted to the use of language so forcible that some of the older senators stopped their ears in dismay. But that was Pettigrew's hardest fight; and he won out. Then, after Stanley Matthews had been a senator for six years, and his name was sent to the senate for a position on the supreme bench, all of the enemies of a lifetime began buzzing like bees in a tar barrel, and Matthews only squeezed through the executive session by a majority of one.

Until the close of this session of the congress, at noon of March 4, there will be many executive sessions of the senate, for the president must make numerous nominations, all of which will require senatorial concurrence. The red lights will be shining over the doors and the uniformed officials will be there, and what is said in executive session we will never know.

There is at least one untarnished free masonry which cannot be betrayed. And the red lights will continue to shine.

SMITH D. FRY.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, Feb. 9.—The very brief session of the house Saturday, called by order of Speaker Babcock, was devoted almost entirely to the introduction of bills and was not honored by the presence of the speaker, who was called to Wadena by illness in his family.

Mr. Lemon's H. F. No. 252 amends the state laws pertaining to illuminating oil by bringing under the jurisdiction of the state oil inspector gasoline, which has not heretofore been officially regarded as an illuminating oil. It makes it a misdemeanor to keep, handle or sell gasoline in quantities of less than ten gallons, unless the liquid be contained in bright red cans bearing the printed word "gasoline." Each person so handling gasoline is required to take out an annual license, the fee of which shall be one dollar, and the state oil inspector is required to inspect the business place of such licensee once every six months.

St. Paul, Feb. 10.—The two bills by Senator J. F. Calhoun, of Minneapolis, providing revolving improvement funds for cities of more than 50,000 inhabitants were passed yesterday under suspension of the rules.

Senator Daniel Shell, of Worthington, introduced a bill to provide for clerk hire for treasurers of counties where the total amount of taxable property exceeds $5,000,000 and is less than $10,000,000.

The following bills were passed:

To provide a revolving fund for highway improvements in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

To authorize Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth to issue certificates to the amount of $150,000 for improvements at the intersections of streets and in front of untaxable property.

To limit the time for foreclosing mortgages by advertisement to fifteen years, without extension for any cause.

Bills were introduced in both branches of the legislature yesterday appropriating $150,000 for draining marsh and swamp lands owned by the state. The measures were introduced by Representative Gunder Krostue, of Fisher, and the senate committee on drainage respectively and are a result of a joint meeting of the committees of the house and senate.

Representative B. S. Bennett, of Fosston, yesterday introduced in the house a bill appropriating $51,750 to make up the deficiency in the appropriation for the state aid for graded and high schools for 1901 and 1902. The measure is advocated by J. W. Olsen, state superintendent of public instruction, who called attention to the deficiency in his annual report.

Resolutions adopted at a mass meeting at Norwood, Carver county, to protest against the passage of the bill appropriating $20,000 to pay back sugar bounties, were read in the house yesterday.

St. Paul, Feb. 11.—The senate yesterday made short work of its general order list. The following bills were passed:

Allowing villages, towns and school districts to require a surety bond of treasurers and pay a reasonable sum for the same.

Fixing the state bounty for the apprehension and conviction of horse thieves at $200.

Allowing the incorporation of lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and United Order of Workmen.

Allowing life professional teachers' certificates to be granted graduates of the advanced course of state normal schools without further examination.

Providing for the election of town school superintendents in Cass county.

Providing for the election of school trustees biennially in Cass county.

Relating to notaries public in newly organized counties, whose commissions are for the county from which such new county was organized.

The house judiciary committee yesterday decided to recommend for passage the following constitutional amendment on the subject of taxation:

Gasoline and benzine must be kept in cans painted red, and no kerosene shall be placed in a red can, if the legislature follows the recommendation of the house committee on illuminating oils.

The following bills were passed:

To provide that the 2 per cent tax paid by fire insurance companies be appropriated to fire insurance relief associations for pensioning firemen retired because of long service.

To extend the provisions of the act which authorizes villages to issue bonds for water works and lighting plants to all villages "that shall hereafter be organized" and to require that the question be submitted to the people in one proposition.

A curative measure to legalize the organization of municipal courts.

To provide for the disposition of unclaimed dividends and closing up the affairs of corporations subject to the supervision of the public examiner.

St. Paul, Feb. 12.—Senator Samuel Lord, of Kasson, yesterday held up the senate for an hour and forty minutes on a motion to adjourn. Two recesses of twenty minutes each were necessary to straighten out the parliamentary tangle.

Senator Henry Gjertsen, of Minneapolis, yesterday introduced a bill to authorize cities of more than 50,000 inhabitants to issue certificates for national guard armories.

Believing that farmers should be allowed to buy binding twine when they need it, Senator A. V. Rieke, of Fairfax, yesterday introduced a bill extending to June 1 the time during which the twine manufactured at the state prison may be sold exclusively to customers. The present law sets the limit at May 1.

Representative Nils Nyquist, of Blue Earth county, yesterday scored a victory in the house committee of the whole by securing a favorable recommendation for his bill which provides for a state boiler inspector in each of the sixty-three senatorial districts.

Representative A. J. Lohren, of Waseca, yesterday introduced a bill to extend to all counties of the state the Torrens system of registering title to real estate.

Representative R. T. Lewis of Duluth, yesterday introduced in the house his bill providing for death sentence by electrocution instead of hanging.

Two bills were passed:

Allowing wives to testify against their husbands in non-support cases.

Providing for the appointment of library boards by the mayor, instead of election by the city council, in cities of less than 50,000 inhabitants.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—To appropriate $84,000 for improvements at the state prison. Finance.

To require that cabooses on freight and live stock trains be at least thirty-four feet in length, with separate apartments for the shippers. Railroads.

To provide that the summons issued by the justice of the peace may be served by any person not a party to the action. Judiciary.

To amend the constitution so as to allow an annual tax on growing crops for an insurance fund against damage by hail storms. Judiciary.

The following bills were passed:

To change the proceedings from a court to a jury trial in an action between the county and township relative to expenses incurred for quarantining, and to provide that the party losing shall pay the judgment and costs.

To require the registration of mining lands.

The require incorporated villages to use the same method in condemnation proceedings for inserting pumps, water mains and reservoirs as is used for opening and widening streets.

To require real estate transfers in counties whose organization is questioned to be registered in the original counties.

To reduce the maximum penalty for destroying or interfering with telegraph or telephone cables from $500 fine to five years' imprisonment to $100 and ninety days.

HON H. Steenerson has commenced hustling to get the agricultural lands of the ceded portion of the Chippewa reservation opened for settlement this season.

OUR present legislature are going to make an effort to decrease the wolf population, in the northern part of the state, and give the sheep and deer a chanc to live.

THER is a good prospect, that congressman Steenerson will get a place on the judicary committee in the next congress. His high rank as a lawer of ability, is greatly in his favor, and he will recieve the solid support of the Minnesota delegation for the position. This is just about what we expectd to hear from Steenerson when we sunpported him for election and we feel justly proud that this district have a representative in the next congress, that is considered to be qualified for this position.

TO THE PEOPLE.

To you, in these days of your great prosperity, blessed with bountiful harvests; where social and political institutions minister to your happiness and welfare and where destitution and want are so far unknown—to you is made this earnest appeal in behalf of over half a million of starving men, women and children, ghoughtout the larger part of Finland, Northern Norway and Northern Sweden.

There exists there a condition of great distress, due to no fault of the frugal, industrious and honest people who inhabit those countries, but to a total crop failure brought about by freezing weather in midsummer, which also destroyed and killed all wild fruits and berries of the forest, cut off the insect life, which constitutes a large part of the food of the fish which ordinarily swarm these waters, while the forage crops for domestic and wild animals, grown in the meadows and lowlands, were flooded by heavy rains until the water was turned into ice, and then that portion which might bave been harvested above the ice, was almost immediately covered with snow, leaving all animal life entirely without food. These facts show that the appalling conditions of distress to which the people are reduced are the result of natural causes and not due to their own negligence.

To the good people of this favored section, this appeal should touch the quick responsive chord. Let each give according to his means and the result will be a glorious showing.

A DRUNKEN CROWD.

Crookston Journal: The story of a week's carousal of a band of Indians in the Battle river and Nebish country as told by a homsteader north of Blackduck and published in last night's Journal, shows a disgraceful state of affairs. It were greater justice to the Indian not to give him the stumpage money which is due him no protection against his great enemy, the fire-water, or against the men who in exchange for vile and cheap stuff called liquor secure within a few hours all the Indians' money.

HE IS WORKEING.

St. Paul, Feb. 14. Senator Stephens, of Polk county, sent up the report of the state drainage commission for publication in the senate Journal. The report shows that in 1902 thirty-nine miles of new ditches were made at a total cost of $44,956.60. The number of acres benefited by the drainage was 83,000, and the total benefit was $249,000, or $3 an acre. The state land benefited amounted to 31,500 acres. The report shows a gain in land values over cost of drainage of over $200, for the year 1902.

Senator Stephens' second hail insurance bill was introduced at yesterday's session. The bill proposes an amendment to article 9 of the constitution to authorize the legislature to levy an annual tax on growing crops in the state for the purpose of creating an insurance fund against damage to standing crops by hail storms. The amendment is to be know as section 17 of Article 9.

Snakes Waste Little Time Eating.

A serpent will go for weeks, sometimes even for months, without feeding. Then it may take three rabbits or ducks, one after the other, at a single meal and afterward become torpid while digestion proceeds. When, after a sufficient period of fasting, it gets disposed to eat and a rabbit happens to be introduced into its cage, it may plainly be seen that the rabbit's presence is quickly noticed by it. The snake will begin to move slowly about till it has brought its snout opposite the rabbit's muzzle. Then, in an instant, it will seize the rabbit's head in its mouth, simultaneously coiling its powerful body around it and crushing it to death at once.

The action is so instantaneous that it is impossible for the rabbit to suffer. Certainly it can suffer no more than when killed by a poulterer. The snake does not immediately uncoil its folds, but continues for a time to hold its victim tightly embraced, sometimes rocking itself gently to and fro. Then it slowly unwinds its huge body and once more takes the rabbit's head in its mouth and swallows it.

Sadiron and Tailor's Goose.

A "sadiron" is the style in which the common flatiron is spoken of in print, says the Syracuse Herald. "Sad" is an old English synonym for heavy, and Spenser wrote, "More sad than lump of lead." A "sadiron" was a heavy iron, and long ago was applied to the flatiron now in common domestic use. The tailor's "goose" was so called because the handle bears a fanciful resemblance to the neck of a goose. This name because it had a reason for being still survives.

Shaky Rope Bridges.

In the wilds of South America many rope bridges exist, and in writing of them a traveler, who published through Messrs. Longmans "The Great Mountains and Forests of South America," says: "There being no trees here, such bridges as were necessary were usually constructed of a couple of ropes stretched across a chasm, upon which was spread a rough kind of matting made of pliant brushwood or a sort of rush. Such bridges swung about fearfully and cracked under the foot as if about to give way. Often I held my breath while passing such a bridge, momentarily expecting the rotten contrivance to part in the middle. There was plenty of evidence in the skeletons of horses and mules on the rocks below that accidents not infrequently occurred, but I was assured that not many men were lost, which, of course, was an exceedingly comforting assurance, especially as I noticed that the guides were careful to see that either I or George was the first to cross these confounded structures. At one of these places we saw on the rocks 800 feet below the skull and bones of two men who had been lost about eight years before."

Wonders of the Human Heart.

The workings of the human heart have been computed by a celebrated physiologist, and he has demonstrated that it is equal to the lifting of 120 tons in twenty-four hours. Presuming that the blood is thrown out of the heart at each pulsation in the proportion of sixty-nine strokes of nine feet, the mileage of the blood through the body might be taken at 207 yards per minute, seven miles per hour, 168 miles per day, 61,320 miles per year, or 5,150,000 miles in a lifetime of eighty-four years. In the same period of time the heart must beat 2,869,776,000 times.

Superstitions About Bread.

In Brittany when a housewife begins to knead dough she makes a cross with her right hand, the left being placed in the trough. If a cat enters the room, it is believed the bread will not rise. It is supposed that certain women can cause the dough to multiply itself. On the coast of the channel the dough is adjured to imitate the leaven, the miller and the baker and to rise.

The oven is a sacred object and connected with crowds of superstitions. The oven is dedicated with ceremonies. In certain places in Brittany the wood is watered with blessed water. Bread must not be cooked on certain days, as on Holy Friday or during the night of All Saints, when the ghosts would eat it.

BIRMINGHAM PICTURES.

They Were Mere Paper, but They Subdued the Artist Turner.

Turner, the great landscape painter, was a curious mixture of parsimony and generosity, determined money grubbing and unreckoning devotion to his art. He would drive a hard bargain one day and the next refuse to sell at any price. Intending purchasers were sometimes excluded from his gallery, and the refusal of admission was communicated in anything but a polite manner.

Mr. Gillott, the wealthy pen manufacturer of Birmingham, once proved himself equal to the task of storming the castle in the teeth of the gruff artist and his doorkeeper and achieving a bargain. A book on Turner gives the story.

Mr. Gillott was met at the door of Turner's house by an old woman, who opened the door and asked the gentleman's business.

"Can't let 'e in!" she snapped out, when he told her, and tried to slam the door.

But Mr. Gillott had put his foot inside the door and without waiting for permission pushed past the enraged janitress and hurried upstairs to the gallery. Turner met him like a spider whose web has been invaded. The intruder introduced himself and said that he had come to buy.

"Don't want to sell!" was the answer.

"Have you seen our Birmingham pictures, Mr. Turner?" inquired the visitor, as calmly as if he had been received as a gentleman should be.

"Never heard of 'em," said Turner.

Mr. Gillott took from his pocket some Birmingham bank notes.

"Mere paper," remarked Turner, who evidently enjoyed the joke.

"To be bartered for mere canvas," said the visitor, waving his hand to indicate the paintings on the wall. His tone—perhaps also the sight of the "mere paper"—conquered Turner, and when the visitor departed he had bargained for several valuable pictures.

THE MISSING FOWL.

An Experience With an Absent-minded English Artist.

Wills invited me to dinner one afternoon when I met him in the Strand. I accepted, reminding him that as he was absentminded he had better make a note of the evening. As he had no paper in his pocket he wrote the date on his shirt cuff. When the appointed evening arrived I went to his studio. The door was opened by Wills, and I could see that he had forgotten all about the appointment. "Ah, old fellow," he exclaimed, "do not be too hard on me. The cuff went to the wash, and the date with it. But there is a fowl in the pot boiling here," continued Mr. Wills. "Just come in and wait a few minutes."

I had my misgivings, but walked inside and sat down upon the only chair not crowded with paint, brushes and palettes. After waiting for about twenty minutes, feeling deucedly hungry, I groaned. This had the effect of reminding Wills that I was present. He exclaimed in a dreamy voice, "The fowl must be boiled by this time;" and coming forward he lifted the lid of the pot and peered inside. "It is very odd," he remarked, "but I cannot see the fowl. Extraordinary! No one has been here, so the bird cannot have been stolen."

Well, the long and short of it is that a week or two later I called again at the studio, noticed a peculiar odor and discovered the old fowl wrapped up in a piece of brown paper. "Ah!" said Wills, "now I know how it all happened. When the fowl was brought in there came a smart visitor—Lady G.—about sittings for her portrait. I must have thrown the fowl behind a canvas and forgotten all about it. But now, old fellow, do shut up!"—London Mail.

The Parsee.

The Parsee, untrammeled by his surroundings, is seen in Bombay in all his wealth of height and dress. The men are, without exception, tall, finely formed and stately and possess a robustness and beauty quite at contrast with their Hindoo neighbors.

Their street costume is a peculiar long white cotton gown, wide trousers of the same material and color and a tall miter shaped hat. They have a general reputation for sobriety, frugality and sagacity, and they seem to thoroughly understand the accumulation of fortunes, in this respect resembling the Hebrews. The wealthiest residents of Bombay are Parsees.

Where Cobras Are Held to Be Sacred.

The Hindoos on account of their superstition are very loath to destroy a cobra. It appears prominently in their mythology, and it is venerated both as a symbol of a malicious and destructive power and also a beneficent one. According to Mr. A. K. Forbes, cobras are looked upon as guardian angels, and there is a Bengalese tradition that a male infant auspiciously shaded by a cobra will come to the throne.

ALLIGATORS AS BOATMATES

Experience With One That Had Been Apparently Killed.

Alligators move rapidly under water, are hard to see, harder to hit, and the harpoon will penetrate only the least accessible portions of the body. Nor does the title to the hide necessarily pass with making fast the weapon.

One afternoon in the Cheesehowitzkee river I harpooned a large alligator which towed me up and down the stream for an hour or two and then sulked in its deepest part. I pulled on the line until the boat was directly over him and stirred him up with the harpoon pole. He rolled himself up on the line in the manner peculiar to sharks and alligators and banged the boat suggestively. We rowed to the bank and, making fast to some bushes, hauled on the line until we succeeded in worrying him nearly to the boat, when he rose to the surface and attacked us with open mouth. We repelled the attack with harpoon pole and rifle. The former was promptly bitten in three pieces, but the latter apparently finished him. It was so nearly dark that we decided to carry him in the skiff a mile down the river to where our sloop was anchored. We hauled the seats out of the boat and together managed to lift the head of the alligator aboard and tie it. We then tied the other end, when the reptile came to life and landed a blow with its tail which lifted me out of the skiff into the saw grass, with the breath knocked out of my body and my hand and arm badly cut by the grass.

Boat and boatmen were capsized, but my rifle had fortunately been left on the bank. I was able to kill the alligator again. We secured him by floating the boat under him and then bailing it out. The alligator completely filled the boat, so that my companion and I sat upon his back as we paddled down the river with gunwales unpleasantly near the water.

It was growing dark, and the water around us was becoming alive with alligators. While we were reflecting upon our overloaded condition our alligator came to life again and shifted ballast until water poured over the gunwale. We quickly balanced the boat, only to see it again disturbed and to ship more water. A scramble for the shore followed, which we reached without capsizing and where we left our victim for the night after again killing him. In the morning our buzzard friend from the Homosassa river, surrounded by his family, was sitting above him in the tree waiting for us to attend to our carving duties.—Country Life in America.

UNPLANTED CORN.

It Has a Habit of Getting Uneasy In the Spring.

"It beats all," said a Bergen county farmer, "what curious things we find in nature that we can't explain. You kin go over a lot of 'em, and there's yet one that you can't tell me why it is. That's corn heatin' up in the spring.

"You take a lot of corn. I don't care if it's whole corn or cracked corn or cornmeal. You keep it in any kind of storehouse—the common granary, like we have on the farms, or the stone or brick buildin', like many of the grocers and feed dealers have it in. When it comes corn plantin' time, that corn of yourn 'll git oneasy. Soon's the blades start out of the ground, then you'll have to bustle to save your grain.

"Seems as when the time comes round fur corn to be planted the corn in the bags, no matter what shape it's in, begins to heat up, and when the planted corn begins to grow what you've got stored will git so hot it'll fairly smoke. You've got to take it out of the bags and spread it out so it'll cool off or you'll lose it all. In a few days it'll cool down again, and you won't have no more trouble with it durin' the summer, no matter how hot the weather gits. It's jest when the planted corn starts; that's all.

"Curious? Of course it's curious or I wouldn't speak of it. I might understand how whole corn would act that way, but when it comes to cracked corn and cornmeal then it's too much fur me. And I'll bet you can't tell why it is, 'cept it's jest nature tryin' to assert herself."—New York Mail and Express.

Writing on Wood.

Some persons are of the opinion that the first writing was upon thin pieces of wood. From their convenience this seems probable. Such boards were used at an early period by the Greeks and Romans, and were frequently covered with wax, which was of course more easily written upon than the bare wood. Where wax was used errors were readily erased by rubbing with the blunt end of the piece of metal which served for a pen. To make the writing more visible it appears that some black substance was smeared over the surface of the white wax and remained in the scratched marks.

Good Enough as It Is.

"Doctor, if a pale young man named Jinks calls on you for a prescription don't let him have it."

"Why not?"

"He wants something to improve his appetite, and he boards at my house."

It Would Seem So.

How an abscess in the Fallopian Tubes of Mrs. Hollinger was removed without a surgical operation.

"I had an abscess in my side in the fallopian tube (the fallopian tube is a connection of the ovaries). I suffered untold misery and was so weak I could scarcely get around. The sharp burning pains low down in my side were terrible. My physician said there was no help for me unless I would go to the hospital and be operated on. I thought before that I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which, fortunately, I did, and it has made me a stout, healthy woman. My advice to all women who suffer with any kind of female trouble is to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once." — MRS. IRA S. HOLLINGER, Stilvideo, Ohio.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

It would seem by this statement that women would save time and much sickness if they would get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and also write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helps.

No other person can give such helpful advice as Mrs. Pinkham to women who are sick.

Bathing the Baby.

Young mothers naturally feel anxious about the baby's bath. It is best to begin at six weeks to put the little one in the water, first folding a soft towel in the bottom of the basin. Use only Ivory Soap, as many of the highly colored and perfumed soaps are very injurious to the tender skin of an infant.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Attempted Murder.

Walter Tripp, 24 years of age, employed by the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company at Scanlon, sixteen miles from Duluth, left his boarding place with a rifle under his arm and proceeded directly to the residence of M. S. Peterson, where lived Nellie Tanner, aged 22, with whom Tripp had been keeping company.

He knocked at the door and she responded. The family were at supper, and there was little light in the front part of the dwelling. Without a word Tripp, after crossing the threshhold, raised the gun and fired at the girl. She screamed and ran toward the dining room. Tripp aimed at the girl again, but she dodged behind a door.

Tripp evidently had some compunction about shooting any others by chance, and he lowered the gun. He then, with a disappointed but very deliberate air, whirled the gun around so that the muzzle pointed at himself, and, placing the muzzle at his forehead, shot himself dead.

The shot which Tripp fired at Miss Tanner pierced her left hand, making a painful but not serious wound.

Tripp's parents reside in Portland, Oregon. Miss Tanner and Mrs. Peterson are sisters.

Unclean Creameries.

Starting discoveries of unsanitary conditions surrounding creameries have been made by inspectors of the state dairy and food commission. In several cases creameries are located where it is impossible to drain away the waste products, which are accordingly deposited in cess pools. It has been found that in many instances these pools are sunk in sandy soil or loose strata of rock and drain directly into the wells from which the creameries draw their water supply. The utensils are washed in this foul water and the butter worked and washed in it. Samples of the water have been sent to the state chemist for analysis. Where the water is found to be polluted, these creameries will be required to cement their cess pools or go out of business. Great care will be taken by the inspectors, who will send in samples whenever there is any reason to suspect the wells are contaminated.

Two Boards Appointed.

Two state boards were appointed by the governor today—the state forestry board and the state board of examiners in practical plumbing.

The forestry board consists of A. C. Wedge, St. Paul; Sidney M. Owen, Minneapolis; M. M. Williams, Little Falls; John Cooper, St. Cloud; Frederick Weyerhaeuser, St. Paul; O. M. Lord, Minnesota City, and Frank H. Murray, St. Paul. All are reappointments except Mr. Murray, who succeeds Beriah Magofun of Duluth at the recommendation of the game and fish commission.

The plumbing board includes A. L. Potts of St. Peter, Samuel Hunter of Minneapolis, Joseph E. Kreager of Duluth, master plumbers; John O. Watson of Minneapolis, journeyman plumber; P. J. Cobb of St. Paul, plumbing inspector.

Severely Injured.

While a party of young country folks in a bobsled was crossing a street car track in Winona, a car running at full crushed into them. The party consisted of two men and eight women. All were injured, two so severely they may die.

Mary Cummings was hurled into the air and struck on her head, receiving injuries of a grave nature. Mary Black was thrown from the sleigh directly in front of the car and was dragged by the fender a distance of 100 feet. She was seriously hurt internally.

The box of the sleigh was overturned and Ada Lemay, aged 10, was beneath it and held a prisoner.

Found Dead.

After calling for her daughter to return to the house several times, Mrs. George Ploof of Fairwater went to the rear of the house and found the dead body of the girl lying in the snow.

The child, who was 13 years of age, had just returned from school, and after removing her wraps, had gone out of doors. She was apparently in the best of health, and a physician who was called reports that he can give no cause for her sudden death. An investigation will probably be made.

Governor's Staff.

Governor Van Sant announced appointment on his military staff. Nearly all were reappointments of men who have been members of his official family for the last two years.

The new appointments were as follows: Oscar Hallam and Theodore G. Walthers, St. Paul; P. D. Boutell and Joseph P. Morris of Minneapolis, aides de camp with the rank of colonel.

Brief Notes.

The St. Vincent bank opened for business. J. Birkholz is president; T. M. George, vice president, and R. E. Bennett, cashier.

While James Drew, an engineer of the Chicago Great Western, was bucking snow at Claybank, he was seriously injured by being struck by the handle of the reverse lever which suddenly flew backward.

Mrs. Florence Sorenson, the 19-year-old wife of Oscar Sorenson, a photographer of Minneapolis, ended her life by taking two ounces of carbolic acid during a fit of despondency.

Attorney General Douglas has signed the pardon of Cole Younger, which is now complete, and Mr. Younger will probably bid a final farewell to Minnesota and leave for his old home some time this week.

The new town of Nashwauk held a special election to vote on the proposition to issue bonds for the purpose of making road and bridge improvements. The proposition carried.

THOUSANDS OF AMERICANS FOR WESTERN CANADA.

"There will be thousands of Americans coming up here in the Spring," was the remark made by a farmer from the vicinity of Langdon, North Dakota, when he arrived in Winnipeg, Manitoba, the capital of Western Canada, a few days since. He was the advance guard of a large body who are following him, and he has already invested in several farming sections for himself and others and purposes to take up his permanent abode in this country. He went on to say: "Hundreds are coming from my district alone. I know this to be a fact, for many of them are neighbors of mine. The chief topic of conversation with the farmers is the coming immigration in the spring."

"The impression general in the part of Dakota where I live that farmers can get from 10 to 15 cents more a bushel for wheat on the American side of the line than on the Canadian, has not prevented people from turning their eyes to Canada as a place to live in. They know they can get land in this country which is every bit as fertile as that in Dakota at about one-quarter the price. It is safe to say that the exodus from Dakota into Canada this year will exceed the expectations of all Canadians."

The Government has established Agencies at St. Paul, Minn.; Omaha, Neb.; Kansas City, Mo.; Chicago, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Wausau, Wis.; Detroit, Sault Ste. Marie, and Marquette, Mich.; Toledo, Ohio; Watertown, S. Dakota; Grand Forks, N. Dakota; and Great Falls, Montana, and the suggestion is made that by addressing any of these, who are the authorized agents of the Government, it will be to the advantage of the reader, who will be given the fullest and most authentic information regarding the results of mixed farming, dairying, ranching and grain-raising, and also supply information as to freight and passenger rates, etc., etc.

Boiled It Down.

An amusing story is told of the editor of a go-ahead London evening newspaper, who, in the eternal rushing to press to get ahead of the opposition, was constantly impressing upon his reporters the necessity for condensing all news.

A terrific boiler explosion had taken place on board a big ship lying at Portsmouth.

"Get down there as hard as you can," he said to one of his men. "If you catch the 11:40 from London bridge you'll be there soon after two and can just wire us something for the fifth edition, but boil it down."

And the reporter went. Soon after two o'clock that afternoon they got a wire from him.

"Terrific explosion. Man-o'-war. Boiler empty. Engineer full. Funeral to-morrow."—London Tit-Bits.

New Cure for Lame Back.

Rutledge, Minn., Feb. 16th.—Mr. E. C. Getchell of this place relates a happy experience which will be read with interest by all those who have a similar trouble.

It appears that last winter Mr. Getchell was seized with a lameness and soreness in his back which grew worse and worse till at last it became very bad and made it very difficult for him to get about at all.

After a time he heard of a new remedy for backache which some of his friends and neighbors said had cured them and he determined to try it. The name of the remedy is Dodd's Kidney Pills and Mr. Getchell has proven that it is a sure cure. He says:

"I used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills according to directions and my lame back was entirely cured and I am all O. K. again. Dodd's Kidney Pills are as good as represented."

This remedy is very popular here and has worked some remarkable cures of Backache and Kidney Trouble.

A VENERABLE PASTOR CURED BY PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

The Oldest Man in America Attributes His Long Life and Good Health to Pe-ru-na.

Mr. Isaac Brock, of McLennan county, Texas, has attained the great age of 114 years. He is an ardent friend of Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms. Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"I RELY UPON PE-RU-NA FOR ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES."

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper remedy for ailments due directly to the effects of the climate.

"For 114 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States. During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases. For the last ten or fifteen years I have been reading Dr. Hartman's books and have learned from them one thing in particular: That these affections are the same and that they are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my stand-by for many years and I attribute my good health and my extreme old age to this remedy.

"It exactly meets all my requirements. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people, although I have no doubt it is just as good for the young."—Isaac Brock.

A New Man at 79.

Major Frank O'Mahoney, West Side, Hannibal, Mo., writes:

"I am professionally a newspaper correspondent, now 79 years old. I have watched the growing power of the Peruna plant from its incipiency in the little log cabin, through its gradations of success up to its present establishment in Columbus, Ohio, and I conclude that merit brings its full reward.

"Up to a few years ago I felt no need to test its medicinal potency, but lately when my system needed it, your Peruna relieved me of many catarrhal troubles. Some two years ago I weighed 210 pounds, but fell away down to 168 pounds, and besides loss of flesh I was subject to stomach troubles, indigestion, loss of appetite, insomnia, night sweats, and a foreboding of getting my entire system out of order. During some months I gave Peruna a fair trial, and it rejuvenated my whole system. I feel thankful therefore, for although 79 years old I feel like a young man."—Major Frank O'Mahoney.

In old age the mucous membranes become thickened and partly lose their function.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a lifelong stand-by with old and young.

Mr. Samuel Saunders of Blythedale, Mo., writes: "My disease was catarrh of the urethra and bladder. I got a bottle of Pe-ru-na and began taking it, and in a few days I was relieved and could sleep and rest all night. I think that Pe-ru-na is a valuable remedy. I had tried other very highly recommended medicines, but they did me no good. My physician told me that I could not expect to be cured of my trouble, as I was getting to be an old man (57 years). I feel very thankful for what Pe-ru-na has done for me."

In a later letter Mr. Saunders says: "I am still of the same mind with regard to your Pe-ru-na medicine."

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes:

"In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with severe rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when 88 years old can say it has invigorated my whole system. I cannot but think, dear Doctor, that you must feel very thankful to the all loving Father that you have been permitted to live, and by your skill be such a blessing as you have been to suffering humanity."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

Mrs. F. E. Little, Tolona, Ill., writes: "I can recommend Peruna as a good medicine for chronic catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I have been troubled severely with it for over a year, and also a cough. Now my cough is all gone, and all the distressing symptoms of catarrh of the stomach and bowels have disappeared. I will recommend it to all as a rare remedy. I am so well I am contemplating a trip to Yellow Stone Park this coming season. How is that for one 71 years old?"

A TRAVELER AT SEVENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE.

In a later letter she says: "I am only too thankful to you for your kind advice and for the good health that I am enjoying wholly from the use of your Peruna. Have been out to the Yellow Stone National Park and many other places of the west, and shall always thank you for your generosity."—Mrs. F. E. Little.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

FEBRUARY FOR LOVE

Customs That We Have Borrowed from Heathen Rome.

None of the Numerous Saints Named Valentine, Says Senator Stewart, Had Anything to Do with Lovers.

[Special Washington Letter.]

NOW is the time for the young people to enjoy themselves, and for the more mature to make fools of themselves. Children will send valentines, and mask themselves behind the missives, so that the receivers can only guess who sent them.

The folks who are a little older will gratify their mean feelings and bitter hatreds by sending valentines which will wound and cause tears of sadness or of rage. They who send such valentines are worse than mean, they are cowardly.

The windows of our stationery stores are filled with prints of all sorts; just as they are in your vicinity. The mails are filled with missives of this valentiney character; even the potent, grave and reverend seigniors, commonly called statesmen, are receiving their share.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, talks very learnedly about this singular custom, saying: "Just as there were eight kings named Henry, and seven named Edward, so there have been numerous individuals in history named Valentine, or Valentinus. My recollection is that there were 52 saints named Valentinus; but there are not less than three particularized in history. The first was a presbyter and martyr, and, according to the Roman traditions, he lived during the third century of this era. The emperor Claudius Gothicus caused him to be chained and tortured until reconverted to idolatry. One of the daughters of his jailor was blind, and Saint Valentinus caused her sight to be miraculously restored, whereupon the whole family was converted to Christianity. Another jailor, however, continued the torture until finally the saint was beheaded, on February 14, A. D., 240. Special services are held in memory of him in Catholic churches until this day.

"Valentine the Second," continued the senator, "was also a martyr, and was a bishop in the church. Sometime in the fourth century Valentine restored to physical perfection the deformed son of a Greek scholastic, and that miracle caused the coming of many thousands into the Christian fold. When the church canonized him the 14th day of February was set aside, as in the former case.

"The third Valentine was an apostle and late in life was bishop of Passau. He was not a martyr, but was canonized because of the vastness of his work as an apostle and the marvelous successes which attended his efforts in bringing the heathen visited by him into the church communion. Thus it happened that not less than three saints named Valentine have the 14th day of February set aside for special services in commemoration of their memory."

Senator Stewart has been a member of the senate since 1863, when Nevada was admitted to the union. To those who have had the delight of his acquaintance for a number of years he is one of the most genial and interesting of gentlemen, but to the younger generation of news-gatherers he is scarcely known, except by sight. He does not care to make new friends, and says that aged and aging men are all likewise conservative in that particular. He believes that "old friends, like old wines, are the best."

ON THE LUPERCAL.

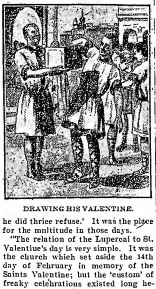
"Now as to the origin of St. Valentine's day and its customs," continued the senator, "there has been a great deal of misinformation disseminated by those who guess, because it is easier than to investigate. You must separate the origin of the day from its most distinctive custom. You will observe that I have given you 'the origin,' when I have explained that the church set aside the day for special services in memory of three saints of that name. That fixes the 'origin' of St. Valentine's day on February 14.

"The 'custom,' that is, the characteristically freaky and funny way of celebrating that day, has absolutely nothing to do with 'the origin.' Please keep that fact in mind. We have settled the matter of the 'origin' of St. Valentine's day.

"One of the best known facts of Roman history is concerning the Lupercalia. You have often heard or read of great gatherings on the Lupercal, where the carnivals were held. You must certainly remember Marc Antony's speech, in which he says to the Roman populace: 'You all do know that thrice upon the Lupercal I offered Caesar a kingly crown, which he did thrice refuse.' It was the place for the multitude in those days.



DRAWING HIS VALENTINE.

"The relation of the Lupercal to St. Valentine's day is very simple. It was the church which set aside the 14th day of February in memory of the Saints Valentine; but the 'custom' of freaky celebrations existed long before the church existed. The 14th day of February was the day set apart by the heathen of very ancient Rome for the street acrobatic performances, the carnivals, tumbling, pantomimes; a sort of Mardi Gras, such as is nowadays celebrated in New Orleans. That was the Lupercalia, and it existed probably a thousand years before the coming of the The-Anthropos, the founder of the church; the church which set aside St. Valentine's day. 'The origin' of St. Valentine's day is churchly. 'The custom' of its celebration is heathen."

That tells the whole story. One of the well known ceremonies of the Lupercalia was the placing of the names of young girls in a box, on slips of paper. After they were thoroughly shaken together the slips were drawn out by the young men present, and the girls whose names were drawn were the partners of the young men for the occasion. The early priests of Christian church stopped this practice, and required the substitution of the names of apostles and saints; and the young men who drew the slips were expected to simulate the lives of the saints whose names were drawn.

We cannot follow St. Valentine's day into other countries, but history shows us that in England, about the tenth century, the people revived the heathen custom of placing the names of girls in the box. This method of getting the girls and young men together again resulted in a custom of expecting marriages to follow the choosing of partners; and thus it happened in England that St. Valentine gradually began to be regarded as the patron saint of lovers; and this error spread to our country.

Another thing from heathen Rome. The Lupercalia was in honor of Februarta-Juno, and the month of February was called by heathen priests the lovers' month. This idea spread to other countries. And, when the English custom of drawing lovers for weddings on St. Valentine's day became known in other countries, they adopted it. This became all the more natural, because the choosing of human mates in that month would seem to the people of early days as appropriate as the choosing of mates by the birds, a fact long well known, especially in Italy and contiguous countries. It became the lovers' month, and the mating month; and the greatest church day of that month being St. Valentine's day, the whole world entered into the error of making St. Valentine the patron saint of all the lovers in the world.

Young men used to wear the slips bearing the names of their chosen partners on their sleeves, sometimes for weeks at a time. The sending of cards (an enlargement of drawing slips) began in the eigteenth century. The making of comic valentines is one of the horrors of American genius, worse even than the yellow journal. Another Americanism originated in the fertile brain of some street urchin; probably a newsboy whose capacity for cussedness is unlimited, the ringing of door bells and then running away before they are answered.

And all of this expense and funny business in honor of saints who never had anything to do with lovers, mating, marrying nor giving in marriage. How this world does delight in being fooled or in fooling itself.

WHAT WILL PARLIAMENT DO?

Minneapolis Tribune.

The most interesting thing about the meeting of the British parlirment for Americans is its attitude towards the Venezuela performance. British newspapers, from the Times down, have led us to believe that the German alliance vas universally disapproved, and that the violent acts of the blockading squadrons were universally condemned. This view has been confirmed by public speeches of members of parliament and leaders of opinion. we have been promised that the ministry should be called to account as soon as the representatives of the people met in parliament for endangering the good understanding between the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon race.

We shall soon see whether this was a sincere assurance or only a "jolly." The king barely touches on the Vene zuela question in his speech; but there is material enough in it to give an opportunity for a motion. This is the usual way to bring on debate of a subject of national policy. It will be interesting to see how far men whose good feeling for the Unitad States has led them to attack the ministry outside of parliament will go in attacking them on the floor; and we shall see how strongly they will be supported by the representatives of the people.

The British blue book gives a rare opportunity to call the ministers to account. Apologists for them have tried to pu responsibility for the extreme violence used in Venezuela npon the Germans, and have contended that the well meaning British were led farther than they intended to go But the blue hook shows that Great Britain was first to suggest the blockade and the seiznre of the Venezuelan navy. There is ample evidence that the sympathy professed by the British press and public for us and for our peculiar sensitiveness in relation to European interference in the United States is not shared hy the present British government. we shall see what parliament will do about it.

How Air Acts on Mercury.

When the air around us becomes condensed—shrinks into a smaller volume—it becomes heavier, puts greater pressure on the surface of the mercury and makes it ascend in the tube then the mercury is said to rise. When the air expands—swells into a larger volume—it becomes lighter, the pressure on the mercury is less, the mercury sinks in the tube and the barometer is said to fall. Therefore every change of height of the quicksilver which we observe is a sign and measure of a change in the volume of air around us.

How Men Fall When Shot.

Nearly every one is familiar with the traditional stage fall, where the victim of a supposed death shot strikes an attitude, clasps his hand to his heart, stiffens every joint and muscle, breathes hysterically and goes down like a log toppled over from the end. Another popular yet erroneous notion is that men shot through the vitals leap into the air and go down in a dramatic attitude. Sometimes men are found on the field in striking positions, but often an examination shows that the position was taken after the fall.

As a rule a man who is hit above the hips sinks down. The slighter the wound the more commotion, for the body instinctively resists, just as it does when one slips or is pushed or collides with some object. But a wound in a vital spot weakens the resistance and men sink at once or reel and tumble with very little self control.

Crossing the Bar.

Tennyson's famous poem, "Crossing the Bar," was written, says the present Lord Tennyson, in the poet's eighty-first year, "on a day in October when we came from Aldworth to Farringford. Before reaching Farringford he had had the 'moaning of the bar' in his mind, and after dinner he showed me the poem written out." "That is the crown of your life's work," said his son, who was the first man after the poet to read "Crossing the Bar," and who passed the first criticism upon it in such fitting and generous language. "It came in a moment," said the poet, and he explained the pilot as the Divine and Unseen who is always guiding us. A day or two before he died the poet, calling his son to his bedside, said, "Mind you put 'Crossing the Bar' at the end of all editions of my [illegible]."

A PETITION BACKED BY VOTES.

Krist Larson came over from Winsor Monday to talk ditch to us before we went to St Paul.

The farmers of the towns of Greenwood Winsor and Johnson, have prepared a monster petition to the legislatur as follows.

To the legislature of the state of Minnesoto:

We the undersigned, resiiedrts legal voters and citizens of Tp. 150 r 38, Tp. 150 r 37, Tp 151 r 38 & 39, lying in Polk and Beltrami Counties, respectfully petition yon Honorable body that an appropriation of ten thousand dollars be made at the present session of the legislature for the purpose of continuing and completing the present so-called Polk County Ditch sitasituated in Polk County in Tp 151 r 39. That said money may be used for the double purpose of constructing seid ditch, and a public road or highway, along the same by means of the use of the dirt obtained in excaveting said ditch, such road to act as a dyke, and for the purppose of keeping the water within said ditch.

That by so doing more than fifty thousand acres of land will be drained and made capable of cultivation and the raising of crops, a large portion of which is now not tillable owing to presence of water and the inability of the Clearwater River to carry away the same during the wet seasons.

Dressing by Act of Parliament.

The old sumptuary laws were those regulations by which the dress and food of the king's subjects were nicely controlled. It was a sort of official Mrs. Grundy. Fashion regulations for men in particular were laid down on very precise lines, and the changes in their attire occurred much more frequently than in women's. Very different is the case now. In those days, too, men's dress was bright and even gaudy.

Prior to 1104 long hair was the regulation. In that year, however, Henry I., of blessed memory to barbers, had all his subjects' locks ruthlessly shorn.

The next important edict of this kind was under Edward III., who insisted that no one should have more than two courses for dinner, except on the eighteen holidays in the year, when the king's lieges might eat and drink at will.

Of interest to ladies will be the hard fate that befell the big sleeves worn by men under Richard II. We are told that some hung down to the knees. When pottage is brought to the table "the sleeves go into them and get the first taste." In short, the nuisance was so intolerable that a statute was passed prohibiting any man below a knight banneret from wearing them.

Doesn't Want It Back.

She—The programme says it is taken from the German.

He—Humph! I should think they were glad enough to get rid of it.

Contagious Only.

"This fishin' fever seems to be contagious," said the stranger, noting the long row of anglers perched upon the creek bank.

"Yes, it's contagious, all right," said the man who had been fishing for hours without a nibble, "but not catching."—Baltimore American.

Sleeping on a Kong.

China is a land without mattresses or counterpanes. A bed, or kong, is merely a broad wall of brick built across the side of the room. On first acquaintance it seems absolutely impossible for an Anglo-Saxon, but a man in the interior of China must either sleep on a kong or not sleep at all. I determined that if the bricks would not yield to me I must yield to them, and, as a means of yielding gracefully, I studied the sleeping methods of my Chinese companions. I found that their practice was to climb inside of quilted sacks, called pookas, which they tied and folded around themselves until a row of men on a kong looked not unlike sealed envelopes. Whenever they rolled or turned over in their sleep their pookas rolled with them. In whatever position they happened to lie on the brick pile they could not escape the ameliorating effect of their pookas. Obviously I, too, must have a pooka. From a dealer in leather in a town through which we passed I bought two goatskins. I had them sewed together, with the hair side in. I devised a system of strings by which I could tie myself in my appliance, and in this way I succeeded in sleeping in China.—Outing.

Rapid Work For Fingers.

The deaf and dumb, as every one knows, "speak" by means of their fingers. How many words, then, can a good hand speaker form in a minute? The average number of letters per word in the English language is five. Now, a ready hand speaker can make the English alphabet ten times in a minute—that is to say, 260 letters. It is usual for him to pause for the space of one letter after each word to show that the word is complete. If, therefore, we subtract from the total just given about one-sixth for these stoppages, the total will be reduced to 215 letters.

Let this be divided by five, the average number of letters per word, and we shall find that a fairly expert deaf and dumb person will speak forty-three words per minute. A person in possession of speech will probably speak 150 words in the same space of time.

Substitutes For Tobacco.

Dried holly leaves, the bark of the willow and leaves of the stag's horn sumac are among the substitutes for tobacco used by the American Indians. In Switzerland a weed called mountain tobacco is smoked in great quantities. It is powdered before using and causes the smoker to become a mental and physical wreck. The natives of South Africa are peculiarly affected by smoking the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly any one using it.

Selling Elephants by Measure.

The Moors, who drive a trade in elephants through the Indies, have a fixed price for the ordinary type according to their size. To ascertain their true value they measure from the nail of the fore foot to the top of the shoulder, and for each cubit high they charge $500. An African elephant of the largest size measures about nine cubits, or thirteen and one-half feet, in height and is worth about $4,500. For huge Ceylon elephants $20,000 is sometimes paid.

Reply of a "Beardless Boy."

When Keppel, a commodore at twenty-four, was sent to demand an apology from the dey of Algiers for an insult to the British flag, he took so high a tone that the dey exclaimed against the insolence of the British king for charging a "beardless boy" with such a message to him. Replied the beardless boy, "Were my master wont to take length of beard for a test of wisdom he'd have sent your deyship a he goat."—Gentleman's Magazine.

The Word "Umbrella."

The English word umbrella is very like the Latin, coming through the Italian "ombbrella," or "little shade." The French, German, Spanish and others give it a distinctive name, such as "parapluie," "regenschirm" and "paraguas." "Umbrella" and "parasol" are etymologically precisely the same thing, but custom has given them the distinctions that we understand today.

Easier Work.

"Why don't you try to carve your name high on the tablets of fame?" asked the poetic enthusiast.

"My friend," answered Senator Sorghum, a little severely, "there is no use in my dodging around with a hammer and chisel when I can do such effective work with a fountain pen and a checkbook."—Washington Star.

Borrowing Trouble.

"I have heard a good deal about people who borrow trouble, but I think my wife is a champion in that line."

"Why, I thought she was always cheerful and contented with her lot."

"She was until our baby was born six weeks ago. Now she is worrying because he may marry some girl that we shall not like."

Ten Years to Get It.

Towne—Why, he told me he was getting along splendidly; the salary and all that.

Browne—Indeed?

Towne—Yes, he told me he was getting $10,000.

Browne—So he is, at the rate of $1,000 per year.—Philadelphia Press.

Ungrammatical.

Dusty Rhodes—Will yer please give me a dime to get somethin' to eat with?

Bunker Hill—My good man, you cannot purchase a set of false teeth for 10 cents.

Poker Friends.

"No, I am not popular any more with the gang," moaned a business man who used to entertain largely at poker. "I haven't touched a card in seven years. The friends I made at the poker table were near and dear to me. When I lived on the seventh floor of a tenement, they flocked to see me nightly, climbing the stairs without a murmur. When I moved to the Bronx, they followed me. When I settled in Jamaica, the ride to my house did not seem too long for them, nor did they mind the journey home at 3 or 4 in the morning. When I realized that I was supporting them with my losses, I tore up the cards and cracked the chips with a hammer. When, lo, behold, every mother's son of them knew me no more! I lived so far away that it was impossible to find time to come to visit me. I am sure that if I had opened a poker game in the darkest cell in the bottom of the bottomless pit they would have come to play with me. To regain their friendship it is only necessary to announce a reopening of the game."—New York Press.

The Etiquette of Cues.

In China the men take as much pride in their hair as women, and the "pigtail" is a thing of no little moment. In making the cue the whole head is shaved except a circular patch upon the crown. The hair from this is braided and strands of silk are added, which end in a tassel reaching to the heels. In full mourning the black strands are replaced by white ones and in second mourning by light blue or green.

It is an unpardonable breach of etiquette for an inferior to enter the presence of a superior with his cue wound round his neck or head, as it is frequently disposed of during work. [illegible] the greatest insult one man can [illegible] another is to pull his cue. [illegible] very odd to see sailors and soldiers [illegible] ship or in barracks combing each other's long tresses or coolies at the street corners performing the same friendly office. Custom forbids a man to [illegible] a beard and mustache until he becomes a grandfather.

He Got Up.

There is a keen knowledge of human nature in the following bit of fun [illegible] the Lewiston Journal, but no more than might be expected from a down east tavern keeper who has had a long experience with autumnal sportsmen, [illegible] whom many are called, but few get up.

A mighty hunter from Boston "put up" at a quaint little Maine hostelry and left word in the office that he wished to be called at half past 4 in the morning. Sharp at that time the next morning came a thundering rap at the door.

"All righ'! I'll be down in a minute!" called a muffled voice from under the quilts.

"You get up here now and sign this receipt!" commanded Uncle Cy.

"Receipt? What receipt?" demanded a very wideawake voice, and the bed squeaked loudly.

"Waal," grunted Uncle Cy, "I don't calkerlate to have ye humping down to the office at 8 o'clock declaring that ye ain't been called."

A Humorous Mixture.

In a Scotch church an old minister who was very deaf was also very anxious to introduce some new hymnals into the church and asked his precentor to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The precentor, having a notice of his own, gave out: [illegible] members of the congregation wishing to have their children baptized were to send their names into the vestry. The old minister, thinking that it was the notice about the hymnbooks, stood up and said, "And I wish to say, for the benefit of those who have not any, that they may be had in the vestry any afternoon, between the hours of 3 and 4—ordinary little ones at a shilling each, and special little ones, with red backs, at one and three."

Effort and Its Effect.

It pays to think. It is like putting money out at interest. Dollars make dollars, and thoughts make other thoughts. We are so accustomed to having this old world reward us for things we do in dollars that we forget there is such a reward as brains—mental growth. Happy the one who sees all these things in their proper light, who recognizes in every failure a lesson learned, in every effort a reward, be it only a little speck of mental energy.

The Self Effacing Act.

Myer—In olden time it is said that it was possible for a man to render himself invisible.

Gyer—Pshaw! That's not at all remarkable. Men in this country are doing it every day.

Myer—You don't tell me! How do they manage it?

Gyer—By marrying famous women.—Chicago News.

Significant.

In a well known thoroughfare in London outside of a noted restaurant there might be seen the following notice:

"This is the best restaurant in London! Our fish cannot be approached!"—London King.

Today.

Today is a king in disguise. Today always looks mean to the thoughtless, in the face of a uniform experience that all good and great and happy actions are made up precisely of these blank todays.

A High Testimonial.

Lady (engaging a maid)—Was your last mistress satisfied with you?

Maid—Well, mum, she said she was very pleased when I left.

Persian Athletes.

Strong and skilled as western athletes are, there are some respects in which the athletes of the east, and especially those of Persia, surpass them.

Their skill is due to the fact that they do not rely on brute strength, but on adroitness, which they have acquired after years of strenuous training. They know the function of every muscle in their bodies, and they are not regarded as experts until they are so well trained that they can perform with ease any feat which depends for success not only upon their strength, but also upon the proper play of their muscles.

They are not as bulky as some of the well known athletes of Europe and America, but, on the other hand, their bodies are wonderfully symmetrical, and all their movements are most graceful.

In wrestling and swinging clubs they especially excel, and, no matter how expert they may be, not a day passes that they do not practice for several hours.

Reed Enjoyed It.

Thomas B. Reed was once the victim of a printer's error the unusual aptness of which, after the first flush of indignation had subsided, appealed so strongly to his sense of the comic that he never failed to refer to the matter with the keenest gusto whenever he met the man whom he, with the utmost mock solemnity, always held responsible for it.

The late Colonel John A. Cockerill's handwriting in the heat of composition was sometimes liable to lose itself in an almost interminable tangle, decipherable only with the greatest difficulty. On one occasion he undertook to say that "any one can see Tom Reed has the face of an honest man," but was horrified when he opened his paper the following morning and found that the types made him say that "any one can see Tom Reed has a face like a harvest moon."

Learned to Cipher.

Aunty—So this was your first term at school? What did you learn?

Little Girl—I learned how to cipher.

Aunty—You learned arithmetic?

Little Girl—No'm. I learned how to write cipher notes to little boys wot nobody else could read. A little girl taught me.

A Miraculous Vault.

The most interesting place of pilgrimage in Dublin is St. Michan's church, where the organ is still to be seen upon which Handel is said to have composed his "Messiah." In the graveyard is the last resting place of Robert Emmet, and the vault at St. Michan's provides a more gruesome thrill than the morgue. The sexton lifts an iron door and descends a few rude steps, carrying a light, without which the place would be pitch dark. You follow and find yourself in a narrow passage, from which cell-like recesses belonging to different families branch off. Whether it is owing to the extreme dryness of the surroundings or to some mysterious property of the place the process of decay has been arrested, and the features of persons dead for two centuries may be recognized from authentic portraits. Here lie the brothers Sheares, who were executed for their share in the United Irish conspiracy, side by side almost with the Earl of Leitrim, who was murdered about thirty years ago. The earl's ancestors for hundreds of years back rest in the same vault. Perhaps the strangest thing about the vault is the fact that, apart from the weird sensation, there is nothing offensive in the surroundings.—London Tatler.

LADY ON EDITORIAL STAFF OF LEADING RELIGIOUS WEEKLY

Sends the Following Grand Testimonial to the Merits of Cuticura Remedies in the Treatment of Humours of the Blood, Skin and Scalp.

"I wish to give my testimony to the efficiency of the Cuticura Remedies in what seems to me two somewhat remarkable cases. I had a number of skin tumours—small ones—on my arms which had never given me serious trouble; but about two years ago one came on my throat. At first it was only about as large as a pinhead, but, as it was in a position where my collar, if not just right, would irritate it, it soon became very sensitive and began to grow rapidly. Last spring it was as large, if not larger, than a bean. A little unusual irritation of my collar started it to swelling, and in a day or two it was as large as half an orange. I was very much alarmed, and was at a loss to determine whether it was a carbuncle or a malignant tumor.

"My friends tried to persuade me to consult my physician; but dreading that he would insist on using the knife, I would not consent to go. Instead I got a small bottle of Cuticura Resolvent and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I took the former according to directions, and spread a thick layer of the Ointment on a linen cloth and placed it on the swelling. On renewing it I would bathe my neck in very warm water and Cuticura Soap. In a few days the Cuticura Ointment had drawn the swelling to a head, when it broke. Every morning it was opened with a large sterilized needle, squeezed and bathed, and fresh Ointment put on. Pus and blood, and a yellow, cheesy, tumorous matter came out. In about three or four weeks' time this treatment completely eliminated boil and tumor. The soreness that had extended down into my chest was all gone, and my neck now seems to be perfectly well.

"About five or six years ago my sister had a similar experience. She had two large lumps come under her right arm, the result of a sprain. They grew rapidly, and our physician wanted to cut them out. I would not listen to it, and she tried the Cuticura Remedies (as I did a few months ago) with magical effect. In six weeks' time the lumps had entirely disappeared, and have never returned.

"I have great faith in the Cuticura Remedies, and I believe they might be as efficacious in similar cases with other people, and thus save much suffering, and perhaps life. I have derived so much benefit from the use of them myself that I am constantly advising others to use them. Recently I recommended them to an office boy for his father, who was disabled with salt rheum. The man's feet were swollen to an enormous size, and he had not worked for six weeks. Two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment worked a perfect cure. You never saw a more grateful man in your life.

"I am very much interested in another case where I have recommended Cuticura just now. My housemaid's mother has a goitre which had reached a very dangerous point. The doctors told her that nothing could be done; that she could live only two or three weeks, and that she would die of strangulation. She was confined to her bed, and was unable to speak, when her daughter, at my suggestion, tried the effect of the Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent. Strange to say, she was very shortly relieved of the most distressing symptoms. The swelling seemed to be exteriorized, and she is now able to be around her house, and can talk as well as ever.

"It seems to me that I have pretty good grounds for believing that Cuticura Remedies will prove successful in the most distressing forms of blood and skin humours, and if you wish to use my testimonial as herein indicated, I am willing that you should do so, with the further privilege of revealing my name and address to such persons as may wish to substantiate the above statements by personal letter to me."

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, Feb. 18.—The senate yesterday, after a prolonged debate, approved Senator R. E. Thompson's bill to increase the state aid for high schools from $1,000 to $1,600.

The following bills were passed:

To require municipal courts in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants to refund to county treasurers fines and costs in criminal actions paid in default of the defendant in cases when the defendant subsequently appears and pays the same.

To change the state tax for the establishment of libraries and reading rooms from 1 to 2 mills.

Representative Frank A. Carlson, of Litchfield, yesterday introduced in the house a bill designed to prevent large concerns doing business in several parts of the state from driving competitors out of business by cutting prices.

Representative P. A. Gandrud, of Sundberg, yesterday introduced a bill to extend the present law forbidding the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for a state boiler inspector in each of the sixty-three senatorial districts of the state.

Legalizing corporations formed heretofore and validating transfers of property.

Appropriating $5,000 for repairs at the Red Wing state training school.

Authorizing United States commissioners to take acknowledgments and administer oaths the same as notaries public.

Legalizing acknowledgments taken and oaths administered by United States commissioners.

Providing that 2 per cent of the tax paid the state by fire insurance companies, instead of 1 per cent as at present, shall go to firemen's relief associations.

St. Paul, Feb. 19.—The senate had a short session yesterday. Only five bills were introduced and one was passed. The body had a fifteen-minute recess to join the house in listening to Capt. Richmond P. Hobson. The senate will meet at 10 o'clock this morning.

Senator L. O. Thorpe, of Willmar, introduced an anti-trust bill which he and Attorney General Douglas believe will do much to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraint and monopolies.

Senator H. Witherstine's bill providing for the transportation of pupils from one school district to another was passed by the senate yesterday without opposition.

The measure stipulates that school boards in districts where school has been suspended shall make arrangements for instruction in a neighboring district.

The house yesterday passed the Heillwell inheritance law by a vote of 77 to 28. The bill imposes a tax of 1 per cent on direct inheritances exceeding $1,000 and of 5 per cent on indirect inheritances in excess of $1,000. The exemption does not apply to the entire estate, but to the amount received by each heir, or beneficiary.

The bill defines direct inheritances as those to a father, a mother, a grandfather, a grandmother, a brother, a sister, a grandchild, a wife or widow of a son, or to any legally adopted child, or to a person to whom the decendent for ten years previously had stood in the mutual acknowledged relation of parent, or to any lineal descendent of the decedent.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—Senator A. B. Cole's wolf bounty bill was approved by the senate committee on towns and counties yesterday with slight amendments. The measure appropriates $15,000 annually and reduces the bounty on full grown female wolves from $15 to $5. It fixes a bounty on full grown male wolves, female cubs and male cubs at $3, $4 and $2 respectively.

Senator Henry Gjertsen's bill to prohibit bucket shops was approved by the senate committee on judiciary. The measure has been twice before the committee. It was reported without recommendation the first time.

A bill allowing notaries public to perform marriage ceremonies was introduced yesterday by Senator E. J. Swedback of Bemidji.

The permitting voters of any township to hold their elections within an incorporated city or village, located within said town was passed.

Representative Ambrose Tighe of St. Paul, chairman of the house appropriations committee, introduced the usual biennial deficiency bill, which aggregates $114,360.29.

Representative Frank Clague of Redwood county introduced a bill which codifies and amplifies the laws governing the state agricultural society. The bill cures some vague cloud in the title to the fair grounds, and provides methods for governing them.

Representative A. L. Cole of Walker introduced a bill providing that logs shall be assessed and taxed in the county in which they are cut. The county commissioners shall elect an assessor who shall assess the logs cut in the county, no matter where their owner may reside, or where they may be shipped or manufactured.

To increase the state aid for high schools from $1,000 to $1,600.

Six people were drowned while trying to cross the Ohio river, near Hickman, Ky., the swift current carrying their boat into some driftwood; and five people were hurt by a cyclone which passed over Hickory Level, Ga.

Twelve men, arrested, at New York in connection with the smuggling of tobacco on steamships from Holland, were sentenced to three months each.

Trouble on board the battleship Maine, which is lying in dry dock for repairs at Newport News, Va., culminated in the shooting of one seaman by a guard of the marines. It is reported that the wounded man died shortly afterward.

The fast passenger train, Chattanooga to Salisbury, was wrecked on the Southern road about 3½ miles west of Lenoir City, Tenn. The wreck was caused by spreading rails. Three deaths are reported and twenty-four injured.

The United States senate passed the fortifications appropriation bill and the house immigration bill with amendments. The general deficiency bill, the last of the appropriation measures to be considered, was reported from the committee.

TONGUE OF CALUMNY

Ever Busy to Injure the Reputation of Good Men.

Charges of Bribery Have Often Been Made Against Congressmen, But They Have Never Been Made Good.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"STOP thief!" It is the cry of the criminal who endeavors to divert public attention from himself.

It is a scheme as old as the hills and was practiced by thieves away back of the time of Jonathan Wild, Schinderhannes, or any of the others recorded in history.

"Dutch Heinrichs," one of the best known criminals in New York, about a dozen years ago got away with an immense tray full of magnificent diamonds by resorting to that old ruse. He knocked the saleman down, grabbed the tray, ran out into Broadway, handed the tray to a confederate, who stepped into an adjoining hallway, and closing the door after him, while "Dutch" ran down the street howling "stop thief!" followed by the salesman, who had recovered and came forth making the same cry.

Everybody joined in the chase. The salesman soon fell out of the race, "Dutch" kept the lead until the crowd numbered hundreds, and then he quietly disappeared from the chase; fortunately without meeting a policeman, who might have recognized him. His confederate filled his pocket with the gems, left the tray in the hall, met "Dutch" that night and divided, giving Heinrichs the bulk of the wealth, of course. A few days later they saw "Uncle Jim Matthews," who gave them long green paper for the shiners.

This story was told confidentially, a few months later, in "Uncle Jim's" place on Broadway, near Twentieth street, and Heinrichs said insinuatingly: "Captain of precinct had 'good reason' never to suspect me in de game." [illegible] was [illegible] house [illegible]sman, [illegible]tuous [illegible]ffered [illegible]vored [illegible] good [illegible]emuel [illegible]y man- [illegible]ime in [illegible] at any [illegible] bring [illegible]nocent individual, and he also a former member of congress. In 1894 there was a general hue and cry about certain senators making use of their positions to put money in their purses by speculating in sugar stocks. A special committee was appointed by the senate to investigate the charges which newspapers had made. One by one the senators appeared before that committee and denied having had anything to do with the stock market, until Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, appeared, and he said:

HANDING TRAY TO HIS PAL.

"This committee has no jurisdiction over the actions of any senator. Nevertheless, I will tell you frankly that I have speculated in sugar stocks and in other stocks for many years, and that I shall continue to do so, as long as I please."

The first case of alleged bribery to come before the congress was on December 30, 1795, when Robert Randall and Charles Whitney were charged before the house of representatives with attempting to bribe members of congress to vote for a bill granting all of the lands lying between lakes Erie, Michigan and Huron, to a company of which Randall and Whitney claimed to be the agents. This proposed steal amounted to 20,000,000 acres of land: and the company of proposed beneficiaries claimed to be able to extinguish and pay for the Indian titles. This was the precursor of the land grants on which Credit Mobilier was founded.

Randall and Whitney approached Congressman Giles, of Virginia, and told him that while the stock of the company was the best thing he could possibly take, because of its future dividends, they had with them $1,000,000 in cash to distribute among timid senators and representatives, who prefered cash to stock. Mr. Giles arranged an interview, where Randall and Whitney met other members and repeated their bribery proposals. Then Mr. Giles informed the president, who ordered the arrest of the bribers. But, by reason of a question of jurisdiction, the United States marshal did not make the arrest. Thereupon the sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives arrested them on December 29, and on December 30 haled them before the bar of the house, where there was begun a debate concerning the powers of congress which lasted two weeks, at the end of which time they were reprimanded by the speaker, and released from custody.

During the war of 1812, the British forces caused great losses to the people at River Raisin, and in 1818 claims to the amount of $30,000 were presented before congress. Col. John Anderson, the principal claimant, wrote a letter to Congressman Lewis Williams, of North Carolina, offering "to pay him $500 for the extra trouble he gave him, in desiring him to relate to the congress the story of the conduct of the British in that country."

"STOP THIEF!"

Mr. Williams laid this letter before Speaker Henry Clay, and demanded action by the house of representatives on this attempt to bribe him. After a protracted debate the house, by a vote of 118 to 45 ordered the arrest of Anderson, and he was arraigned before the bar of the house, the speaker (Mr. Clay) interrogating him as to the extent of the influence proposed in his letter.

It was shown that Col. Anderson had been a very brave soldier, had been loyal to his country and refused the command of a regiment tendered him by the British when they held Michigan; and he was also vouched for by Gen. William Henry Harrison, Postmaster General Meigs and others of national reputation. Consequently, when the old soldier stated that he had no intention of bribery, but honestly wanted to pay for extra services which were requested by him, he was mildly reprimanded by the speaker, and released from custody.

Charges of corruption in office have oftentimes been made in the public prints, but the records of congress show no other specific charges to have been investigated. Whenever any great revenue bill is pending, it has become customary for charges of a general nature to be bandied about, but it is creditable to our country that an atmosphere of purity has usually surrounded the halls of legislation. The presence of the lynx-eyed newsgatherers may be given credit for something of this creditable condition.

One of the most creditable days in the history of the life of the late William McKinley was the day of the announcement of his business failure. In the company of many other close and anxious observers of events, the writer had witnessed the comings and goings of scores of wealthy men, and the accredited representatives of shipping interests and other great commercial interests, in and out of the room of the committee on ways and means, while the McKinley tariff bill was being framed, in 1900. Not a few conservative men listened without rebuke to the hint that "The Major" was exceedingly polite to certain representatives of interests which received high protection in the bill. The measure was long pending and suspicion was in the air.

It may be news to the average readers of this day, but it is a fact that every member of the committee, including Maj. McKinley, was, at that time, suspected of being more or less unduly influenced in the preparation of that bill. Consequently, when, a few months later, it became known to all the world that Maj. McKenley had failed in business, that announcement tied the tongue of calumny and strangled the throat of slander.

This government of ours is an honest establishment, and for the cry of "stop thief" there is and shall be no excuse.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Frost-proof Root.

Professor Green and his assistants at the state experimental station are about to put on the market an apple tree root that will be worth millions to the state of Minnesota.

The value of the new root lies in the fact that it will not be susceptible to the frosts and cold that are now such a menace to the fruit crops of this state.

The root that has been discovered by Professor Green is the root of the Siberian crab. It has been subjected to the severest tests imaginable, and has even been given harder usage than could possibly come to it were it actually planted in the ground, and it has been able to survive.

These tests have gone on for a period of ten years or more, and every kind of apple tree has been grafted onto the root and has been found to survive and thrive.

New Ranges.

The discovery of new iron ranges in northeastern Minnesota is becoming popular. The latest prospect is in township 52-18. This is on the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern railroad, about 35 miles south of the Mesaba range.

Duluth parties have had diamond drills working there for many months, but have been keeping very quiet about it.

They say they have showing enough to warrant them in going to considerable expense in the work of prospecting and they have certainly spent a good deal of money already.

By some the discovery is looked upon as a possible continuation of the so-called Highland range north of Two Harbors, over which there is now great excitement.

Sent to Reformatory.

The five boys implicated as leaders in the attempt to destroy cottage No. 1 of the training school at Red Wing by fire have been transferred to the St. Cloud reformatory.

The other boys who knew of the plot without divulging it testified before the members of the board of control who visited the institution. These boys will remain in Red Wing.

The boys concerned had belonged to the discontinued band, and this, with their hope of escape, was the reason for the plot to burn the cottage.

Supt. Whittier of the school refuses to make public the names of the boys committed.

Burned to Death.

Fire destroyed the house of August Schultz of Brainerd, and two of his children were suffocated. One was about eight months and the other about two years old.

The parents left the two children in the care of an older daughter and went to a masquerade ball given by the city fire department.

Schultz is one of Brainerd's prominent citizens and is employed at the Northern Pacific foundry. It is thought the fire started from the stove.

Medical Board.

Governor Van Sant announced the members of the board of veterinary medical examiners, who will hold office for two years. K. J. McKinzie of Northfield is the only new man on the board, he being appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of H. A. Hela of Cokato. The other members reappointed are Bernhard Lembrechts of Montevideo, C. C. Lyford of Minneapolis, W. H. Reynolds of St. Anthony Park and E. H. Ward of St. Cloud.

News Notes.

The Fertile Brick company has closed contracts for a draintile and hollow-block factory. The addition will cost about $12,000. Work will be commenced at once and the factory will be ready by July.

The contract for building a Catholic church at Buckman, Morrison county, has been awarded to Carl Kropp of St. Cloud. A new church will also be erected for the German Catholics of Sauk Center. The main structure will be 52x120 feet.

The home of Mrs. Mina Clark, of Cass Lake, was broken into and $50 in cash, a gold watch and a diamond ring worth $250 stolen. A man hired the furnished room and paid $5 in advance and watched carefully where the money was put. Mrs. Clark went out and on her return found the door forced and her valuables gone. The man escaped.

Alfred Browold, a 11-year-old boy of Minneapolis, left his father sitting at a table, reading a newspaper and smoking, and retired. The next morning he found him dead and frozen in an out-house.

The Winona County Old Settlers' association elected the following officers: President, Thomas Simpson; treasurer, Edward Pelzer; secretary, Mathew Marvin; historian, Dr. L. H. Bunnell.

Charles Snyder, who was arrested on the theory that he was one John Keogh, who is accused of the murder of Abraham Abrahamson near Mountain Iron turns out to be wholly innocent and is not Keogh.

Representative Bennett is the sponsor of a bill that provides that no person may do any hunting in any organized township, on any land not his own, without permission from the owner or occupant. The amount of good chicken pasture on wild lands owned by non-residents in this part of the valley will be looked over with longing eyes by the hunters when this bill becomes a law. —Crookston Journal.

Whether the proposition for state hail insurance passes or not it is reasonably certain that this session of the legislature will see a very radical improvement in the laws governing hail insurance. The record of the past shows that the farmers of the state have been victimized on all sides by the hail insurance companies. Compelled to pay heavily for protection, they have seldom secured the protection for which they have paid. In fact, between the hail storm and the hail insurance companies, the farmers have had a hard time of it. Whether state hail insurance receives the endorsement of the legislature or not measures will be devised for the better protection of the farmers in this respect.

—Crookston Times.

We in this end of the district do not take an active interest in hail insurance, but just mention ditching and even the cows will wade a mile out of the lost river marsh to listen.

Carolus-Duran's Revenge on Sargent.

When John S. Sargent, the famous portrait painter, studied in the atelier of Carolus-Duran in Paris, his teacher showed his fondness for him by painting in his head in the great ceiling of the Luxembourg palace. Even after he branched out for himself his master often sent for him to come over to his studio and pose, his hands having especially won the admiration of Carolus-Duran. The time came, however, when Sargent could no longer answer the beck and call of his teacher, for he was getting work of his own to do, which would not allow him to leave his studio at a moment's notice. One day, it is related, Carolus-Duran sent a hurry call for him, and when he received a note saying that Sargent was compelled to decline his request owing to pressing work he was furious. A few days later a friend, to whom he had confided his anger at his recalcitrant pupil, asked him: "Well, how is it with Sargent? Have you made up? How is he?" "Ah, no," said the painter, and he looked sad and his shoulders went up. "How is it with Sargent? C'est fini!" Another shrug. "C'est fini! It's all over! I have been to the Luxembourg. I went and I got a ladder, and I painted out his head!"

A Ghost Test.

When you think you see a ghost, how can you tell whether it really is a ghost or not? A recent writer gives the following scientific method: "We assume that a person sees an apparition. It may be objective—i. e., having existence outside the observer's mind—or merely a creature of a disordered brain, subjective. The seer, while looking at the vision with both his eyes, gently depresses one eyeball with his forefinger from outside the top eyelid, so causing a squint. If objective, whether bogus or not, two outlines of the 'ghost' will be seen, but one, of course, if it be subjective. One may prove this by trial any time with any object, near or far. I mention this because of the many nervous and brain wearied people who see spooks and to whom it would be better that they should know that the trouble is within themselves and so seek a capable doctor than continue to be haunted, as they believe, by the supernatural."

The Rocking of Lake Erie.

The 250 mile trough of Lake Erie lies approximately in the direction of the west to southwest winds which prevail in that part of the country. Thus the lake offers an excellent opportunity for studying the effects of the wind upon a large body of inclosed water, and very interesting these effects sometimes prove. Rhythmic gusts produce a rocking motion and great blows from the west or southwest sweep the liquid body of the lake eastward and sometimes cause a rise of eight feet or more at Buffalo in the course of a few hours. As soon as the maximum force of the gale has passed the water swings back. Continued rockings are observed on days when the strength of the wind fluctuates.—Youth's Companion.

TRAGEDY AVERTED.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Played City, Ohio. "Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound, and well. Everybody ought to know, it's the only sure cure for Coughs' Colds and all Lung diseases. Guaranteed by Kronschnable & Bolstad. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial Bottles free.

Lucidly Explained.

The colonel stopped his team before the cabin of an Arkansas squatter to say to the man sitting on a log at the door:

"When I was along here a month ago and asked you how far it was to Colfax, you said it was twelve miles. It's only nine. Why didn't you say nine?"

"It was the old woman's fault," replied the squatter. "I wasn't such whether it was nine or twelve, and so I went in and axed her. She reckoned it was twelve, and I had to reckon the same or have a row. When I reckoned as she reckoned, she reckoned that you'd reckon it was twelve miles nigh enough, and I reckon you reckoned that way."

The Beautiful Turquoise.

The turquoise is considered as a talisman in Persia, its native soil. It preserves its possessor from accidents and insures constancy in affections. The value of the turquoise depends on its shade and its size, especially its thickness. Those classed as belonging to the old rock are valued very highly. Emblem of youth, of sentiment and tender recollections, the turquoise may be called the forget-me-not of stones.

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. The Whale's Appetite.

A whale's appetite is phenomenal. His chief diet consists of jellyfish. He has simply to open his mouth and paddle along leisurely in order to take in jellyfish by the wagon load. Such is the method adopted by the whalebone whale. The sperm whale, on the contrary, captures huge squids weighing often several tons. Like his brother the whalebone whale, he must be constantly on the lookout for food; otherwise he would starve. As many as fourteen seals have been taken from a thirty foot "killer." Other fishes of enormous appetites are not uncommon. The bluefish, for example, thrives on sardines and other small fish. Assuming that one bluefish eats ten small fish a day, it has been figured that it requires 10,000,000,000 sardines to feed the 1,000,000,000 bluefish on our coasts every summer. Most curious of all eaters is the hydra—a strange creature that can be turned inside out without impairing its appetite or its power to eat.—Scientific American.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigesion and nervous debility." writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N.H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Kronschnabel & Bolstad

Paths In Africa.

It may be a surprise to the unenlightened to learn that probably no explorer, in forcing his passage through Africa, has ever for more than a few days at a time been off some beaten track. Every village is connected with some other village, every tribe with the next tribe, every state with its neighbor and therefore with all the rest. The explorer's business is simply to select from this network of tracks, keep a general direction and hold on his way. They are veritable footpaths, never over a foot in breadth, beaten hard and netted beneath the level of the forest bed of centuries of native traffic. Like the roads of the old Romans, these footpaths run straight on through everything, ridge and mountain and valley, never shying at obstacles, nor anywhere turning aside to breathe. Yet within this general straightforwardness are a singular eccentricity and an indirectness of detail. And the reason is not far to seek. If a stone is encountered, no native will ever think of removing it; he simply walks around it. It would never occur to him that that stone was a displaceable object and that for the general weal he might displace it.

Fabric of Daily Life.

It is not of lofty or heroic deeds that the enduring pattern of character is woven, but rather of the seemingly small things of life. Little unheralded acts of helpfulness, slight self denials that bar against selfishness, conscientious attention to trifling details of duty, standing firm to the right in spite of banter and contempt (really the most difficult thing for young or old to withstand), adherence to scrupulous honesty in word and deed even in what others consider of no import, sticking to principle though one may be called "old fashioned," "unprogressive" or "puritanical"—these are the golden strands which, woven into the fabric of daily living, make men and women invincible.—Success.

Mistake In the Locality.

That keen rivalry which western towns feel is probably responsible for the story about Seattle, which may well have been said of some other place at some other time. It concerns a Seattle man who died and went to the hereafter.

"I don't see," he remarked, after a casual survey of his new quarters, "that heaven is so much better than Seattle."

"But this isn't heaven," explained a bystander.—New York Tribune.

How the Ancients Regarded Iron.

The ancient Egyptians believed that iron was the bone of Typhon, the enemy of Osiris, and for this reason it was considered impure. No one could make use of it even for the most ordinary requirements of life without polluting his soul in a way that would cause him harm both on earth and in the other world.

Reading.

Were I to pray for a taste which should stand me in stead under every variety of circumstances and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me during life and a shield against ills, however things might go amiss and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading.—Sir John Herschel.

He Had.

"Have you ever written anything," said his cynical friend, "to make the world happier or better?"

"Rather," quoth the insurance agent who sometimes dabbled in verse. "I have written $400,000 worth of life insurance within the last year."

M. L. Bright, of Winsor has 200 bushell of white russion oats, for sale, for seed.

The Crookston Times office sustained considerable damage from fire wednesday afternoon. The blaze was started by an explosion of gasoline This is not to be wondered at, when it is learned that Even Odegaard was in the office a few minutes before telling in his own peculiar way of his troubles with the county commissioners over tax rebates a short time previous.

Thirteen Towns.

Our local colums the last issue and this, show that the country editor who has to do his own mechanical work and writeing has enough to do without takeing long business trips. We left here on wednesday morning last week and arrived in Minneapolis on Thursday morning, and finished up our business there and got to St Paul by 12 M, and put in our time in the afternoon with our law makers geting a bill drafted (for a local appropriation), and makeing arrangements for its introduction. Took Friday evenings train for the north and came home to Gully in time for dinner sunday. Disposed of one poor paying advertiser and got two cash ones in his place. Sold one farm. Made two realestate loans, and made arrangements to locate two partys on government land. Met two editors that had finished corecting the mistakes of THE SUNBEAM, for the past week and was playing cards to pass the time until the arrivel their next C.O.D.

DO YOU WANT SEEDS?

Fred Denis, private secretary to Congressman Steenerson, today received word from Washington that Mr. Steenerson had secured for his constituents 5,000 packages of garden seeds for free distribution This is a concession rarely given to a member and the new Ninth district congressman is favored in securing it. In order to distribute them to those who will use them to advantage, all who desire them will receive them on application, and their names will be listed for future favors in this line. If you live in the Ninth district and want any seeds, send your name to Congressman Steenerson, at Crookston, and you will be supplied.

The Carbuncle.

One of the rarest and most precious stones is the carbuncle, which is sometimes confounded with the ruby, from which it differs by the intensity of its fires, produced by an internal luster of gold, while under the purple of the ruby there only appear dottings of azure or lacquer. Ethiopia produced the most precious ancient carbuncles. The Chaldeans regarded this stone as a powerful talisman. Legend makes the eyes of dragons out of carbuncles. Garcias ab Harto, physician of one of the viceroys of India, speaks of carbuncles which he saw in the palace of that prince which were so extraordinary in their brilliancy that they seemed "like redhat coals in the midst of darkness." Louis Vertamah reports that the king of Pegu wore an enormous one, which at night appeared to be lighted up with sunbeams. The virtues of the carbuncle are resistance to fire, preservation of the eyes, promotion of pleasant dreams, creation of happy illusions and an antidote against impure air.

Witty Advice.

A witty Dublin barrister was consulted by a physician as to calling out a man who had insulted him. "Take my advice," said the lawyer, "and instead of calling him out get him to call you in, and get your revenge that way. It will be more secure and certain."

Our Strongholds in the Antilles.

With the naval stations which we expect to secure through the pending treaty arrangement with the Cuban government, the United States will be reasonably strong in the West Indies, even without the Danish islands, which, however, will ultimately come to us, possibly within a year and perhaps not within twenty years. These stations will literally form a circle of the Antilles, beginning at Key West, which is already a first class naval station of the utmost strategic importance, and proceeding to Bahia Honda (deep bay), forty-five miles west of Havana. Thence it swings around through the Yucatan channel and the Caribbean sea to Colon, which by the terms of the Panama canal treaty will be at least available for American occupancy in an emergency, enveloping Guantanamo, on the southeast coast of Cuba, one of the best spots for a naval station in the world. From Colon it goes to Culebra, east of Porto Rico, which was the base of the late naval maneuvers, and thence back via San Juan to the starting point.

Though marred and invaded by the British possessions in the Bahamas and Jamaica, this chain of naval stations when adequately fortified will provide the United States with so strong a defensive hold upon the West Indies that no foreign power, unless it were Great Britain, could ever think of menacing it.

The circle will include six points at least of great strategic importance, outside of the domain which was ours in 1898, which we shall have the right to fortify—namely, Bahia Honda, consolidating the command of the Yucatan passage, looking toward Havana and enabling us to maintain the foothold necessary to carry out our promise to protect Cuba against foreign foes and domestic disturbers; Guantanamo, already a stronghold, which directly commands the western part of the Caribbean sea and indirectly the Windward passage and overlooks the eastern end of Cuba; Colon, which defends the Panama canal and will form our outpost toward South America; Culebra, which, in default of St. Thomas, is the door that may close the Virgin passage to the Caribbean and the isthmus, and San Juan in the north and Ponce in the south of Porto Rico, commanding the Mona passage and the eastern half of the Caribbean.

It is needless to say that this chain of future fortresses will give the United States a position in the western hemisphere of which enthusiasts only could have dreamed prior to the events of 1898. These possessions have not been acquired for purposes of aggression, but are a gauge of the peace and security of the western world.

"Disappearing Paper."

The uses to which the new "disappearing paper" lately produced in Paris may be put, provided the destruction can be accurately timed, are innumerable. By a new process not yet fully explained it is stated that writing paper may be so treated by chemicals that it will perish within a certain time, leaving behind no trace of its existence.

Written upon such paper the tenderest expressions may be lavished without fear either of breach of promise suits or the indiscretion of literary executors. Checkbooks composed of disappearing paper should be popular both with willing debtors and overcertifying banks. Stock watering, furthermore, will attain an unheard of refinement when a certain proportion of the certificates are engraved upon this new material. Political strategy would gain a sensational maneuver if the clerks at the polls could apply the destructive fluid to all the ballots of a party. Obviously telegraph blanks on disappearing paper of the most rapid brand would be a great convenience to officers of the Standard Oil company in their communications with United States senators.

Some of the bituminous operators are said to be very much displeased over the agreement entered into at Indianapolis recently, under the terms of which the miners are to receive an average increase of 12½ per cent in their pay. The operators ought not to find fault. Through their representatives they were parties to the compromise, which evidently averted a long and expensive strike, and, besides, at the prices for which they are now selling soft coal they can well afford to pay the advance.

It is stated that the American ambassador to Russia wears a uniform which throws those affected by the other diplomats at St. Petersburg way in the shade. Perhaps some day our ambassadors may succeed in making themselves almost as impressive as the colonels on a state governor's staff.

Hawaii has asked congress for $6,600,000 for public works this year. In their efforts to butt into the United States treasury the Hawaiians demonstrate that they are fast assimilating American ideas.

Publicity should be avoided in the matter of swearing off personal taxes. Just think of the damage to young Mr. Rockefeller's credit in having his poverty exposed!

An Easy Road to Temperance.

The new British temperance organization of which Lord Roberts is president and which has been denominated the Roberts league is certainly something unique in the way of a reformatory movement. The essential obligation imposed upon the members is that they shall drink no spirituous liquors, ale, wine or beer between meals.

At first glance this would appear to be something of a hardship, limiting the new temperance Englishman's tippling to three times a day with about six hours between times, but when it is remembered that the average Englishman has from four to six regular meals a day and as many more irregular meals as he can attend to the amount of temperance in the new pledge gets into quite neighborly relations with the ordinary, mellow all day "jag."

Dr. Robert Hutchinson, one of the chief promoters of the movement, has explained that alcohol in some cases is a good thing as a beverage; it often aids digestion, and he prescribes that for the ordinary person the daily healthful supply of alcohol may be imbibed in a glass of spirits, two glasses of porter and one tumbler of claret or one pint of ale. With this as a working basis, the popularity of the Roberts league may readily be understood.

It may be inferred that in aiding digestion a member of the league will be governed in his drinking by the amount of his eating. The more food the more need of the highly recommended digestive agent. If the member has a good appetite—and few Englishmen are hampered by a poor one—he need not worry about the pledge depriving him of many of his customary ablations. With six, eight or ten meals a day there would appear to be no good reason why an Englishman should not be able to get himself into a comfortably mellow condition without affecting his good and regular standing in the temperance league. If he desires to hasten the process and make more certain the results, he could mix his drinks, which, as we understand, the rules of the society do not prohibit.

With so easy and congenial a road to sobriety we shall soon expect to hear that our English cousins have been completely emancipated from their cups—between meals.

The New Cabinet Portfolio.

The new department of commerce and labor, which came into being by recent act of congress and executive approval, establishes about a dozen bureaus in which affairs pertaining to its duties as indicated in the title are distributed. These bureaus include the lighthouse establishments, the natural bureau of standards, the coast and geodetic surveys, the bureau of immigration, the bureau of statistics, the steamboat inspection service, the bureau of navigation, the census office, the fish commission, the bureau of foreign commerce and matters relating to labor.

One of the most important provisions of the bill creating the portfolio of commerce and labor is the "publicity" clause, introduced as an antitrust amendment after the original measure was well advanced in its legislative career. This amendment established an additional bureau, the bureau of corporations, the chief of which is to have power to make "diligent investigation into the organization, conduct and management of the business of any corporation * * * engaged in commerce among the several states and with foreign nations." The information sought is for the purpose of furnishing data to the president to enable him to "make recommendations to congress for the regulation of such commerce," and in order to obtain it the commissioner of corporations is to have the "right to subpœna and compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence and to administer oaths."

The health department of New York has been telling the people of that city how to avoid the grip, which is more or less prevalent at this season of the year. They are advised not to get run down, to eat nourishing food and to take plenty of sleep. They must also avoid drafts and excesses, and above all they must shun alcohol. This sounds like pretty good advice for all the year around.

A New York state woman who shot her husband, cut his body into small bits and then burned them says she acted in self defense. As a rule, a man who has been disciplined in that manner is not capable of doing much harm.

It is said that the coal strike commission has cost $[illegible] to date. Some people who have been suffering from lack of coal will derive comfort from the fact that the operators will have to pay $500,000 of it.

As if the coal famine was not bad enough, the De Beers company has now advanced the price of diamonds 5 per cent.

Signor Mascagni is now a chevalier of the Order of Savoy. We wonder if that is anything he can put up as collateral.

A Mistake That Paid.

Mistakes made on purpose are sometimes profitable, and a New York merchant illustrates it thus:

"A concern owed me $50, and repeated duns did no good. The debt was perfectly square, but I had no documentary evidence on which to base a suit, so I decided to be foxy and secure such proof.

"I sent a bill for $100, with a caustic letter, figuring that the concern would answer, repudiating the claim of $100 and saying that the amount was $50. Once I got this admission I would be in a position to sue.

"Imagine my surprise and pleasure when I received a letter from the manager of the concern apologizing for the delay and inclosing a check for $100."

Her Milking Stool.

He—Then, if you are willing, we will be married at once, but we will not live in the close, crowded city. I will purchase a little farm, and we will live on it and be as happy as turtledoves.

She—And I shall be a farmer's wife "Yes, my darling."

"And what do you think, John? You won't have to buy a milking stool for me, for I've got one already."

"You have?"

"Oh, yes, the prettiest you ever saw—decorated with handsome plush and cherry colored ribbons."

Carlyle on Novels.

A letter of Carlyle's gives us the opinion of novels entertained by him in the year 1866. To a budding story teller he wrote to suggest that she should "shove her own novel well aside for a good while or forever and be shy even of reading novels. If she do read, let it be good and wise books, which not one in 10,000 of the kind now called 'novels' is." And yet Carlyle was himself guilty of at least beginning to write a novel.

Moons in the Solar System.

There are at least twenty moons in the solar system. Saturn alone has eight, the biggest of them, Titan, being nearly twice the size of the moon, and Jupiter possesses four, ranging in dimensions upward from Europa, just about as large as the orb of terrestrial night, to Ganymede, greatest of all known moons, with a diameter of 3,480 miles, whereas the moon belonging to this world is only 2,160 miles through.

A Fire Extinguisher.

"What are the facilities in your village for extinguishing fire?"

"Well, it rains sometimes," he replied, with great simplicity.

A Great Invention.

Many women and doctors do not recognize the real symptoms of derangement of the female organs until too late.

"I had terrible pains along my spinal cord for two years and suffered dreadfully. I was given different medicines, wore plasters; none of these things helped me. Reading of the cures that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought about, I somehow felt that it was what I needed and bought a bottle to take. How glad I am that I did so; two bottles brought me immense relief, and after using three bottles more I felt new life and blood surging through my veins. It seemed as though there had been a regular house cleaning through my system, that all the sickness and poison had been taken out and new life given me instead. I have advised dozens of my friends to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Good health is indispensable to complete happiness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has secured this to me."—MRS. LAURA L. WHAT HE LEARNED.

Quail on Toast Was Not Such an Uncommon Delicacy as He Had Supposed.

In the wire grass region of Georgia quail are very abundant, and are known to the natives as "partridges," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Recently one of the south Georgia "crackers" sold off a lot of turpentine land and decided to indulge himself in a trip to far off New York while his money was still in hand. Once in the amazing metropolis, there was another indulgence he was determined on. Delmonico's was a name that had long ago tickled his fancy, and quail on toast was a high bred dish that he had long yearned to know personally.

So to Delmonico's he hied himself, and there ordered the delectable bit. It came, he eyed it severely, then tasted, finally sampling thoroughly. But his after comment on the feast savored of that sad knowledge which borders close to disgust.

"Wall, ef I hadn't come to New York I'd never knowed that quail on toast wasn't a blamed thing but Glynn county pa'tridges stuck up on burnt light bread."

STRIKES YOU ANY TIME.

Never know when or where backache pains will strike you. The kidneys will go wrong, and when they do, the first warning is generally through the back. Do not fail to help the kidneys when they're sick. Neglect means many serious ills. It's only a short step from common backache to Rheumatic pains, Urinary disorders, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's Disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all ills of the kidneys and bladder. Read this testimony; it tells of a cure that lasts:

Mr. A. W. Lutz, carriage wood worker, of 109 17th Ave., Sterling, Ill., says: "After procuring Doan's Kidney Pills in the month of November, 1897, I took a course of the treatment which cured me of backache and other annoyances due to overexcited or weakened kidneys. During the three years which have elapsed, I have had no occasion to retract one word of my statement made at that time. I now unhesitatingly and emphatically re-endorse the claims made for Doan's Kidney Pills."

WESTERN CANADA AROUSING GREAT INTEREST.

The Wonderful Yields of Wheat—Attracting Thousands.

Until the last five or six years but little attention was given to that vast area of grain-producing land lying north of the 49th parallel and immediately adjoining the northern boundaries of Minnesota and Dakota.

The Canadians themselves were aware of the wealth that lay there, but being unable to fully occupy it, they have asked the Americans to assist them in converting the land from its virgin state to one that will largely supplement the grain-producing area of the North American Continent, and the response has been most liberal.

During the year 1901 upwards of 20,000 from the United States went over to Canada, being induced to settle there by the reports that reached them of the success of those who had preceded them during the previous years. This 20,000 was increased to 30,000 during the year 1902, and it is fully expected that there will be fully 50,000 during the present year. The work of the immigration branch of the Canadian Government is not now being directed towards giving information as to the advantages of settlement in Canada as it is to extending an invitation to the American to follow those who have gone.

Those who have charge of the work point with considerable pride to the success of those who have been induced to take advantage of the offer of 160 acres of land free in Canada, and have no cause to hesitate in continuing the invitation. Many of those interested say there are no more free homesteads to be had in Canada, but the writer has most positive assurance from the Canadian Government that there are thousands of such homesteads to be had, and in one of the districts now being opened up fully as good as the best, and it is probably the best.

THE MEN AND WOMEN

Who Enjoy the Choicest Products of the World's Commerce.

Knowledge of What Is Best More Important Than Wealth Without It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain permanently to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preeminence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting, enjoying and learning the real worth of the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the method of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. The above is true not of food products only, but is especially applicable to medicinal agents and after nearly a quarter of a century of growth and general use the excellent remedy, Syrup of Figs, is everywhere accepted, throughout the world, as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system and presented in the form of a pleasant and refreshing liquid, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. Ask any physician who is well informed and he will answer at once that it is an excellent laxative. If at all eminent in his profession and has made a special study of laxatives and their effects upon the system he will tell you that it is the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after-effects. Every well-informed druggist of reputable standing knows that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative and is glad to sell it, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, because it gives general satisfaction, but one should remember that in order to get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs it is necessary to buy the genuine, which is sold in original packages only; the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs and also the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

HAPPY AND HEALTHY.

A Beautiful Canadian Girl Saved From Catarrh of the Lungs by Pe-ru-na.

MISS FLORENCE KENAH.

Miss Florence E. Kenah, 434 Maria street, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"A few months ago I caught a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and remained there so persistently that I became alarmed. I took medicine without benefit, until my digestive organs became upset, and my head and back began to ache severely and frequently.

"I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had little faith I felt so sick that I was ready to try anything. It brought me blessed relief at once, and I felt that I had the right medicine at last. Within three weeks I was completely restored and have enjoyed perfect health since.

"I now have the greatest faith in Peruna." F. E. KENAH.

WOMEN should beware of contracting catarrh. The cold wind and rain, slush and mud of winter are especially conducive to catarrhal derangements. Few women escape.

Upon the first symptoms of catching cold Peruna should be taken. It fortifies the system against colds and catarrh.

The following letter gives one young woman's experience with Peruna:

Miss Rose Gerbing is a popular society woman of Crown Point, Ind., and she writes the following:

"Recently I took a long drive in the country, and being too thinly clad I caught a bad cold which settled on my lungs, and which I could not seem to shake off. I had heard a great deal of Peruna for colds and catarrh and I bought a bottle to try. I am pleased that I did, for it brought speedy relief. It only took about two bottles, and I considered this money well spent.

"You have a firm friend in me, and I not only advise its use to my friends, but have purchased several bottles to give to those without the means to buy, and have noticed without exception that it has brought about a speedy cure wherever it has been used."—Miss Rose Gerbing.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

JUST A CENTURY OLD

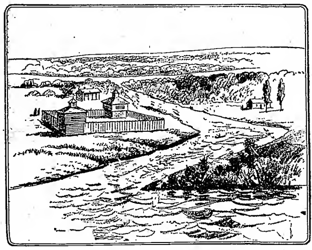
City of Chicago About to Celebrate Its Centennial.

Origin of the Western Metropolis Dates from Arrival of United States Troops Late in the Spring of 1803.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

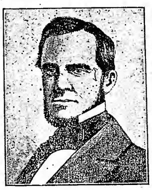
UNDER the direction of Mayor Harrison several committees are now actively at work making preparations for a suitable celebration of the one hundredth birthday of the city of Chicago. The exercises connected with this unique historical event will include a carnival, grand military review, a naval demonstration on Lake Michigan and other attractive features. Among the distinguished visitors will be President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the members of the cabinet and supreme court justices and their wives, the diplomatic corps, the senators of the United States and members of the house of representatives, 20 or more governors of sovereign states and a multitude of other distinguished men and women. The celebration will last six days and, if present plans are carried out, will be held early in September.

The birth of Chicago dates from the arrival of a detachment of United States soldiers, late in the spring of 1803. The troops were in charge of Lieut. James Swearengen and marched overland from Detroit to the foot of Lake Michigan. They were followed by Capt. John Whistler, who, with his wife and baby son, came by the lakes with supplies. The spring was well under way before the two expeditions came together and all possible haste was made to put things in shape for the approaching winter. A fort was built at a point which is now the foot of Michigan avenue, facing Rush street bridge. There were no horses in the county at that time and the soldiers were compelled to harness themselves to logs which they had chopped in the adjacent forest. It was tedious and trying work, and necessarily the building progressed slowly. When completed the fort consisted of a double stockade, with two blockhouses at opposite corners, a storehouse and quarters for officers and men. An underground passage led to the river, so that water might be had in case of a siege.



FORT DEARBORN, AS IT APPEARED IN 1812.

The name Chicago is of Indian origin, and is mentioned by the French Jesuit missionary Marquette, who first visited the site of the present city in 1673. It was also visited by Perrot in 1770. In the winter of 1674-75 Marquette camped on the banks of the Chicago river from December till near the close of March. When he arrived, on December 4, he found the river frozen and the ground covered with snow. By the French voyagers the name of the city was spelled in a variety of ways, the majority rendering it Chi-cau-gou. There is mention of it in accounts of La Salle's expedition down the Illinois river, by way of St. Joseph and Kankakee, in 1680. In Hennepin's account of this expedition is a chapter called "An Account of the Building of a New Fort on the River of the Illinois, Named by the Savages Chi-cau-gon and by Us Fort Crevecœur." Pere Marquette invariably wrote only of the Illinois, the Chicago river being then considered a part of the lower river by the whites, although the Indians seem to have had a better knowledge of the geography and topography of the country. The Wisconsin Historical society has in its possession a map, said to have been made by Sampson, geographer to the king of France, in 1673, before the Marquette or Joliet expeditions had been heard from. On this map there is one great river running from Lake Michigan to the golf of Mexico, intended probably to represent the Mississippi. It is called the Chucaqua river. The name Chicago, according to some authorities, means "great" or "strong," but the Indians themselves asserted that it means "skunk." They fortified their claim by relating that once upon a time a chief named "Skunk," was drowned in the river and to perpetuate his memory the red men named the stream for their unfortunate companion. The early trappers and traders attempted to change the name several times, but without success.



JOHN HARRIS KINZIE.
(Son of the First Permanent Settler of Chicago.)

Capt. Whistler, the first commander of Fort Dearborn, was a revolutionary soldier of considerable renown and had had years of frontier duty. He was in command until the summer of 1811, and during his administration managed to maintain comparatively friendly relations with the Indians and to attract a number of settlers to the new town. He was succeeded by Capt. Heald in June, 1811. When the war with Great Britain broke out in 1812, the government, apprehensive that a post among the Indians, so far from the frontiers, could not be successfully maintained, ordered it abandoned. On August 12, Capt. Heald marched out of the fort, and after proceeding two miles on the lake shore he was attacked by the Pottawatamie Indians. Twelve, the entire number of the militia garrison, 26 of the regular troops, two women and 12 children, in all 52, were killed and several wounded. The Indians destroyed the abandoned fort; but it was rebuilt in 1816, under Capt. Bradley. The fort continued to be occupied until 1837, when, the Indians having left the country, it was abandoned.

When the soldiers first arrived in 1803 there were but four traders' cabins at Chicago. The traders, who were either French or half-breeds, had Indian wives. Their names were Le Mai, Ouilmette and Pettell. The fourth cabin, which was empty that summer, was owned by a man named Burnett, who lived in Michigan. The first bona-fide settler was John Kinzie, who, with his family, came to Chicago in 1804 and laid the foundation of the great commercial center of to-day. Mrs. John Harris Kinzie, wife of the son of the original John, wrote a number of books about the early days of Fort Dearborn. The elder Kinzie was a trader who had been in the Lake Michigan region for many years and had visited Chicago previous to the building of the fort. Mr. Kinzie was living at Bertrand, Mich., then called Parc aux Vaches, at the time of the fort construction. He, with other traders, conceived the idea of making Chicago their headquarters; but, as it afterward appeared, he was the only one to establish his home near the fort. He came with his entire family early in the year 1804 and bought the cabin of Le Mai, located at a point which is now the foot of Kinzie street.

The Le Mai place seems to have been the oldest establishment in the region. Le Mai did not build the cabin himself, but had purchased it from one Jean Baptiste Point-au-Sable, a San Domingo negro, who had wandered north into the Indian country, and finding congenial comradeship among the redskins made it his home. It is believed that he came to Chicago in 1796, and that the cabin was built in that year.

Traveling Libraries.

The state public library commission has just issued its report for the years 1901 and 1902. The system of traveling libraries was established in January, 1900, and, owing to the limited appropriation, $3,500 per year, the work could not be pushed extensively, but there has been a gradual increase. In 1902 there were 7,500 volumes in circulation, and in 1901, 6,125.

During the year 1902 there were 198 towns and cities which had traveling libraries. Of these 198 places, 79 were rural communities and 63 villages of less than 500 population, so the library commission has done the thing it was principally created for—to supply libraries to communities where a public library is out of the question.

Although the traveling library system is now well established in the state, it has made but a small beginning, in consideration of the demands and needs of the state. At the close of 1902 there were 300 applications on file, with but 215 libraries to fill these demands, including those purchased from the appropriation for 1902-3.

Railway Taxes.

The state treasurer's department received from the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern a check for $108,527.61, the gross earnings tax for 1902. The sum of $17,477.99 was also received from the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul in payment of the balance of its gross earnings tax. This company paid altogether for 1902 a tax of $117,477.91.

A statement was filed with the state auditor of $453,919.80, having been inadvertently omitted by the Chicago & Northwestern from its report of gross earnings within the state. The earnings were in the freight department, and covered the period between 1896 and 1902 inclusive. The 3 per cent tax amounts to $13,617.59.

A Lucky Case.

Nine hundred and sixty dollars in paper money hidden in an old bustle, such as is used by persons of feminine persuasion with finely upholstered physiques, was kicked and thrown all day at Duluth and laid out in a back yard all night.

Detective Frank Schulte found it this morning and restored the money to Mrs. F. Seivers.

Mrs. Seivers is a recent arrival from North Dakota and instead of putting the hard earned money in a bank on reaching this city, she hid it in the old bustle and in some manner on Saturday evening the bustle, with all her wealth, was swept out into the back yard.

Pupils.

There are 10,000 more pupils in the schools of the state entitled to the per capita apportionment of the current school fund than there were at this time last year. The total number of schools pupils in Minnesota is 353,918 and the apportionment is $1.30 per capita. The apportionment last October was $2 per capita, but it is always larger in the fall than at this time. Ramsey county has 25,182 pupils entitled to the apportionment which will be made today.

It seems to be uphill work to pass laws for the protection of the farmers against mutual hail insurance companys, and the farmer had better turn the bull dog loose when the oily tunged stranger drives np to his home and begins to talk hail insurance.

The McIntosh Times says that Massachusetts is represented in the legislature by farmers and this state by bankers and lawyers. As a rule it is ufair to class bankers and lawyers together, as there is a wider difference between them, than there is between either one of them and a farmer. Lawers are unjustly condemed, in many instances, because there is occasionly one that is a disgrace to the profession, but it is just as unfair to blame the honorable ones for the misdeeds of the rascals as it would be to say that all farmers was crimeful because one of them committed a crime.

The lawyer as a legislator has no superior and few equals, for the reason that he considers his constituents his clients and he will use his best endeavors to premote their best interest. If a measure comes up for consideration he will look at it in about this way. Is it for the best interest of my constituents (clients) for me to support this bill, and if he concludes that it is, he will work and vote for it regardless of the consequences to himself.

A banker sizes up the situation in about this way. Is it for my best interest to support this bill politicaly or otherwise, and if he comes to the conclusion that it is he will give it his assistance to be enacted into law. He makes a good representative in legislative bodies, but is not to be class with lawyers as their way of doing business is vastly different.

If the present legislature remains in session the full limit of time it bids fair at the present rate of expenses, to be the most expensive in the history of the state. This will not recommend its members as a whole to the thoughtful.

Crookstou Journal.

We are of the opinion, that if they ajourn without passing the appropitation bills they will not be recommended by the thoughtful and they will hear from the unthoughtful free of charge.

A Willful Misunderstanding.

Pitt was induced by Sir John Sinclair to constitute a board of agriculture toward the end of the eighteenth century and make him the president. Having enjoyed his office for a few years, Sinclair began to desire promotion in the social scale. "Dear Mr. Pitt," he wrote to the prime minister, "don't you think the president of the board of agriculture should be a peer?"

"Dear Sir John Sinclair," replied Pitt, "I entirely agree with you. I have therefore appointed Lord Somerville to succeed you as president of the board of agriculture."

Sir John Sinclair went about wringing his hands and exclaiming: "Dear me, dear me! It was such a willful misunderstanding!"—Fortnightly Review.

Santos-Dumont is now figuring in a divorce case. Possibly the lady thought he was too fly.

United States Consul Hubbard T. Smith, whose death is announced from his post at Genoa, was the author of those beautiful lines beginning, "A little peach in the orchard grew." Presumably his fame as a song writer will be more widely cherished than as a consular officer. His "tale of woe" still lives.

It is announced that Elder Dowie is going to New York because, as he says, he has accomplished the redemption of Chicago. If Chicago is redeemed, the ordinary sinful New Yorker may well pray to be spared that sort of redemption.

GET RID OF HALE.

Minneapolis Tribune.

If Senator Hale of Maine is not an enemy of his country, he is the avowed enemy of the policy of defence of his country by a navy equal to the fleet any possible enemy could bring against it, on which most of his countrymen are agreed. As chairman of the naval committee of the senate, he has power to obstruct and defeat this policy and he uses the power at every opportunity. He compelled his committee to substitute for the house appropriation for four powerful ships, a bill providing for six weak, old-fashioned ships, about as useful as Springfields against Mausers. This was after he had done his best to defeat any increase of the navy whatever. It would be better to appropriate no money than to waste it in this way. Senator Hale is an anti-expansionist and wants to leave our new possessions without protection so that tha first power that gets a navy strong enough may take them away. He is free to hold his opinions, but he ought not to be permitted to impose them upon a patriotic senate. He is chairman of the naval committee, not by any fitness but by the force of tradition and the accident of seniority. The new senate should set asid tradition and ignore seniority and remove him at once. Would the senate, in civil war time, leave a man opposed to the war at the head of an important war committee, because seniority had brought him there?

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. A Miraculous Vault.

The most interesting place of pilgrimage in Dublin is St. Michan's church, where the organ is still to be seen upon which Handel is said to have composed his "Messiah." In the graveyard is the last resting place of Robert Emmet, and the vault at St. Michan's provides a more grewsome thrill than the morgue. The sexton lifts an iron door and descends a few rude steps, carrying a light, without which the place would be pitch dark. You follow and find yourself in a narrow passage, from which cell-like recesses belonging to different families branch off. Whether it is owing to the extreme dryness of the surroundings or to some mysterious property of the place the process of decay has been arrested, and the features of persons dead for two centuries may be recognized from authentic portraits. Here lie the brothers Sheares, who were executed for their share in the united Irish conspiracy, side by side almost with the Earl of Leitrim, who was murdered about thirty years ago. The earl's ancestors for hundreds of years back rest in the same vault. Perhaps the strangest thing about the vault is the fact that, apart from the weird sensation, there is nothing offensive in the surroundings.—London Tatler.

Fabric of Daily Life.

It is not of lofty or heroic deeds that the enduring pattern of character is woven, but rather of the seemingly small things of life. Little unheralded acts of helpfulness, slight self denials that bar against selfishness, conscientious attention to trifling details of duty, standing firm to the right in spite of banter and contempt (really the most difficult thing for young or old to withstand), adherence to scrupulous honesty in word and deed even in what others consider of no import, sticking to principle though one may be called "old fashioned," "unprogressive" or "puritanical"—these are the golden strands which, woven into the fabric of daily living, make men and women invincible.—Success.

Mistake In the Locality.

That keen rivalry which western towns feel is probably responsible for the story about Seattle, which may well have been said of some other place at some other time. It concerns a Seattle man who died and went to the hereafter.

"I don't see," he remarked, after a casual survey of his new quarters, "that heaven is so much better than Seattle."

"But this isn't heaven," explained a bystander.—New York Tribune.

How the Ancients Regarded Iron.

The ancient Egyptians believed that iron was the bone of Typhon, the enemy of Osiris, and for this reason it was considered impure. No one could make use of it even for the most ordinary requirements of life without polluting his soul in a way that would cause him harm both on earth and in the other world.

Reading.

Were I to pray for a taste which should stand me in stead under every variety of circumstance and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me during life and a shield against ills, however things might go amiss and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading.—Sir John Herschel.

He Had.

"Have you ever written anything," said his cynical friend, "to make the world happier or better?"

"Rather," quoth the insurance agent who sometimes dabbled in verse. "I have written $400,000 worth of life insurance within the last year."

Early Rising Not Always a Virtue.

Thousands of people have no choice whotever about their hour of rising in the morning. Later or earlier, that hour is fixed for them by the requirements of the office, the shop or the classroom, by the time toble of the railrood, by the arbitration of their employers or the necessities of their employees. But in the cases monifold where personal liberty is enjoyed it should not be thoughtlessly restricted simply because of the domestic tradition that early rising deserves praise and lote rising blome.

Breokfast may often be a movoble feast without materially disturbing the routine of an orderly housekeeping day. Invalids, mothers whose rest hos been broken by teething babies and, obove all, ropidly growing children, should have their sleep out. Nature demands this, ond violence is done to her when sleepy people ore rudely oroused from their beds. Eorly to bed is the single safe prescription to insure early to rise.

We need to repeat it over and over to our hurrying, anxious, toiling American men and women: Rest, rest and ogain rest. Do not think time ill spent thot is spent in repoiring the ravoges of our well nigh incessant octivity.

The First Pantomime.

Most pantomime choroeters were originally borrowed from the Itolions. The first real English pantomime was produced ot o theater in Lincoln's Inn Fields in 1720. It was colled "Harlequin Executed," and its subtitle was "A New Italion Comic Sceene Between a Scaromouche, a Harlequin, o Country Farmer, His Wife ond Others." The performance wos very successful. About the middle of the eighteenth century the character of pantomime performances was completely altered, chiefly becouse of the genius of the famous Grimoldi, who made the clown the first figure of the pantomime. Grimaldi first appeored ot Sodler's Wells theater, where he played the port of a monkey. He woa actively engoged on the stage for forty-nine years, and at the close of his stage coreer he took a benefit at Drury Lone theater, which realized neorly £600. He also received £100 from the Drury Lane fund. This was in June, 1828. He died in 1837 and was buried in the churchyord in St. James' chapel, Pentonville hill.—London Standord.

An Irish Verdict.

"My lord," said the foremon of an Irish jury when giving in his verdict, "we find the man who stole the more not guilty."

So far as can be observed, this country is prepared to accept a general European war over the Balkans with calm and even cheerful fortitude.

Now that the protocols have been signed, Venezuela steps from the center of the stage and Macedonia comes into the radius of the limelight.

The "Sick Man of Europe" is probably not sufficiently sick to prevent a broad grin over that threatened Italian naval demonstration.

What Have They Gained?

Now that the protocols have been signed referring the essential points of the Venezuela controversy to The Hague tribunal it may be pertinent to ask what Germany, Great Britain and Italy have gained by their blustering attempt to collect by force of arms insignificant and doubtful claims ogainst a smoll and impotent South American republic. They will, perhaps get the "pound of flesh" nominated in the bond, but in doing this they will have lost more in prestige ond standing on this continent and resultant loss of commerce than they will have golned in cash. The whole sordid incident, which has worn from first to last a usurious aspect, has left a decidedly "bad taste in the mouth" of all the Americas, which it will toke some time to remove.

Germony will doubtless be able to squeeze out of the Venezuelan customs the $340,000 which she ot the last moment demanded as a preliminary payment, ond Italy, which went into the combinotion on the ground that she needed the money ond thought this a good time to get it, will no doubt be able in the immediote future to recover a few thousand bolivars on account, while Great Britain considers herself fortunate in getting out of the "mess," as Lord Cranborne terms it, with only such recompense as the final accounting moy give her.

Despite the denials it is evident that the thing which Germany hoped to accomplish ond which Great Britain subserviently was willing to help accomplish and about which Italy did not porticularly care so long os she got her shore of the swag wos the breaking down of the Monroe doctrine and the ocquisition of territory on the Americon continent. In this the allies have utterly failed. In so far as the position taken by the United States is concerned she has been materially strengthened by the Venezuelon incident. The blustering European powers have been given firmly to understand thot the doctrine of Monroe is still in full force, and it is highly improbable that any of them will again attempt by similar assault upon a powerless little republic to compass its overthrow. Evidently there will be no more olliances of European powers to coerce Americon states.

The Making of National Songs.

While the proposition of the Rhode Island chapter of the Society of the Cincinnati to award a gold medal for the composition of American music for "America" is highly commendable, it is hordly probable that much will come of it. Greot national and patriotic airs which thrill and inspire the populor heart ore not produced that way. They are not made to order or written on controct. They are inspired by intense patriotic feeling and are born out of the travail of national stress.

Two of the most stirring national songs, "La Marseillaise" and "The Star Spangled Banner," were the productions not of competitors for a gold medal, but of patriots in a moment of enthusiasm begotten by the peril of their country. Rouget de Lisle and Francis Scott Key would possibly never have given to the world the songs that have since become world famous had they been dependent upon the inspiration of the prize competition. Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was the product of the most momentous struggle in the nation's history.

A great nationol anthem must be something more thon technical exactness and the perfection of the composer's art. It must breathe the spirit of nationality, and that implies that the composer must feel whot he writes if his work is to endure as an expression of the country's patriotism. There is therefore little likelihood that the Rhode Island competition will give us American music for "America" which will supplant in popular favor the air to which we sing "My country, 'tis of thee," even though that air be adapted from the English national anthem.

As indicating something of the tendency of the times the Chicago city council has by a unanimous vote placed itself on record as desiring municipal ownership and operation of gas and electric lighting plants, and the state legislature has been memorialized to pass an enabling act at once.

It moy be pertinent to inquire whether the sympathetic king of Italy really imagined that in moking Mascagni a chevalier of the Order of Savoy he comforted the composer for the loss of those good, hard American dollars.

The Russian ormy is sold to be ready for whatever hoppens in the Bolkons. Meanwhile the Russion peasant continues to go stoop shouldered under the burden which this constont readiness imposes.

A New York mob is seeking a separation after one month of married life because his wife has already spent $23 for groceries and coal. Such extravagance calls for stern rebuke.

On divers occasions Germany has accused Uncle Sam of being a hog. Germany's attitude toward Venezuela would seem to indicate that she knows how to root.

Growth of Equal Suffrage.

From some facts and figures lately given out by the advocates of female suffrage, or as they prefer to term it, equal suffrage, it would seem that no small degree of progress has been made in the last decade despite some recent defeats in certain states.

It is pointed out that the defeats in South Dakota, Washington and Oregon were partial victories, as compared with former defeats of similar amendments in the same states. In Washington in the amendment campaign of 1889 the odverse majority was 19,386; in 1898 it dropped to 9,882. In South Dakota in 1890 woman suffrage was defeated by a majority of 23,610; in 1898 this majority was reduced to 3,285. The mojority against woman suffrage in 1884 was 16,953; in 1900 the adverse majority was only 2,083.

In 1893 full suffrage was granted to women in New Zealand and school suffroge wos granted in Connecticut. In 1894 school suffrage was granted in Ohio, a limited municipal suffrage in Iowa, a porish and district suffrage in England to women both married and single. In 1895 full suffrage was granted in South Carolina, and in 1896 full suffroge was accorded in Utah and Idaho. In 1898 the women of Ireland were given the right to vote for all officers except members of parliament. Minnesota gave women the right to vote for library trustees, Delaware granted taxpaying women the school suffrage, France gave women the right to vote for judges of the tribunals of commerce and Louisiana gave taxpaying women the right to vote upon all questions submitted to toxpoyers.

In 1900 West Australia granted full parliamentary suffroge to women while in 1901 Norway granted women municipal suffrage. In 1902 full national suffrage and the right to sit in the notional parliament were granted to all the women of federated Australia.

On the whole, the friends of female suffrage have little reason to be discouraged over the progress made during the last decade.

Progress of the Carnegie Institution.

Dr. Daniel C. Gilman, president of the Carnegie Institution at Washington, hos prepared a report showing the progress made during the year that has elopsed since Mr. Carnegie made his notoble donation for the national university settlement. In the outset a number of advisory committees were appointed to act as a preliminary body of counselors respecting the needs of the various departments of science in which they were severally interested.

Acting upon the odvice and suggestion of these committees various appropriotions were made for the coming year, including $200,000 for researches, $40,000 for publicotion, $100,000 for o reserve fund and $50,000 for administrotive expenses.

Two projects relating to natural history hove received encouragement, soys Dr. Gilman. One of these is the marine biological laboratory at Wood's Holl. Another example takes us from the ocean to the desert. The botanists will have an opportunity of making investigations in respect to the influence of desert environment upon plants. A third illustration is the generous appropriation made by the institution and placed under competent guidance for the study of the labor movement, industrial development, taxation, finance and the regulation of corporations and also the social legislation of the several states, which will be examined with reference to its results. From these three illustrations some impression can be formed regarding the larger projects which have thus far been considered.

From Bradstreet's it is learned that the First National bank of Chicago has devised a scheme of encouragement to its employees to become stockholders in the institution. One hundred shares of stock have been purchased, and, though its morket volue is about 403, it will be sold to employees at 400. The amount ony one employee can acquire is limited to five shares. The stock can be paid for on the installment plan, $10 cash down and $5 per month thereofter until it is all paid for. The profit sharing idea seems to be growing in various quarters, though it does not usually take root in purely fiscal concerns. There is no reason, however, why faithful employees should not have an opportunity to share more generously in the wealth they help to produce and conserve.

A bill passed by one branch of the South Carolina legislature undertakes to prohibit employees in cotton and woolen foctories from engaging in sympathetic strikes. It is not explained how the South Carolina legislators propose to compel men to work if they choose not to do so.

Signor Morconi now hopes to develop wireless heat. This hopes will be realized just as soon as he makes a mistake in sending an important commercial "marconigram" to some testy old business magnate.

Another argument in favor of antikissing legislation is furnished by an incident in Brooklyn, where a young mon fell dead immediately after kissing his fiancee good night.

Using Friends In Old Days.

In a romantic and picturesque old hall in Derbyshire, England, is one of those curious relics of bygone times which carry the mind back to the habits and customs of our great-great-grandfathers. A handcuff looks a strange thing to be fixed to the screen of the banqueting hall of a baronial mansion, but one is there. When the banquet had advanced toward its zenith, if any gentleman among the guests refused to drink the full quantity that was deemed the proper thing, at that time he was merrily carried to the oak screen and placed with his arm upraised and secured and locked in that position by the iron ring. His sleeve, then wide open, offered a tempting receptacle for the wine which he had refused to drink, and the contents of the goblet, with as much more as the roysterers thought fit, were poured down the unlucky victim's arm, and woe be to him if he did not take the joke in the spirit in which it was given.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Too Plebeian a Dish.

The palns of being a dignitary in an ancient country with a tradition of splendor is illustrated by this anecdote from India. It is related that the viceroy's eye lighted one day upon a dish at which he gazed for a moment with incredulity. "What is this?" he demanded at last. A trembling retainer gasped that it was rice pudding. No less a personage than the viceroy's consort had ordered the humble pudding which eminent statesmen may be seen eating at their clubs with undisguised enjoyment any day of the parliamentary session. But the viceroy frowned. "Take it away," he said. "Never let me see such a thing again." This is how the orient differs from the occident. Rice pudding might have ruined the dignity of the vice regal table in native opinion.

Chinese Transportation Methods.

The cheapest method of transportation in the world is that by Chinese junks that are dragged up and down their winding rivers by strings of sweating men, who are paid only 3 cents a day for their work and have to pay their board out of that small sum. Next in cheapness to transportation by junk is transportation by camel team. This method is used in distributing cool. Great numbers of Mongolian camels, led by a string through their pierced noses and tied one to the other, each carrying two baks of coal strung across their backs between the humps, are to be seen winding their way from the coal mines to the larger cities in northern China and covering with their swinging steps about twenty miles a day.

Animals and Poisons.

Certain substances which are deadly in their effects upon man can be taken by the brute creation with impunity. Horses can take large doses of antimony, dogs of mercury, goats of tobacco, mice of hemlock and rabbits of belladonna without injury. On the other hand, dogs and cats are much more susceptible to the influence of chloroform than man and are much sooner killed by it. If this invaluable anæsthetic had been first tried upon animals, we should probably have never enjoyed its blessings, as it would have been found to be so fatal that its discoverer would hove been afraid to test its effects upon human beings. It is evident, then, that on experiment upon on animal con never be the meons of any certain deductions so far as mon is concerned.—Family Doctor.

Skyrockets Before Gunpowder.

It motters very little in the long run to the smoll boy when, how or where fireworks were first made and of what they ore made now. But the fact remains that the despised heathen Chinese first made them and used them and that civilized communities did not know of them until the fourteenth century. The skyrocket was first invented toward the close of the ninth century and at that time wos used, so it is said, in India and Chino in war. That was long before the invention of gunpowder.

Ornamental Jade.

The Chinese have cut jade for ages, but never ornamented it except by sculpture. When it was introduced into India, the native jewelers, with their quick eye for color, at once saw what a perfect ground it afforded for mounting precious stones, and they were the first to incrust them on jade. The India museum in London possesses the choicest specimens of this work known of the best mogul period.

Moon Worship Among Many Peoples.

Figures of the moon as religious emblems can be traced to a very high antiquity. The ancient Egyptions had two moon gods—Khons or Khonsu and Tel or Thoth. The latter wore the moon on his head, either os a full moon or as a crescent. The divine honors paid to the cat on the banks of the Nile were probably due to its supposed connection with the moon, as shown by the changeable pupil of the feline eyes. In Greece both Phœbus and Phœbe were moon gods, ond by Isis the Greeks understood the same planet. The Romans had many gods. With them Luna was the moon, the daughter of Hyperion and sister of the sun. According to Livy, the temple of Luna stood on the Aventine.

The ancient Goths, Germans and Finns were all moon worshipers, and in ancient Britain the moon occupied a high position in the celestial hierarchy of the Druids, who were always represented as bearing crescents in their hands. It is possible, too, that Andraste, the goddess to whom Boadicea appealed with outstretched hands, was the moon.

PROSPERITY IN CANADA.

The Farmer in Western Canada Achieves Wonderful Success.

One of the first things that the man who wishes to change his residence endeavors to find out is where he may go and succeed. It need be a matter of little doubt or indecision now. During the past four or five years the development of Western Canada has been so rapid, and the conditions of life there so widely known, that upwards of 100,000 Americans have taken up their homes there, and the experience of these people is that they are thoroughly satisfied with their choice of home.

The methods of farming there are similar to those adopted in the United States, but the operations are simpler, the yield of grain greater, and the profits more satisfactory. Ranching is carried on with lots of success. Mixed farming is always profitable, while the results in grain-raising are as certain as splendid soil, excellent climate and lots of sunlight can give.

The yields of — but nothing is as satisfactory as the experience of the farmer himself, and extracts are selected from one.

A good, intelligent farmer, named Mears, John Mears, to be exact—left Cavalier County, North Dakota, two years ago, and followed the thousands who had already gone to Canada. He had twenty-five years' experience in Minnesota, in buying grain, including flax. But in all his experience he never saw a district so well suited to the growth of flax as Western Canada. The financial results of Mr. Mears' operations in a single season are as follows: Wheat, 3,000 bushels, 1 hard at 57½c, $1,765.00. 2,680 bushels, 1 Northern at 54c, $1,457.20; oats, 1,750 bushels, at 35c, $612.50. Speltz, 154 bushels at 75c, $115.50. Flax, 324 bushels, at $2, $628. Total, $4,598.20.—A return of more than $4,500 from a little over 250 acres, an average of $18 per acre—is surely testimony sufficiently strong to satisfy the most incredulous as to the money to be made out of the soil of the Canadian West. It is to facts like these—arguments expressible and demonstrable in dollars and cents, that the steady northward movement of American farmers is due. Mr. Mears is settled near Arcola, Assa.

A number of Americans who have chosen Western Canada as a home had the idea that a man enjoyed less freedom in Canada, but they soon found their mistake, and say the laws of Canada are the most liberal in the world, and such as prevent the litigation which breeds so much bad feeling between people in the United States and costs them so dear in lawyers' fees.

Dakota; and Great Falls, Montana; and the suggestion is made that by addressing any of these, who are the authorized agents of the Government, it will be to the advantage of the reader, who will be given the fullest and most authentic information regarding the results of mixed farming, dairying, ranching and grain-raising, and also supply information as to freight and passenger rates, etc.

Beyond Endurance.

The slender woman faced the burly burglar's deadly revolver, without a tremor of terror, for, as is well known, the weakest are often the bravest.

"Tell me where the money is hid," he hissed, most truculently, "or I'll fire!"

"Never!" she answered, determinedly, and with a marked accent on the "r." "Kill me, if you will, but I will never reveal the hiding place of my husband's hard-earned hoard! Villain, do your worst!"

"I will!" snarled the scoundrel, baffled for the moment, but not beaten. "Tell me, instantly, or I'll drop this big, woolly caterpillar down your neck!"

In three minutes more he had bagged the boodle, and was splitting the midnight darkness in a northeasterly direction.—Smart Set.

He Went West and Prospered.

Freeland, Kans., Mar. 9th:—One of the most prosperous farmers in Harper County is Mr. N. H. Mead. Some thirty-four years ago he left his home near Clarence, N. Y., and came to Kansas. Here he has thrived splendidly and last year harvested over one hundred and forty acres of wheat alone.

But everything has not gone well with Mr. Mead, for his health has not been good for the last few years. He has suffered a great deal with Kidney and Bladder Trouble and could get nothing to stop it. Lately, however, he has improved a great deal and he says that he has none of the old symptoms left and is feeling splendid again. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills and this remedy seemed to work wonders in his case. He says himself:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me well. They are all right and a reliable remedy for Kidney Trouble. They helped me right from the start, giving me great relief, and finally cured me."

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, March 3.—The state railroad and warehouse commission sent to the senate yesterday its report in response to the resolution passed at the special session ordering an investigation of the passenger rates in Minnesota, with a view to ordering a reduction of the rates if feasible. The commissions that in view of the conditions in Minnesota, the passenger rates are not too high.

Senator A. V. Rieke, of Fairfax, introduced a bill to regulate the establishment and maintenance of public libraries. The measure is a codification of existing laws, with several amendments.

Representative A. L. Cole, of Walker, yesterday introduced a resolution taking a step toward limiting the franchise in Minnesota. The resolution seeks to prohibit non-taxpayers from voting on bond issues.

The house committee on public health yesterday considered the bill of Senator William Harrington, of McLeod county, relating to the standard of purity for vinegar. The percentage of acetic acid is left at 4½ per cent by weight, and that of solids at 2 per cent.

A non-partisan state board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, nominated at the primary election and elected by the people, is provided for in a bill introduced by Representative A. L. Cole, of Walker, chairman of the house committee on elections.

The house received an opinion from Attorney General W. B. Douglas which holds constitutional the Dorsey bill, allowing claimants of sugar bounties under the law of 1895 to bring action against the state to recover the amount they claim is due.

St. Paul, March 4.—The senate committee on finance yesterday decided to recommend for passage Senator G. B. Ward's bill appropriating $100,000 for the Minnesota exhibit at the Louisiana purchase exposition. The measure repeals the law passed at the special session of 1902 appropriating $50,000.

Senator A. R. McGill's bill to create a state art society for the promotion of art, painting and sculpture was recommended for passage. The bill originally carried an annual appropriation of $2,500, which was reduced to $2,000 by the finance committee.

A bill compelling railroads to issue passes to state officials and employes and forbidding any official from collecting money for transportation from the state was introduced by Representative Emmett Mark, of Princeton.

The amendment of the constitution by a majority of those voting on constitutional amendments is provided for in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative George W. Armstrong, of Minneapolis.

Representatives J. D. Shearer and Lawrence H. Johnson, of Minneapolis, yesterday introduced jointly a 4 per cent railroad gross earnings bill which is intended to supersede the Johnson and the Fryberger bills now before the tax committee of the house.

The house yesterday in committee of the whole recommended for passage the bill by Representative O. B. Soule, of Washington county, reducing the exemptions in garnishment cases from $25 to $8.

St. Paul, March 5.—Both branches of the legislature were literally flooded with bills, about twenty being introduced in the senate and over twice that number in the house. Senator Thompson introduced a bill to impose a tax on the property of all sleeping car companies in the state.

It provides that each company, through its head official, shall make a report to the state auditor annually, showing the amount of property it possesses. It shall then be the duty of the state board of equalization to find and ascertain the actual value of the entire amount of the capital stock of the company, and from this amount it shall deduct the actual value of all the real estate used by the company. The remainder is to be taken and considered as the value of the capital stock.

The board is then required to divide this amount by the number of miles of railroad over which the cars of the company are used to obtain the value per mile and then multiply by the number of miles in the state. The result will be taken as the actual cash value of the property.

In the closing section the bill provides that the rate of taxation shall be the average rate of taxation in this state for all purposes.

Another bill was introduced by the same senator providing for identically the same taxation on freight cars.

A third bill by the senator from Fillmore authorizing any county, town or incorporated village to aid in the construction of any railroad in the state which is to be constructed by the road for public benefit.

Senator Ward was the author of a bill to amend Chapter 10, General Laws of 1887, to regulate common carriers and creating the railroad and warehouse commission. The bill asks a provision to the original law providing that the commission may dismiss a case when the members think they have no jurisdiction; also that the attorney general or other party interested may appeal to the district court from such action.

St. Paul, March 6.—Not a voice was raised in opposition yesterday when the Gandrud anti-merger bill came up for final passage and without debate the house passed the measure by a vote of 88 to 0. The senate will now be given an opportunity to show where it stands on this proposition.

A bill submitted by the committee on taxes and tax laws aroused some interest. This provides that all penalties upon any tax levied by special assessment for public improvements against any particular tract or lot shall be apportioned to the general revenue fund, and all other penalties on real estate shall be apportioned one-half to the county revenue fund and one-half to the school districts of the county.

Senator Peachey's bill drafted for the purpose of removing the university, the state normal schools, the schools for the deaf, dumb and blind and the state public school from the management of the board of control, passed the senate yesterday afternoon after two hours' debate by a vote of 36 to 25.

Bills were passed by the senate to govern the sale of gasolene, bezine and kerosene; and appropriating money for the general uses of the state historical society.

St. Paul, March 7.—A bill to make it easier to punish husbands for non-support was introduced yesterday by Senator J. T. Alley of Buffalo. The measure makes wives competent witnesses to testify against their husbands and empowers the court to compel them to do so.

The senate refused to prohibit school boards from compelling the vaccination of pupils. Senator John C. Hardy's bill prohibiting compulsory vaccination was passed only after it had been amended by Senator A. B. Cole, of Fergus Falls, leaving the law practically as it is.

In the house the following bills were passed:

Revising the military code and increasing the standing appropriation for the maintenance of the national guard from $60,000 to $75,000 a year.

Providing for a second state fish hatchery at Glenwood, Minn., and appropriating $20,000 therefor.

Authorizing county commissioners to provide for copying records of the probate [illegible] should have been copied by predecessors of the present incumbents.

Relating to refunding fines paid in municipal courts of cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants by default.

Prohibiting the use of adulterants in the manufacture of vinegar.

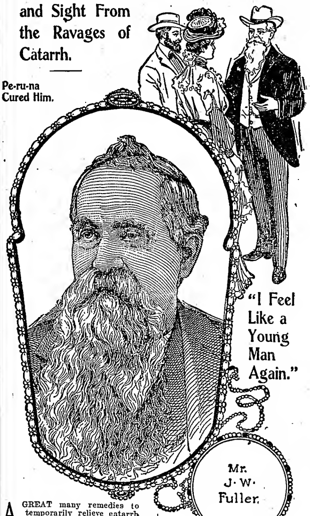
PRESIDENT FULLER OF THE JEWELERS' ASSOCIATION

Threatened With Loss of Hearing, Smell and Sight From the Ravages of Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Cured Him.



"I Feel Like a Young Man Again."
Mr. J. W. Fuller.

A GREAT many remedies to temporarily relieve catarrh have been devised from time to time, such as sprays, snuffs, creams and other local applications, but, as a rule, the medical profession has little or no enthusiasm in the treatment of catarrh.

It is generally pronounced by them to be incurable.

It therefore created a great sensation in medical circles when Dr. Hartman announced that he had devised a compound which would cure catarrh permanently.

The remedy was named Peruna and in a short time became known to thousands of catarrh sufferers north, south, east and west.

Letters testifying to the fact that Peruna is a radical cure for catarrh began to pour in from all directions.

Thousands of such letters are on file in the office of The Peruna Medicine Co.

Rev. E. Stubenvoll, Pella, Wis., writes: "I feel obliged to extend you my personal thanks for my complete restoration. All through the winter I suffered from throat and lung trouble, but recovered my entire health by the use of your excellent remedy, Peruna."

The following letter from a prominent gentleman of Los Angeles, is a case in point:

Mr. J. W. Fuller, President of the Jewelers' Association of Los Angeles, Cal., has been in business in that city for seventeen years out of the forty-five that he has been engaged in business. Concerning his experience with Peruna he says:

"I was troubled with catarrh of the head for many years. It affected my sense of smell, hearing and sight. I spent lots of money with doctors and the use of local applications to relieve me but to no purpose, until my attention was called to the wonderful effects of Peruna.

"I must say that I met with most surprising and satisfactory results. Peruna took hold of the complaint and drove it entirely out of my system.

"Although well along toward the allotted span of man's life I am pleased as a child over the results, and feel like a young man again."—J. W. Fuller.

Such letters as the above are not used for publication except by the written permission of the writer.

A pamphlet filled with such letters will be sent to any address free. This book should be read by all who doubt the curability of catarrh.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

Lovers of Their Country Need Not Long for Their Return.

More Intellectual Giants in United States Senate To-Day Than Ever Before — The Case Proved.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"I HAD only been here two days, when it became very apparent to me that the statehood bill would not be passed," said Mr. Frank H. Greer, of Guthrie, Okla.

"You cannot imagine the feverish expectation with which all of our people have been reading the press dispatches concerning the legislative situation on that matter of statehood. It has been talked of in church and Sunday school, as well as in public schools and all public places. Our little children know that our people are anxious for their rights of citizenship, and are taught what it all means to us.

"I have been greatly impressed with the United States senate," continued this observant business man of the southwest. "The more I have seen of that body the more of an optimist I have become, and I do not long for 'the good old days,' of which so many modern pessimists speak; and speak thoughtlessly as well as imperiously and dogmatically.

"Ever since the organization of the federal government the senate has been composed of great men. Of every decade, we may emphatically say: 'There were giants in those days.' But that should not carry with it the implication that there are not giants in these days also. Glance over them with hasty memory, and take up the men whose names stand out like promontories. John Quincy Adams, in the house of representatives, hammering away continuously and diligently until he secured recognition of the right of petition.

"John C. Calhoun was the brightest intellect of his day on one thing, the right of secession; the extreme conclusion of the doctrine of state sovereignty. He was a specialist. Daniel Webster is eminent both as an orator and a constitutional lawyer, another specialist. Henry Clay you think of as the great compromiser, another specialist. Justin S. Morrill, the promoter of the tariff act of the civil war, a specialist. John A. Logan, the mouthpiece of the veterans of the union armies, another specialist. Senator Doolittle, of Wisconsin, famous as opponent of reconstruction, another specialist.

"There are scores of others, all great men, but these names come up first in memory. Now look at our modern senate. Where are the specialists? I cannot see even one. They are all big, broad-minded men; scholars, orators, lawyers, constitutional lawyers, international lawyers. Listen to them in debate, and their range of knowledge covers every field of investigation and research. Specialists are not broad men, however great they may be in their particular fields.

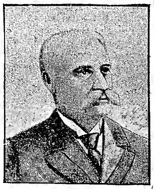
"I do not believe there ever was in the senate a greater orator than Spooner, of Wisconsin, nor a better reasoner. Senator Depew, of New York, is one of the most pleasing speakers ever seen in the senate or on any platform or in any forum. These men speak readily on all subjects, and their audiences are not only entertained, but instructed.

"Our statehood bill has been defeated by Senator Beveridge, of Indiana; but I must give him the meed of praise due him when great men in the senate are mentioned. He is an orator of great power, and one of the most ready debaters the senate has ever known. He is learned, and yet always learning. He is a hard worker, and his literary efforts bring him in more than $20,000 every year. This work is all done, somehow, without interfering with his senatorial work. Prejudice against him for defeating the statehood bill cannot blind one's eyes to his great intellectual gifts.

HON. JOHN C. SPOONER.
(Wisconsin Senator Famed as an Orator and Reasoner.)

"Senator Hoar is as great as Webster was, if not greater, because he is not a specialist. He is one of the most polished gentlemen in public life, a profound scholar, an orator, a man of absolute fearlessness in the utterance of his views, well versed in the laws of nations, as well as the constitution and laws of our own land; a well-rounded statesman without a superior in this or any other country. So long as such a man is sent to and retained in the senate there is no need for sighing about the 'good old days,' and intimating thereby that statesmanship is deteriorating, or becoming a thing of the remote past. There were giants in those days, and there are giants in these days also."

By these reflections the writer was reminded of a story told not long ago to the narrator, by Senator Clark, of Wyoming. He said: "I visited Senator Davis, of Minnesota, one morning in the room of the committee on foreign relations to obtain some information from that lovable statesman, and he gave me freely of his knowledge, but added: 'You'd better wait for Senator Morgan, of Alabama, who is to be here this morning. He knows more about this subject than I do. In fact, he knows more about more things than any member of the senate. Of this fact I will convince you.'



HON. NELSON W. ALDRICH.
(Rhode Island Senator Famed as a Parliamentary Tactician.)

"Senator Davis then took a volume of an encyclopedia from the shelf, opened it at random and pointed to a paragraph about an obscure island in the Pacific ocean. He said that after I had obtained exhaustive information on the topic which most interested me he would ask Senator Morgan about that obscure island, and he would tell all about it. Well, in a few minutes the Alabama statesman entered the room. I stated my case to him, and he talked for half an hour, giving me full details of an intricate legal subject. Then Senator Davis asked him about that obscure island; and the dear old senator told us all about it; when it was discovered, its inhabitants, its products, and a great deal more than we had learned from the encyclopedia."

During the period of our contention with Chili, about 11 years ago, the secretary of state, James G. Blaine, went to the capitol, called on Senator Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, and stated that he wanted information on a certain point of international law. He said that he knew he was right, but he could not prove it. Senator Davis, of Minnesota, was sent for, and he instantly said: "Calvo wrote that point clearly. You will find it in such and such a book." But word was sent from the congressional library that the only copy of that book was in French, and Mr. Blaine exclaimed, helplessly: "It might as well be in Choctaw, for I can't read French."

Senator Davis said: "Take the book to the department, and have one of your translators fix it up for you." To this Mr. Blaine replied: "I am in contention with President Harrison on this point, and if one of my translators had this book in his possession, the translation would get to Harrison as soon as it would to me." Then Senator Davis agreed to make the translation himself. During the following night the statesman from Minnesota sat up and translated a whole chapter into exquisite English, and took it to Mr. Blaine at his residence about eight o'clock the next morning.

Mr. Blaine scored such a triumph over President Harrison in his brilliant interpretation of international law, covering all of the points in issue, that the breach between Harrison and Blaine was so widened as to culminate ultimately in Blaine's dramatic withdrawal from the cabinet while the republican convention at Minneapolis was in session.

Following the substantial and appropriate views expressed by the visitor from Oklahoma, one must make mention of the great senior senator from Iowa, Mr. Allison; the marvelous parliamentary tactician from Rhode Island, Mr. Aldrich; the almost incomparable orator and tariff statistician from Michigan, Mr. Burrows; the great political general, Mr. Quay, of Pennsylvania; the shrewd business man and political organizer, Mr. Hanna, of Ohio; the authority on interstate commerce, Mr. Cullom, of Illinois; the watch dog of the treasury, Mr. Cockrell, of Missouri.

Yes, there are giants in these days, and an instructive letter might be written concerning each one of those statesmen who serve their country in that august legislative body.

This is the time of year that the contractor on lumbering operations begin to complain about the McCarthy law, for the payment of laboring men in the woods. We do not here any complaint in the winter, when the lumberjack is working sixteen hours a day, and eating his frozen lunch brought to him at noon in the woods, but in the spring when pay day comes and the contractor has to put up the cash instead of a white piece of paper is the time he begins to complain about the injustice of the McCarthy law.

BLOCKADING EUROPE.

Minneapolis Tribune.

It seems rather a saucy thing to send a squadron across the ocean to blockade the port of Lisbon; but there does not appear to be any other way to return the formal call lately made on the American continent by the combined fleets of Germany and Great Britain. The blockade of the port of Lisbon, contemplated by our navy department, will be even more "peaceful" than that of the Venezuelan coast by Germany and Great Britain. We shall not consult these powers about it, as they consulted us; but we shall consult the government of Portugal, as they did not consult that of Venezuela.

This government will be asked to permit us to make practice manouvers about the harbor of their capital, in order to test the power of the American navy to conduct hostile operations across the Atlantic. Portugal has been for a century or more under the special care of our good friends the British, and is not likely to object, especially as the impoverished nobility and naval officers will be entertained in great profusion on our ships during the blockade.

The real purpose is to show that the United States can make war without coaling stations. This was done in Cuba; now we want to show that it can be done in Europe. The ships will be crammed full of coal, and will be accompanied by colliers, supply and repair ships. It is understood to be the purpose to complete the maneuver and return to the United States without touching at any point where the ships could not touch in time of actual war. They will be without one advantage, indeed, which they would have in war; because they cannot seize a temporary naval base on the coast of Portugal.

This will be a highly interesting experiment; but if it is intended to impress the German emperor, as Captain Bowles says, why was not some friendly little country in the North Sea chosen for the demonstration. Probably neither Belgium, Holland nor Denmark would have made serious objection. That would have made the experiment even more interesting to us and our good friends, the British, as well as to our other good friend, the German emperor.

Coincidental, but Not Original.

There was something coincidental as well as timely and pertinent in the recent protests of President Roosevelt and President Eliot against childlessness and the former's tribute to the joys of parenthood, though they are not new. Shakespeare voiced the same sentiment in the second of his sonnets thus:

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held,
Then, being asked where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep sunken eyes,
Were an all eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use
If thou couldst answer, "This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse."
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

As nobly expressed as were the outgivings of the nation's chief executive and the president of Harvard university, it must be admitted that the Bard of Avon puts it even more beautifully.

Alaskan Treaty and Seal Fishing.

The ratification by the United States senate of the Hay-Herbert treaty gives promise of the settlement of the long standing and vexatious Alaskan boundary controversy. The treaty places the adjudication of disputed points in the hands of six commissioners, three each to be chosen by Great Britain and the United States, thus making it necessary for the successful claimant to win over one of the rival commissioners to its side. If the three British members were to be Canadians, there might be grave doubt as to the possibility of any result; but it is understood that Great Britain will be represented by at least one commissioner, the Dominion having the other two. Upon that basis there is hope of amicable adjustment.

As important as is the speedy settlement of the Alaskan boundary dispute, it is not less important that there should be prompt adjustment of another subject of international friction and annoyance in connection with the relations of Great Britain and the United States in Alaska, and that is the matter of pelagic seal fishing. Either from lack of definite understanding or the unwillingness or inability of the Dominion government to enforce reasonable restrictions, or for both reasons, the slaughter of seals has been going on at such a rate for some years that there now remains but a mere remnant of the herd in Alaskan waters, and if this is not soon checked these valuable animals will become entirely extinct.

Not only this, but the process of extermination is conducted in the most brutal manner and is a disgrace to civilization. The mothers, which leave their young on the islands and go out in quest of food, are killed at sea by the hunters, and the deserted pups perish of starvation. Representative Tawney, who has been making a vigorous fight in congress to save the Alaskan seals, declares that as many as 80,000 of these infant seals have perished of starvation in a year owing to the cruel slaughter of the mother seals by the poachers out at sea. It is explained that the Canadian sealers, who possess no rookeries, are the principal offenders, as they are forced to hunt at sea. The aggravating feature, humanity aside, is that the Canadians are profiting by killing seals that have their homes on American soil and are therefore poaching at the expense of our sealers.

Unless an international law can be promulgated and rigidly enforced providing for the hunting of these valuable animals more humanely and more equitably to the United States the drastic measure suggested by Mr. Tawney should be adopted—that is, to kill all the seals in Alaskan waters, with the exception of 1,000 males and 10,000 females, which it is proposed to colonize, much as buffalo are colonized in Yellowstone park, in order to preserve the species to posterity.

Check on Wife Desertion.

There is pending before the Pennsylvania legislature a bill proposed by the organized charities of Philadelphia making wife desertion a misdemeanor. The present Pennsylvania law provides that proceedings may be taken for nonsupport and enforced by peremptory orders of the courts, but it is not an offense against the criminal statutes. The result is that if a man deserts his family and gets beyond the borders of the state he cannot be brought back by extradition proceedings.

The main purpose of the pending bill, which imposes a penalty not exceeding $100 or imprisonment for not over a year, or both, is to enable men who have fled the state in evasion of an order of support to be brought back. The necessity of imposing some such check seems pretty well established by the fact that last year 611 deserted wives, with more than 1,500 children under fourteen years, applied to the organized charities of Philadelphia alone for aid.

What is true of Philadelphia is undoubtedly true of other large cities and of smaller communities in proportion to population, and emphasizes the need of a similar law in all the states.

FUR TRAPPERS.

The Kind of Life They Lead Up In the Wilds of Canada.

"You admire furs," commented an old trapper as he sat contentedly smoking his pipe. "You should go where we get them. Ah, that is the life—pure air, plain, wholesome food and then after the season's work that brigade of fur loaded canoes going off down the lakes. Every canoe is loaded, you know, almost to the gunwale, and they string out one behind the other, a long line of them. They usually start out early in the morning and paddle, paddle, paddle, hour after hour down this stream, through that lake and so into civilization.

"But they don't forget to eat—oh, no! About noon they go ashore. They 'snub' the canoes to overhanging trees and hunt around for a good flat rock on which to start their fire. But those fellows don't take an hour for luncheon. Time is too valuable to them. They take a drink of tea, a bite of pork. That is about all. Then they are off again. The men spell each other at the paddles, and occasionally the canoes are bunched by steersmen for a good smoke.

"When night comes, the brigade goes ashore and pitches its camp. Tents are put up, campfires lighted and the supper prepared, great clouds of black flies and mosquitoes hovering around. Some of the men busy themselves preparing the great brown flapjacks for the next day, while others dry their moccasins or get their blankets ready to bunk in. Perhaps a canoe has to be patched the next morning before the start can be made.

"Oh, it is a great life up there in the wilds of Canada, where they get the furs. You should try it."—New York Tribune.

The "Tom o' Bedlams."

In the old days, when the supply of lunatics exceeded their accommodation at Bethlehem hospital, the difficulty was not met by the building of temporary annexes, but by the admission of outdoor patients, who went by the name of Tom o' Bedlams. As an old chronicle tells us: "They had on their left arm an armilla of tin about four inches long. They wore about their necks a great horn of an ox in a string or bawdry, which when they came to a house for alms they did wind, and they did put the drink given them into this horn, whereto they did put a stopple." It was found, however, "that several vagrant persons do wander about the city of London and countries, pretending themselves to be lunatics under cure in the hospital of Bethlehem, with brass plates about their arms and inscriptions thereon," and these occasional patients had in consequence to be abolished in 1675.—London Chronicle.

Boys Who Play Ball on Sunday.

The bishop coadjutor of Pennsylvania, Alexander Mackay-Smith, was on the way one Sunday morning from the Bryn Mawr railroad station to the chapel of Bryn Mawr college, where he was to preach.

As he drove in the hired station wagon along the country road he saw approaching on foot a little boy with a ball and bat and a catcher's mask.

The bishop caused his carriage to pull up. "Little boy," he said, leaning out, "little boy."

"Sir," returned the lad.

"Do you know where little boys go who play ball on Sunday?"

"Yes, sir," the other answered. "They go to Heston's lot, over there behind the dam."—New York Tribune.

A Brave Woman Sailor.

There are any number of instances on record of women sailing ships into port single handed when compelled thereto by some exceptional stress of circumstances. A typical case is that of the brigantine Moorburg, cholera stricken in the autumn of 1877 while on a voyage from China to Australia. The only one that escaped the pestilence was the captain's wife, and she was handicapped by having a baby in arms to suckle and attend to. Nevertheless she navigated the vessel into Brisbane, a voyage of some seven weeks' duration, reefing, steering and generally performing the work of a full crew, while tenderly nursing the sick during her spare moments.—London Tit-Bits.

A Large Order.

The proprietor of a certain restaurant had "leased" the reverse side of his bill of fare to a carriage manufacturer, who prints advertisements thereon.

The other day a customer in a great hurry ran into the restaurant, sat at a table and was handed a bill wrong side up by the flurried waiter.

The customer put on his pince-nez, curled his mustache with his left hand and shouted in a voice of thunder:

"Bring me a fly, a landau, two victorias and a dogcart! Got any wheelbarrows?"

The waiter fled.—London Answers.

THE JOKE AS A POWER.

It Is Rapidly Becoming Mightier Than the Pen.

Men who fear nothing else shrink from a joke upon themselves. Soldiers who do not flinch before opposing guns dread to be made ridiculous. Woe to the national hero who makes one trifling mistake which may subject him to clever caricature! His meritorious career is henceforth shadowed by one colored illustration. A comic paper will tip the scales of justice, snatch the victor's prize from his extended palm and rob the orator of choicest laurels. A brilliant satire will mar the fortunes of the greatest statesman, a laugh will turn the tide of a political convention.

Indeed the joke is fast becoming mightier than the pen. The orator has learned its value, and even the clergyman resorts to it when he desires to stir the flagging interest of his flock. It furnishes sufficient excuse for the impertinence of children, and in its name the daily papers deride the highest national dignitaries.

What is the meaning of its steady growth in power and what results may we predict from its humorous tyranny?

Is there a chance that our keen relish for fun may finally produce a kind of humorous dyspepsia resulting from overindulgence, unless with epicurean discrimination we demand quality, not quantity, and stubbornly refuse to swallow other than that which should appease a wholesome, nay cultivated appetite in jokes?—Caroline Ticknor in Atlantic.

Trifles as Irritants.

We are so constituted that what is occurring at the moment interests us often out of all proportion to its importance. For example, we are thrown off our balance by the merest trifles perhaps which occur today, but which in a week's time may have no significance whatever. Obstacles which seem like mountains when we meet them dwindle away to molehills when we get away from them.

Even what seems tragedy at the moment in the future may be the most innocent comedy.

Most of us are so constituted that we will make almost any sacrifice for present peace. It would seem easier to have an arm or a leg amputated two years hence than to lose a finger today! It is human nature to shrink from pain, and we purchase release at almost any cost. If we could only train the mind to look at today's trouble and annoyance from the standpoint of the future, it would be much easier to bear.—Success.

Locked In With a Maniac.

The writer was once closeted with a patient, whom he had no suspicion of being mad until the latter got out of bed, turned the key of the door and preferred a mild request to the writer to have his throat cut, handing him at the same time an open pocketknife, which he produced from underneath his pillow. I objected to the knife as being too small for the purpose and begged to be allowed to go for my case of amputating knives, with which, I explained, the operation could be performed with greater neatness and dispatch. He unlocked the door at once, binding me over to secrecy and urging me to lose no time in returning. I drove home, reported the case to the authorities and came back with assistance. He was secured with great difficulty and sent to the asylum.—London Tit-Bits.

Harmony In the Leaves of a Tree.

One of the remarkable characteristics of a tree is the process of leafage, and if we examine the bough upon which the leaves grow the admiration of the scientific agriculturist will become thoroughly aroused over the perfect consistency and artistic skill manifested in the arrangement of each spray and the exact number of leaves arranged with the most exquisite art and regularity. Every group of leaves forms merely long lines—some short and each one different—no two alike, no two in the same position, yet all so perfect and harmoniously blended that there can be no antagonism, no sameness and all those thousands and thousands of strange and delicate forms grouped together, neither confused nor ill arranged.

A Famous Portrait Painter's Opinion.

The famous artist Von Lenbach had one great dominant principle—that out of nature one should grasp and hold fast but one thing in portraiture, the head; that this exponent of the soul must stand out in undisturbed unity; that accessories of whatever kind, whether dress or form, must distract and weaken the impression that the head should produce; that a portrait to attain its highest aim and significance must look out from a background of nothingness and must be shorn of every detail that interferes with this unity of purpose.—Cosmopolitan.

Would Be a Welcome Visitor.

If there is truth in the rumor coming from New Orleans that President Loubet of France is to visit this country next summer, it is highly gratifying information. It is said that he will arrive in the Crescent City in June, on his way to the Louisiana Purchase exposition; thence proceeding up the Mississippi, following the line of travel of the first French explorers and visiting the early French settlements in Wisconsin and elsewhere and finally sailing for home from the port of New York. It is intimated that he will arrive on a French war vessel and return on a ship of the United States navy. Naturally it may be inferred that he will visit the national capital and be the recipient of such distinguished consideration as befits his station.

There could come to us no guest from abroad whom the country would more delight to honor than the president of the French republic, with which country the United States is on now particularly friendly terms, notably in view of the attitude of France in the Venezuelan imbroglio, which has been in marked contrast with that of Germany and Great Britain. This has emphasized the traditional friendship between the two nations, in which there has been scarcely a break since the Frenchmen sent Lafayette and Rochambeau to help us fight our battle for independence.

The Maximilian incident in Mexico forty years ago was due to the personal ambition of Napoleon III. and in no sense was an expression of national sentiment. That incident taught France for all time that the Monroe doctrine is a lively reality, a lesson which was not lost upon her, as her present position abundantly demonstrates.

When it is recalled that the immense Louisiana purchase was once French territory and in part settled by French pioneers before any one dreamed of an American or a French republic, the appropriateness of such a visit from the French president will be apparent. President Loubet has been a great traveler during his term of office, has several times made sea voyages to Russia and is bound by no such unwritten law as that which forbids an American president to leave American soil during his incumbency of that office. If President Loubet can see his way clear to make the journey proposed, he may rest assured of the most cordial welcome from the American people.

Where Life Is Strenuous.

Here in the northwest one encounters the living representation of the strenuous life. Here men work together in a way unknown anywhere else. The east is insular, every man for himself. The northwest, indeed the whole west, has learned the value of co-operation and community interest. Migrating to a new country, with difficulties and dangers on every hand, the people have been forced to combine and stand with solid front to the world. As a result innumerable organizations have sprung up having for their purpose the advancement of some community interest.—Ray Stannard Baker in Century.

"My trouble was with the ovaries; I am tall, and the doctor said I grew too fast for my strength. I suffered dreadfully from inflammation and doctored continually, but got no help. I suffered from terrible dragging sensations with the most awful pains low down in the side and pains in the back, and the most agonizing headaches. No one knows what I endured. Often I was sick to the stomach, and every little while I would be too sick to go to work, for three or four days; I work in a large store, and I suppose standing on my feet all day made me worse.

"At the suggestion of a friend of my mother's I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is simply wonderful. I felt better after the first two or three doses; it seemed as though a weight was taken off my shoulders; I continued its use until now I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. A well-known judge, who is as famous for his wit as his corpulency, was much disturbed in mind by his tendency to ever-increasing stoutness. He tried many remedies. At length a friend suggested that he should take a course of treatment at certain hot springs. He immediately set out for the place, sojourned for a few weeks at it, managed to get rid of a good deal of superflous flesh, and returned home in a most happy and jocular frame of mind, relates an exchange.

On the first morning after his return, when he was wending his way to the courthouse, he came to the butcher shop where his family were supplied with meat. Marching inside, he said:

"Cut me off 20 pounds of pork."

The butcher sharpened his knife and at once complied. The judge looked at the meat for a minute or two and then walked off.

"Shall I send the pork to your house, my lord?" inquired the butcher, who felt that the judge had overlooked instructions.

"Oh, no," was the reply, given with a smile. "I don't want it. I have fallen off just 20 pounds, and I only wanted to have an idea of how much it was!"

He Means It.

New Berlin, Ill., Mar. 16th:—Mr. Frank Newton of this place speaks very earnestly and emphatically when asked by any of his many friends the reason for the very noticeable improvement in his health.

For a long time—over two years—he has been suffering a great deal with pains in his back and an all over feeling of illness and weakness. His appetite failed him and he grew gradually weaker and weaker till he was very much run down.

A friend recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills and Mr. Newton began to take two at a dose three times a day. In a very short time he noticed an improvement; the pains left his back and he could eat better. He kept on improving and now he says:

"Yes, indeed! I am a different man and Dodd's Kidney Pills did it all. I cannot tell you how much better I feel. I am a new man and Dodd's Kidney Pills deserve all the credit."

Wouldn't Be Necessary.

"You want to learn to spell better, Bessie," said the mother, looking over her school report.

"Oh, I don't care, mamma."

"But you don't want to grow up and not know how to spell, my child, do you?"

"Yes, I do. I'm going to be a typewriter, mamma."—Yonker's Statesman.

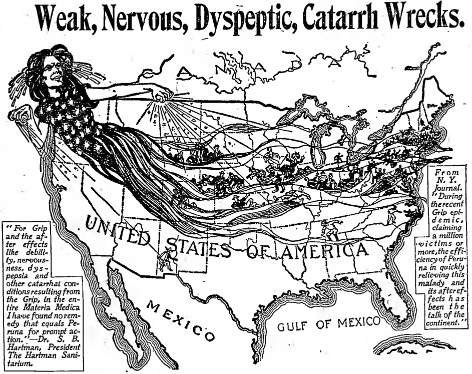
The Grip Leaves Thousands in its Path Weak, Nervous, Dyspeptic, Catarrh Wrecks.



"For Grip and the after effects like debility, nervousness, dyspepsia and other catarrhal conditions resulting from the Grip, in the entire Materia Medica I have found no remedy that equals Peruna for prompt action."—Dr. S. B. Hartman, President The Hartman Sanitarium.

From N. Y. Journal. "During the recent Grip epidemic, claiming a million victims or more, the efficiency of Peruna in quickly relieving this malady and its after effects has been the talk of the continent."

LIKE A DEMON grip has crossed our country, leaving behind scores of physical wrecks.

Victims of catarrh of the head, catarrh of the throat, catarrh of the lungs, catarrh of the stomach, catarrh of the kidneys, catarrh of the pelvic organs, are to be counted by hundreds of thousands. Grip is epidemic catarrh, and sows the seed of chronic catarrh within the system.

This is so true that few grip sufferers are able to make a complete recovery until they have used Peruna.

Never in the history of medicine has a remedy received such unqualified and universal eulogies as Peruna.

A New York Alderman's Experience.

Hon. Joseph A. Flinn, alderman Fifth District, writes from 104 Christopher street, New York City, as follows:

"When a pestilence overtakes our people we take precaution as a nation to preserve the citizens against the dread disease.

"La grippe has entered thousands of our homes this fall, and I noticed that the people who used Peruna were quickly restored, while those who depended on doctor's prescriptions, spent weeks in recovering, leaving them weak and emaciated.

"I had a slight attack of la grippe and at once took Peruna, which drove the disease out of my system in a few days and did not hinder me from pursuing my daily work.

"I should like to see our Board of Health give it official recognition and have it used generally among our poor sick people in Greater New York."—Joseph A. Flinn.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barber's Union, writes from 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over. I suffered with a severe backache, indigestion and numerous ills, so I could neither eat nor sleep, and I thought I would give up my work, which I could not afford to do.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. I used it faithfully and felt a marked improvement. During the next two months I took five bottles, and then felt splendid. Now my head is clear, my nerves steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Mr. O. H. Perry, Atchison, Kansas, writes:

"Again, after repeated trials of your medicines, Peruna and Manalin, I give this as my expression of the wonderful results of your very valuable medicine in its effects in my case after repeated trials.

"First, it cured me of chronic bronchitis of fifteen years' standing by using two bottles of Peruna in January, 1894, and no return of it.

"After I was cured of bronchitis I had la grippe every winter for several winters. But, through the use of Peruna, it got gradually weaker in its severity, until it dwindled down to a mere stupor for two or three days. Now the stupor does not trouble me any more."—O. H. Perry.

WOMAN'S GENTLE NATURE CALLS FOR GENTLE TREATMENT

Delicately formed and gently reared, women will find, in all the seasons of their lives, as maidens, wives, or mothers, that the one simple, wholesome remedy which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally, and which may be used with truly beneficial effects, under any conditions, when the system needs a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs. It is well known to be a simple combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants with pleasant, aromatic liquids, which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system when its gentle cleansing is desired.

Many of the ills from which women suffer are of a transient nature and do not come from any organic trouble and it is pleasant to know that they yield so promptly to the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is needed it is best to consult the family physician and to avoid the old-time cathartics and loudly advertised nostrums of the present day. When one needs only to remove the strain, the torpor, the congestion, or similar ills, which attend upon a constipated condition of the system, use the true and gentle remedy—Syrup of Figs—and enjoy freedom from the depression, the aches and pains, colds and headaches, which are due to inactivity of the bowels.

Only those who buy the genuine Syrup of Figs can hope to get its beneficial effects and as a guarantee of the excellence of the remedy the full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package and without it any preparation offered as Syrup of Figs is fraudulent and should be declined. To those who know the quality of this excellent laxative, the offer of any substitute, when Syrup of Figs is called for, is always resented by a transfer of patronage to some first-class drug establishment, where they do not recommend, nor sell false brands, nor imitation remedies. The genuine article may be bought of all reliable druggists everywhere at 50 cents per bottle.

WASHINGTON'S MALL.

Most Attractive Public Reservation in the Country.

Proposed New National Museum Building Will Add Impressiveness to It—Place Well Worth Visiting.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THERE is a public reservation extending from the capitol to the white house, and it is called "The Mall." There is a well kept boulevard more than a mile and a half in length, because of its devious windings through the bowered park, although the direct distance from the white house to the capitol is only a mile. It was the purpose of the designer of the city that this reservation should be kept guarded from the public, so that the presidents might have a private driveway to the legislative halls; but that idea did not long prevail, and "The Mall" has always been opened to the uses of the public.

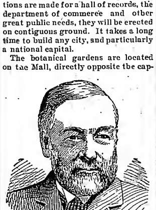
This great reservation is in South Washington, and cannot be seen from Pennsylvania avenue, because that thoroughfare is lined with business houses; very few of them worthy of the situation, and substantially all of them too small and insignificant in appearance to be located along the grandest avenue in the world.

When William M. Springer, of Illinois, was in congress he advocated and urged the purchase of the entire south side of Pennsylvania avenue by the federal government, for the purpose of erecting thereon handsome and substantial public buildings. The idea did not then prevail, but it is gradually becoming popular. It can be safely predicted that within another decade the government will make that purchase, although the cost will be tremendous. When it was urged by Mr. Springer, 20 years ago, the whole south frontage of the avenue could have been bought for comparatively little money.

PROPOSED NEW NATIONAL MUSEUM BUILDING.

The congress recently appropriated $3,500,000 for the erection of a municipal building for the District of Columbia, and specified that it shall be built on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, one block from the treasury department. The post office department is now located on that thoroughfare, and hereafter when appropriations are made for a hall of records, the department of commerce and other great public needs, they will be erected on contiguous ground. It takes a long time to build any city, and particularly a national capital.

The botanical gardens are located on the Mall, directly opposite the capitol grounds; and they are bounded on the north by Pennsylvania avenue and on the south by the Mall. The gardens have a frontage of three blocks on the avenue, and thence westward the business buildings occupy the avenue frontage.



PROF. S. P. LANGLEY.
(Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.)

Driving westward along the Mall we come to Armory square, where the first troops were enlisted for the defense of the capital in 1861; and where now are located the buildings of the federal fish commission. To the right, as we drive westward, is the railroad depot where Garfield was shot; and to the left is the long wharfage where hundreds of thousands of soldiers embarked and debarked, and in plain view is the celebrated long bridge.

Crossing Seventh street we come to the army medical museum, which belongs to the office of the surgeon general. Here are exhibited marvelous things in surgery and medicine; celebrated cases treated on the field in Indian warfare, the Mexican, civil and Spanish wars. And, after crossing Ninth street, still driving along the boulevard of the Mall, beneath the impenetrable leaves of magnificent trees and surrounded by sward as green and smooth and attractive as nature ever made, we come to the National museum, which is an outgrowth of the Smithsonian institution.

Next we come to the department of agriculture, which is surrounded by the best kept grounds in this city; a department so rapidly growing that congress has recently made a preliminary appropriation for the erection of a new and more commodious building, also to be located on Pennsylvania avenue. And then, crossing Fourteenth street, we come to the great bureau of engraving and printing, where all of our paper money is made. Next, still within the Mall, we come to the Washington monument, and here, circling northward, we come into the grounds of the white house and department of state. When you come to the national capital you must take this drive; or, if you can't afford to drive, take one whole day for a strolling walk through the Mall. It is often neglected by visitors who do not see it, and have never heard of it.

You should take time to enter the National museum and also the Smithsonian institution. In 1846 an act of congress was approved which founded the Smithsonian, and out of that institution the National museum has grown to great proportions. Smithson not only gave money, but also a collection of curios which formed the nucleus of the great collection which now stands unrivaled in the world for magnificence and variety. There was a private society known as the National Institute which gave to the Smithsonian an excellent collection, some time about 1850. Then, in 1876, the greater part of the material gathered for the centennial exposition at Philadelphia was given to the Smithsonian, which expanded that institution beyond the capacity of the original building, so that in 1879 congress appropriated $250,000 for the building now known as the National museum.

In the building which was yet unadorned, but under roof, the inaugural ball was given on the night of March 4, 1881, when Garfield was inaugurated. This building and the Smithsonian, with all of their store rooms, stables and sheds, make use of 238,689 square feet of floor space; and that is not half enough. For lack of space most deplorable conditions are now apparent, every branch of the service being seriously hampered by inadequate space. Long ago it became impossible to make proper disposition of specimens, so that year after year large and valuable collections are packed away in rented buildings. Consequently, they are not half catalogued; and even those which are catalogued are inaccessible.

These conditions have been placed before congress by the officials of the museum, and at the last session an appropriation of $5,000 was made for the preparation of plans for a new building, which must cost not more than $1,500,000. The plans have been laid before congress, and the appropriation will probably be made before the adjournment on March 4. The plans contemplate the erection of a rectangular building 486 feet front, 345 feet deep, and 80 feet high, with four floors and about 400,000 feet of floor space.

It is the purpose of the officials of the museum and the Smithsonian to make out of the proposed appropriation just one-half of the building, and afterwards complete it with a subsequent appropriation which necessity will require. The fireproof building which the service needs will cost not less than $3,000,000; but the congress always takes two bites at a cherry of that size. The one-half which it is proposed to erect will present the appearance of a completed structure.

So much of the building as is now proposed will be used for storage purposes, primarily, because it is absolutely necessary that the valuable collections now packed away in rented buildings shall be removed to fireproof rooms. The losses which are liable to occur by fire would be irreparable.

The National museum is of three distinct functions, as described by its secretary. First, it is a museum of record. It preserves a vast amount of scientific knowledge; second, it is a museum of research, because its collections are arranged on scientific lines, and constitute an everlasting stimulus to scientific investigation; and third, it is an educational museum, illustrating by specimens every kind of natural object, every manifestation of human thought and activity.

At the sixth annual meeting of the Northwestern Manufacturers' association at the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce the following officers were elected:

A six-foot vein of good coal has been found between Rallog and Barnesville which, when developed, will solve the fuel question for many years to come, as wood is getting to be very scarce and dear.

Just a week from the day she was to have been married, after the invitations for the marriage had been issued and all preparations for the happy event completed, Clara Louise Bolter died and her remains now occupy a grave in Layman's cemetery in Minneapolis.

M. W. Savage has refused an offer of $70,000 for Dan Patch. The famous pacer cost Mr. Savage $60,000 about three months ago. He bought the stallion in New York city, and now eastern men are so anxious to get him back that they telegraphed the offer.

The case against Michael Mollick, charged with illegal fishing at Spring Lake, resulted in a verdict of acquittal. The complainant was Deputy Game Warden Boyd of St. Paul.

While leading a spirited horse, Adolph Threnden, of Edgerton, a young man, was kicked in the face and badly injured. He is a K. P., which lodge will look to his welfare.

W. G. Sawyer has resigned as a member of the board of managers of the Minnesota state fair, and W. E. Lee of Long Prairie, a former member of the state board of control, has been selected as his successor.

All loggers on the upper St. Croix and tributaries have broken camp and preparations are being made for an immediate log drive. The warm weather has caused the total disappearance of the snow and the streams are full.

The citizenship of Daniel Campbell of Minneapolis has been annulled by an order of Judge C. B. Elliott because of the statements of the former at the time of his naturalization that he came to the United States in 1848, when the proof shows that he really came in 1856, after he was 21 years of age.

W. W. Erwin, the "Tall Pine" has moved to Miami, Fla., where he has become senior partner in a prominent law firm. It is said at his former office here, where he was associated with Henry S. Meade that his arrangements in the south are of a most satisfactory sort.

It will be consoling to the people of representative Simons district to know, that he made an effort to pass a hill to appropriate $20.000 for a sugar beet hounty. He may be of the opinion that the 61st District sent him to the legislature for that purpose and won't find out his mistake until the next primary election.

If thare is no appropiation made for drainage at this session of the legislatnre the representatives in the northern part of the state are the ones that are to blame, as they do not take any interest in the matter whatever. Simons, of Red Lake Falls has taken up a large portion of his time trying to get a hounty on sugar beets. We wonder if he is going to try the experimet of raising beets on the low marshy lands of his district.

In the location of the additonal judge for this district, all claimants overlook the fact, that the U.S. Land office is in Crookston, and that it is necissary for a foreign horn alien to take ont his citizine paper before makeing final proof on his homestad. It has been a matter of convenience to the settlers of this new part of the district to go to Crookston and get their citizine papers and make final proof on their claims hy going down there once. This is not mutch of an item to an attorney, but it saves the home steder a good deal of money. All other things being equal it would he very convienant for them to have a district judge in Crookston, at all times.

WILL PASS THIS WAY.

Ernest Buse is advocating the construction of a line of railway from Red Lake Falls due east, to connect with the Minnesota International near Bridgie. This rout would touch Red Lake on south shore, and here Mr. Buse shows it would give an outlet for the entire district tributary to Red Lake-an emmense area hordering the lake on all sides. Steamers plying on lake would carry fraight to and from the railroad landing. This line Mr. Buse suggests should become part of the Norther Pacific system with conuections at Red Lake Falls and Bridgie. In this connection it may be stated that reports from various reliable sources credit the Northern Pacific with the intention of constructing this line in the near future. The advantage of this branch and the large territory that will be controlled hy hy the railroad tappin Red Lake have no doubt been considered hy the Norther Pacific people.

The Discovery of Felt:

Felt is a union of animal hair with wool in such a manner as to produce a firm, compact substance. Its discovery was of so much importance that it seemed necessary to attribute it to divine agency, and hence we have a tradition of saintly origin. When St. Clement was fleeing from his persecutors his feet became blistered, and in order to abate the pain he placed wool between his sandals and the soles of his feet. On continuing his journey the wool, by the perspiration, motion and pressure of his feet, became a uniformly compact substance, which was afterward denominated felt.

MAKING FORTUNES.

The Money of the Market Not For the Man With a Theory.

Fortunes have been made in the Chicago board of trade not by men who entered the market with a preconceived theory as to its course, which they attempted to make good through thick and thin, but rather by those who took things as they came, watching the drift, shaping their way from day to day, like prudent merchants, according to the current.

This is confusing to the novice, for the novice almost always comes in with a preconceived theory. Some time ago a young man with a large hope, a moderate fortune and considerable social prestige was shown the enormous possibilities in December pork. It looked absolutely convincing. but he called upon a great packer with whom he had a personal acquaintance. Yes; the packer thought very well of pork—was buying it, in fact. Thus doubly assured the young man bought. The market went his way, and he bought more. Then the market turned. The young man reviewed his convincing statistics, remembered the words of the packer and stood stubbornly upon his line. When he was getting near to the end of his margins, he was horrified to learn that his friend the packer had shifted to the other side of the market two weeks before. He visited him, recalled their conversation and explained the situation. The packer stared. "Do you mean you've been holding 2,500 barrels of pork all this time?" he demanded. "Yes," said the young man, "and I have it yet. Now, what can I do with it?" "I don't know," said the packer. "unless you can eat it."—Will Payne in Century.

Vampire Superstitions.

The prevailing belief in European countries was that vampires were the ghosts of suicides or others who had died violent deaths and were forced by the devil to leave their graves at night and feed on the blood of men and women, and any who died at the hands of these dreadful creatures also became vampires. In this way beautiful women became vampires and enticed young men and fed on their blood and flesh. It was believed that they had power to assume any shape or form desired between sunset and sunrise and that they committed most of their awful deeds at midnight. They were powerless in the daytime and were generally in a torpid state. Garlic and wild rosebushes were guards against them, and crucifixes were feared by them. To prevent suicides from becoming vampires they were buried with a stake driven through their hearts, and the straw they had slept on was burned. All the dogs and cats in the village were locked up, for if a dog or cat jumped over a corpse it was sure to become the home of a vampire.—Chicago Tribune.

A Narrow Escape For One Man.

The importance of examining closely the hair found on weapons was shown in a case in which a hatchet having clotted blood and hair adherent to it was produced as evidence against a prisoner suspected of murder in a little country town. It was found under his bed. This, with other circumstantial evidence, had turned public opinion strongly against the prisoner, but when the hair was examined by a microscopist who chanced to be in the courtroom it was found not to be human, but that of some animal. This circumstance led to a more complete sifting of the evidence, and the accused was acquitted. It turned out that he had killed a dog with the hatchet and had carelessly thrown the weapon under the bed. So his life literally hung on a hair.

A Good Pull.

"Well, he pulls the same cork over and over."

"You see," said the old locomotive engineer. "railroad officials don't look at things quite as the public does. On one of my runs a year ago I found a certain bridge swept away, and I had to back up about two miles to get orders. As I reached the station the division superintendent came out and demanded.

"What's the reason for all this?"

"Bridge over Maple river gone," says I.

Eyes at Different Ages.

The Stockholm museum possesses an interesting collection of eyes taken from human beings at different ages, which are cut across in such a way as to exhibit plainly the internal and the external eye. It is easy to observe that the eye of a young child is as transparent as water; that of the youth a little less so; in the man of thirty the eye begins to be slightly opaque, in the man of fifty or sixty it is decidedly opaque, and in the man of seventy or eighty it is dull and lusterless. This gradual development of opacity is due to the increase of fibrous tissue and deposit of waste matter in the eye.

We Meet the President Easily.

One striking characteristic of Washington life is the ease with which an interview can be held with the president, the members of the cabinet and the holders of office. How they get through their current work with all these interruptions is a mystery, but they do. It is undoubtedly better that a subject should be discussed de vive voix with the chief than that it should filter through many channels, to arrive as a more or less garbled version at headquarters. The result bears good fruit, for things are often settled offhand which take weeks and months in another country. Also, it is human nature to take more interest in a personality than in a mere name.—Hon. Maud Pauncefote in Nineteenth Century.

Courage In Elephants.

An elephant with a good mahout gives perhaps the best instance of disciplined courage—courage, that is, which persists in the face of knowledge and disinclination—to be seen in the animal world. No animal will face danger more readily at man's bidding.—London Spectator.

FREAKS OF WEATHER

FOGS, WINDS AND STORMS OF VARIED PECULIARITIES.

The "Williwau" That Spends Itself Upon Tierra del Fuego—The "Fohn" Wind of Switzerland and the Ferocious "Purga" of Siberia.

In mountainous countries, such as Scotland, a fog usually forms at the top of a hill and works downward. The cold mountain top, cooling a warm current of wet air, renders its moisture visible, and this cold fog, being of lower temperature than the air below and therefore heavier, drops gradually to the valley. Colorado, however, can show an exception to this general rule. There in winter the frost on the low ground is so intense that a fog often forms in the valleys and works slowly up the mountain side. This is known by the Indian name of "pogoalp."

Peru has hundreds of square miles along its coast of rainless country. In this tract rain is never known to fall from one century's end to another. Yet the region is not entirely barren of vegetation. Some parts of it, indeed, are comparatively fertile. This is due to the extraordinary fogs known as "garuas." They prevail every night from May to October after a summer that is sultry and extend up to a level of 1,200 feet above the sea. Above 1,200 feet rain falls.

The "calina" of Spain is a fog we may be grateful that we do not have. It is a dry, yellow mist which sometimes hides the sun for days at a time over vast tracts of country and makes the sky look as though covered with leaden gauze.

Another peculiar freak of weather we must be thankful to escape is the "williwau." This form of storm is confined to that faroff island Tierra del Fuego. The coast is indented with deep fiords crowned with high mountains. Down from their gorges drops the "williwau." A low, hoarse muttering is heard in the distance. Suddenly, without the least preliminary puff, a fearful blast of wind drops upon the sea. The water is not raised into waves, but driven into fine dust. Fortunately the shock lasts but ten or twelve seconds, and calm follows at once, for no vessel could stand such a wind for even half a minute. During the coming and going of a "williwau" the barometer may be watched to drop a tenth of an inch or more and rise again at once.

Similar in name if not in nature is the "willy willy" with which Kalgoorlie gold diggers are acquainted, to their cost. "Dust devils," some people call them. Half a dozen may be seen dancing harmlessly along over the desert when suddenly one will dive into the city and fill all the shop windows in Hannan street with dust and sand, blinding every passerby. The "willy willy" is a thief of the worst kind. It will steal the washing from a line or the roof from a shed. In some parts of the country wire ropes are anchored over the roofs of huts to save them from the attacks of these odd little whirlwinds.

Most people have heard of the "fohn" wind of Switzerland, that warm, dry gale which comes over the mountains and in spring will melt two feet of snow in a day. Its cause is most peculiar. The "fohn" comes from the south. As it strikes the Alps it is wet, like most gales which have crossed the sea, but the south face of the mountains receives its rain, and as it crosses the summits it is dry. The moving air current is also compressed and therefore dynamically heated. As it falls into the northern valleys in a cataract of air it gains heat at the rate of half a degree for every 100 feet of descent. It usually blows for two or three days, causing great suffering by its dry heat and oppression. While it lasts the temperature is about thirty degrees above the average. The "chinook" of British Columbia and the western side of the United States is very similar to the "fohn."

England has adopted the American word "blizzard" for a gale with snow. But the blizzard, however, must yield to the ferocious "buran" of the central steppes of Asia and the "purga" of northern Siberia. To be caught in gales such as these means death in a very few minutes, however warmly clad, for the very air becomes unbreathable, so filled is it with spikes of icedrift.

"Khamsin" is the hot wind from the desert which blows out of the Sahara upon Egypt. The word means fifty, from the idea that it lasts for fifty days. The "khamsin" is terribly hot and dry and sometimes brings pestilence with it.

Red snow we have all heard of. It is caused by a microscopic infusorial growth and only occurs in snow that has lain unmelted for a long time. In Spitzbergen recently green snow has been noted tinted by similar organisms. "Gold dust" snow has often been seen, but only in spring. At one time it was a mystery how the surface of new fallen snow came to be strewn with a shining yellow deposit. Now it is known to be due to the pollen of pine trees.—Pearson's Weekly.

Chicken Pox and Smallpox.

The eruption of chicken pox has an imperfect resemblance to that of smallpox, but can never be mistaken for it by the experienced eye. In smallpox the eruption of papules first appears on the forehead, the "papules" always become "bladders," and the latter always develop into pustules—that is, sooner or later their contents get changed into pus. Then the center of the pustules undergoes a peculiar sinking that in some measure resembles the depressions in a cushion or padded chair where the "buttons" are seen. In chicken pox there is no such uniformity of sequence, and the depressions are absent.

KNOWING FIRE HORSES.

How They Learn to Start With the Jigger and Get the Swing.

The intelligence of fire horses is well known. A most knowing animal of this kind is described by Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine." The author says of him:

Other things besides mischief, however, had Silver learned. Chief of these was to start with the jigger. Sleeping or waking, lying or standing, the summons that stirred the men from snoring ease to tense, rapid action never failed to find Silver alert. As the halter shank slipped through the bit ring that same instant found Silver gathered for the rush through the long, narrow lane leading from his open stall to the poles, above which, like great couchant spiders, waited the harnesses pendent on the hanger rods.

Once under the harness Silver was like a carved statue until the trip strap had been pulled, the collar fastened and the reins snapped in. Then he wanted to poke the poles through the doors, so eager was he to be off. It was no fault of Silver's that his team could not make a two second hitch.

With the first strain at the traces his impatience died out. A sixty foot truck starts with more or less reluctance, but when once the tires caught the car tracks Silver knew what to expect. He and his team mates could feel Lannigan gathering in the reins as though for a full stop. Next came the whistle of the whip. It swept across their flanks so quickly that it was practically one stroke for them all. At the same moment Lannigan leaned far forward and shot out his driving arm. The reins went loose, their heads went forward and, as if moving on a pivot, the three leaped as one horse.

Left to themselves, each horse would have leaped at a different instant. It was that one touch of the lash and the succeeding swing of Lannigan's body which gave them the measure, which set the time, which made it possible for less than 4,000 pounds of horseflesh to jump a five ton truck up the street at a four minute clip.

Knew Papa's Limitations.

She was a doctor's little girl. In her father's office she had seen a number of boxes on which was written, "This side up with care." In answer to her question her mother had said, "You see, when papa gets these boxes he doesn't know what is in them, and if it is something that might break it wouldn't be good for it to set it upside down."

The little girl pondered over it for some time. A few days later she came to her mother, saying, "Mamma, when God made us did he put a sign on our left sides that says, 'This side up with care?'" "Why?" asked the mother, smiling. "Because I heard papa tell somebody that it was bad for people to lie on their left sides 'cause it wouldn't be good for their hearts, and I know papa doesn't know what is inside us."—Little Chronicle.

Then She Remembered.

Near the elevated road in Park place is a news and apple woman. She is very absentminded. Also sympathetic. A ragged street urchin ran up to her.

"Say," he yelled, "your little boy has been run over by a big truck!"

"Where? Where? For goodness' sake, where?" shrieked the woman, rushing wildly down the street. She ran half a block and then stopped suddenly.

"Lord, what an old fool I am!" she said to herself disgustedly. "I have no little boy. I've never been married."

Meantime the street urchin had stolen four apples and a bunch of grapes. —New York Press.

A Wonderful Harbor.

Puget sound is one of the finest harbors in the world, if not the finest—a deep bay over a hundred miles long cut off from the ocean by the mountainous western peninsula of Washington. The waters nearly everywhere are deep, the shores abrupt, and the tide is moderate. By Way of a Lesson.

"One of our cars ran over another man last night," announced the superintendent of the street railway line.

"Well," replied the president, "after awhile the people will learn that the only safe place is aboard the car and that 5 cents is a small price to pay for safety."—Chicago Post.

"Do you think there is any danger of America being dominated by Europe?"

"No, sir," answered Mr. Meekton with extraordinary emphasis, "not as long as eminent Europeans continue to marry American girls."

RUNNING TO A FIRE.

How the Horses Enjoy the Mad Dash Through the Streets.

Everyone who has watched fire horses dashing through the streets in answer to an alarm will admit that the animals seem to enjoy the run. This idea is brought out by Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine," as follows:

For Silver all other minor pleasures in life were as nothing to the fierce joy he knew when, with a dozen men clinging to the handrails, the captain pulling the bellrope and Lannigan, far up above them all, swaying on the lines, the Gray Horse truck swept up Broadway to a first call box.

It was like trotting to music if you've ever done that. Possibly you could have discovered no harmony at all in the confused roar of the apparatus as it thundered past. But to the ears of Silver there were many sounds blended into one. There were the rhythmical beat of hoofs, the low undertone of the wheels grinding the pavement, the high note of the forged steel lock opener as it hammered the footboard, the mellow dingdong of the bell, the creak of the forty and fifty foot extensions, the rattle of the iron shod hooks, the rat-tat-tat of the scaling ladders on the bridge and the muffled drumming of the leather helmets as they jumped in the basket.

With the increasing speed all these sounds rose in pitch until, when the team was at full swing, they became one vibrant theme—thrilling, inspiring, exultant—the action song of the truck.

Burial Customs.

The Turks perhaps were the first people to use ornamental burial grounds such as we call cemeteries, but as to when this custom was first adopted in the land of the crescent no one seems to know. The earlier Jews buried their dead in the earth, that method being without doubt the most ancient burial mode known to man. The very earliest Egyptians seem to have understood the art of embalming and to have practiced it from time out of memory. The ancient Greeks and Romans cremated the body, the ashes only receiving sepulture, except in case of illustrious warriors, statesmen, etc.; these latter being buried unburned as a special mark of favor.

Some ancient tribes preserved only parts of the body and burned or buried the remainder. The parts retained and preserved, dried or in liquid, varied according to tribal notions. With some it was the heart that was thought to be too sacred for cremation or burial, with others the liver, ears, nose, tongue or fingers. The Tartars of 2,000 years ago preserved only the thumb and the nails of their dead.

If Venezuela pays Minister Bowen full value for his services, he ought to have a turn at the custom houses coming to him as soon as the allies are through with them.

The question, What shall we do with our ex-governors? is in a fair way of being settled. Fifteen of them are now in the United States senate.

A Touch of Ireland In Spain.

When I was in Malaga, the lighthouse was out of order, and some Americans had complained officially that their shipping interests were being damaged. No answer was received for two years. Then it was declared that it was the fault of the earthquake which had taken place many years previously. Finally the light was put out altogether because it interfered with the fireworks. When a pair of boots I had ordered did not fit and I complained to the maker, he arrived indignantly to protest. "They fit here," he said, prodding my tender toe, "and they fit there," another prod. Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone.

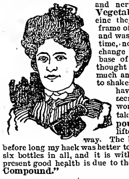
Help and happiness surely awaits you if you accept Mrs. Pinkham's advice. Disease makes women nervous, irritable, and easily annoyed by children and household duties; such women need the counsel and help of a woman who understands the peculiar troubles of her sex; that woman is Mrs. Pinkham, who with her famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have restored more sick and discouraged women to health and happiness than any other one person. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. Write today, do not wait.

Will not the volumes of letters from women who have been made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince others of the virtues of this great medicine?

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me?"

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. If you have some derangement of the feminine organism try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will surely help you.

Mrs. Emilie Seering, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City, writes:



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—If women who are always blue and depressed and nervous would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would find it the medicine they need to bring them to a more cheerful frame of mind. I was terribly worried and downcast, and was thin and bloodless. My back ached all the time, no matter how hard I tried to forget it or change my position to ease it, and the pain at the base of my brain was so bad that I sometimes thought that I would grow crazy; I had the blues so much and was always so depressed I could not seem to shake them off; half of the time I did not seem to have the courage to do my work; everything seemed to go wrong with me, and I was always worrying and fearing the worst. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first few doses a load seemed lifted from my shoulders, I felt better in every way. The blues left me and my head stopped aching; before long my back was better too, and I looked younger and stronger I took six bottles in all, and it is with thankfulness that I acknowledge that my present good health is due to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

The house yesterday afternoon passed without a dissenting vote the 4 per cent gross earnings bill for the taxation of railroads. There were 103 votes recorded in favor of the bill.

The house yesterday passed the Dorsey bill, which allows sugar companies claiming bounties under the law of 1895 to sue the state, and appropriates money to pay any judgments which may be obtained.

The house in committee of the whole yesterday recommended for passage the bill of Representative J. B. Kelly, of Dakota county, which allows counties to pay a bounty of 10 cents each for killing crows.

St. Paul, March 21.—Horses, mules or other domestic animals which have been clipped or sheared must not be left out in the rain and cold, according to a bill introduced yesterday by Senator A. O. Eberhart, of Mankato.

Senator Henry Morgan's bill requiring law school graduates to take the prescribed examination before being admitted to the bar, was recommended to pass by the senate judiciary committee yesterday with slight amendments. The amendments provide that the bill shall not apply to students in their senior year at the schools and reduces the fee required from them from $15 to $5.

The senate adopted a resolution by Senator E. B. Wood, of Long Prairie, yesterday to prevent lumbermen from making depredations at Itasca park on the Mississippi river.

The house yesterday adopted the report of the committee on public buildings recommending for passage the senate bill appropriating $1,500,000 for completing the new capitol. The opponents of the bill are fighting the measure by filibustering to prevent its consideration, and they made a vigorous effort to have the committee report lie on the table until the report of the investigation is printed.

The house in committee of the whole considered the advisability of amending the primary election law so that a declaration of party affiliation will not be required of the voter. The committee on elections reported for indefinite postponement the bills providing for the secrecy of the ballot, but the house turned down the committee report and placed both the Dowling and the Anderegg-Lemon bills on general orders.

The house refused to make any change in the state board of control law, and unless there is a decided change of sentiment, which does not seem likely now, the educational institutions will remain under the direction of the board of control.

Representative J. R. Randall's bill requiring all vehicles used for transporting persons accused or convicted of crime to be covered was recommended for indefinite postponement yesterday by the senate judiciary committee.

The members of the house and the senate will go to Duluth this morning for a visit to that city and a trip over the iron range as the guests of the Duluth Commercial Club. The party will live on the train for the entire trip. Both houses adjourned until Monday.

Duluth, Minn., March 21.—The special train arrived yesterday afternoon, bearing the members of both houses of the state legislature. The train arrived on time, and the lawmakers were taken at once to the Commercial Club, where a luncheon was served. The normal school committee arrived this morning.

The members of the normal committee were taken to the normal school in a special car. They were tendered a short entertainment, and announced themselves well pleased with the institution. It is probable that the visit will result in a liberal appropriation for the school.

This evening an elaborate banquet was held at the Spaulding. E. L. Miller, president of the Duluth Commercial Club, acted as toastmaster.

Among those who responded to toasts were Governor Van Sant, Mayor Hugo, J. L. Washburn, Senator Bower of St. Cloud, and Attorney F. B. Kellogg, of St. Paul. The party will leave this city at 6 o'clock this morning for a trip over the iron range.

DISGUISED CATARRH

A Stealthy, Insidious, Weakening Enemy to Women—Many Thousand Women Suffer Needlessly From This Cause.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet constantly, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges from the pelvic organs. These women get up in the morning tired, drag themselves through their daily duties tired, only to go to bed at night as tired as before.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th Street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered for three years with what is generally known as leucorrhea, in connection with ulceration of the womb. The doctors advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Reading of the value of Peruna, I thought it best to give this well-known remedy a trial, so I bought three bottles of it at once. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health, and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

MISS LOUISE MAHON.

MRS. KATE MANN.

Miss Louise Mahon, 3 Glen Baillie Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Secretary of the King's Daughters and Secretary of Lady Maccabees, writes:—"If all women knew of the benefits to be derived from taking Peruna we would have many happier and more healthful women. My health has never been too robust, and I am easily fatigued and can not stand much. About a year ago I was so run down that I had to take to my bed, and became weaker and weaker. A friend advised me to try Peruna, and I have great reason to be grateful, for in two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was perfectly well, and I now find that my health is much more robust than formerly, so that I take Peruna once or twice a month and keep well." —Louise Mahon.

Peruna is such a perfect specific for each case that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permanently cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, the digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the weakening drains are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged. A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I have ever taken. I used it faithfully for two weeks, and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—Barbara Alberty.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 806 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Vice President of the Ladies Aid Society, writes:—"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use. I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could illy be spared. It was therefore a simple godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every drop seemed to give me new life, and every dose made me feel much better, and I promised myself that if I found that it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it. I have been in perfect health for one year. I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems too heavy to bear when you are in good health. Peruna has simply been a household blessing, and I never will be without it again."—Mrs. Kate Mann.

MRS. ANNA MARTIN.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic, and for colds and catarrh, and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

Mrs. Wm. Hetrick, Kennard, Washington county, Neb., writes:

"I am fifty-six years old and have not felt well since the Change of Life began ten years ago. I was in misery somewhere most of the time. My back was very weak, and my flesh so tender it hurt me to lean against the back of a chair. I had pain under my shoulder-blades, in the small of my back and hips. I sometimes wished myself out of this world. Had hot and cold spells, dizziness and trembling of the limbs, and was losing flesh all the time. After following your directions and taking Peruna I now feel like a different person."—Mrs. Wm. Hetrick.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Peruna can be purchased for $1 per bottle at all first-class drug stores.

LENTEN FISH STORY.

American Fisheries Valued at $60,000,000 a Year.

Few Persons, Expert Anglers Included, Can Tell the True Names of the Denizens of Lakes and Rivers.

[Special Washington Letter.]

FROM the depths of religious contemplation we must plunge into the depths of the waters of river and sea; because the penitential season of Lent would be wholly incomplete without fish, which is to be a necessary article of diet until the coming of Easter; when we may lay aside our religious cloaks for awhile, and enjoy "the vain pomp and glory of this wicked world" again.

Although we have not the congress on our hands at this time, the executive branch of the government is always with us, and society is all agog with its religious duties and the keeping up of appearances for the season. Somber gowns and more somber hats are worn, while the gay gewgaws which milliner and dressmaker are making are kept from view. We must keep up appearances, even with our grocer and green grocer. Therefore, we must have eggs and fish galore on our order books. And this is a good time to make a little study of pisciculture; to talk about fish, "that meager fare" of which the ballad makes the abbot complain.

This is to be a fishy tale; but all fish have tails. We are not going to pretend to be learned, and give marvelous stories of experiences with rod and reel—only one fish story. Jesse Sarvis was for 30 years a well-known newspaper man here, and he was also an angler. One morning as Jesse was lighting a cigar in the hotel lobby, the proprietor of the news stand told him about a big catch of fish at Cabin John's bridge, whereat Sarvis smiled and said: "I don't believe it. I don't believe any fish stories. I wouldn't believe a fish story if a preacher were to tell it."

Standing near by, also lighting a cigar, was a giant, and a fine-looking one, too. He asked Sarvis if he had understood him aright, when he stated that he wouldn't believe a preacher, if he were to tell a fish story. Sarvis emphatically repeated his remark, and was surprised when the big man replied: "I don't blame you. I'm a preacher myself; and I've told some whoppers in my day."

"I'm not a church-goer," said Sarvis, "but I'd like to be a member of your congregation. I'd believe you in the pulpit."

You would scarcely believe it likely, without previous reflection, but it is true, that the last census showed a valuation of upwards of $60,000,000 in the fisheries of that year; and these figures only in part represent the catches for private and immediate consumption; the uncanned, unrefrigerated, unsalted. Few realize the enormous extent of the fish product in the food supply of this country.

For almost a score of years the federal government has been arduously laboring and patiently experimenting in fish culture. The fish commission has earned world-wide fame. And from it, and its examples, nearly every territory and state has created a similar commission. Canada has also established and maintains a fish commission of exceptional ability; and it now seems very sure that in a short time all of the North American continent will become the scene of extended scientific efforts toward stocking the waters, coast and inland, for the propagation and cultivation of all of the forms of aquatic life which may now be utilized for the food of human beings. There will be a great increase of the food supply, and there will also be a great reduction in prices to consumers. When each community can have its own fish supply at its own doors, there will be a cheaper and better article than is now obtainable, particularly by those who are obliged to pay for transportation, ice, and other expenses, as well as for the food supply itself.

"I'VE TOLD SOME WHOPPERS MYSELF."

One of the best state commissions is that of New York, which, in one year, distributed throughout that state upwards of 35,000,000 eggs and fry, and this does not take into calculation the efforts of numerous private persons who have cooperated with the state commission, nor the labor expended upon oyster culture in the same state at the same time.

The fish commission of New Jersey in one year stocked the Delaware river with 60,000 land-locked salmon, and liberated 1,665,000 shad, hatched in that river; also 250,000 California salmon, 200,000 brook trout and 100,000 whitefish. That is a busy commission, and an intelligent one. When the commission liberated 5,000 black bass there was a howl from hundreds who feared that the bass would destroy the young shad. But the commissioners have demonstrated that the bass has no special appetite for shad. On the contrary, the bass prefers several other kinds of young fish, and the liberation of the bass has proved to be highly beneficial in the lakes and ponds where distributed.

THE TRUTHFUL DEALER.

It is surprising how few people know the names of the various fish foods. The federal fish commission is doing a good educational work in teaching people the names of fishes; a task which has been found to be exceedingly difficult. Different names are often given to the same fish, in different localities. For example, take the catfish family, or siluridae. In Pennsylvania this fish is always called catfish, but in New York it is a bullhead, in Massachusetts, a horapout, in Connecticut, a bullprout, in Maine a bullplug, and in some parts of the west a sucker.

There is a popular saying that "a catfish has a forked tail, and a bullhead a square one," but Fred Mather, a most distinguished authority, shows that this saying is not borne out by the facts. There are more than 20 species of this fish family, and their tails vary from being square to deeply forked. They are all popularly called catfish, only experts and students being aware of the real distinguishing differences in the species. Moreover, they are all good for food, and palatable.

The trout served in the eastern restaurants is one species, and that of the English hotels another, while the trout set forth upon the tables of Alabama and Georgia does not belong to the same family, being what we in the north and northwest call black bass. The so-called shad of Lake Champlain is not the delicious fish caught in salt water or in the rivers which flow into the ocean. It is in reality the whitefish of the great lakes.

When you hear any person talking of carp, you may inform him that there are over 500 species of carp; and when the word "minnow" is used you may inform your benighted friends that upwards of 1,000 species of denizens of the deep are so named by the uninitiated. Of like vagueness are the terms chub, dace, roach, shiner, killies and sucker. Although these names are most used as convenient terms by boys and girls who know no better, they are too often employed in the same manner by anglers and men of considerable intelligence. For example, the term sucker is applied to at least 50 fresh water species and five salt water ones, which have nothing at all in common.

The familiar "frost fish" is a variety of the salmon in northern ponds and lakes. It is a very small sub-species of the cod family on the eastern sea coast. Then again, quite a number of names are given to small fishes because of the manner in which they are prepared for the table, regardless of their correct names. The "panfish" and the "butterfish" are so called because of their relationship to the use made of them by the cook and even they have different names in different localities, because all cooks are not agreed as to the best methods of serving them.

During this Lenten season we must have fish for breakfast, fish for dinner and fish for supper; and this also in accordance with our geographical environments. But we need not go to Izaak Walton, Thomas J. Nicholl, nor other piscatorial liars and philosophers, to increase our woeful collection of misinformation about our temporary dietition from the waters. The majority of us will depend upon the always reliable and truthful venders of fish in the market places, and, after it is all over, we will wonder what ever gave us indigestion.

The attack of The McIntosh Times, on Representative Bennett, condemning him for the passage of the grasshopper bill, will not meet withe the approvel of the larger portion of the farmers of this district.

We can not deny, that there is quite a large territory of land in this district, that has been damaged for a number of years by this pest, and the remedy; as preposed by Bennett's bill, (as The Times calls it) will be hearld by the farmers as a remedy for the distruction of their crops. Thare is one man liveing in this district who keeps a hatching bed for this pest, and any attempt to interfere with his bus iness will be vigorously resisted by The Times. We are willing to come before the people, in the next campaign, on the justice or injustice of this law, but would like to have The Times get a little more circulation and the republicans not have Montagne for CHAIRMAN, of the republican County committee.

BOARD OF TRADE DEALS.

Ninety Per Cent of Those in Chicago Are Purely Speculative.

Probably quite 90 per cent of all tha transactions on the board are pure speculation, consisting of trades made by persons who do not expect to receive or deliver a bushel of actual grain, explains Will Payne in "The Chicago Board of Trads" in Century. This speculative trading is not only the most prominent, but is the most useful, of the board's functions. Without it there could not possibly be the broad market which makes wheat a liquid asset averywhere in the United States. The speculative business means simply the perfection of a trade organization. You may buy a corner lot which in your opinion is likely to advance in value, pay for it, go to the savings bank, mortgage the lot and borrow on it the major part of ths purchase price, leaving invested of your own capital only enough margin to secure the lender against loss through fluctuation in value.

In a highly organized liquid market like that in grain and stocks all this lumber of mortgaging and borrowing is eliminated. You simply pay down ths margin. Virtually nobody would buy wheat for a rise if he had to go out and get the actual grain, inspect it, find a storehouse to put it in, see that it was properly iusured, guard against deterioration by sweating, etc., while it was in store and when ha wished to sell it look around for a customer who wished just so much wheat of just snch a sort. The board of trade does all this for him, the purchaser's part consisting only in giving an order to a broker and paying down the margin which will insure tha broker against loss through fluctustions in price. This is what makes the broad market that gives wheat its staple value.

The bosrd of trade is a court too. Its directors and various committees are continnally busy trying commercial cases and hearing and settling the disputes which arise in the transactions of an immense volume of business.

Without the Chicago hoard and the several lesser exchanges which copy its methods and follow its prices the grain trade of North America would fall to pieces and every bushel of cereals raised north of the Mexican line would have less value.

The Engagement Failed.

There is an amusing story in the Jewish World of London about the shadchan, or Jewish marriage broker, who recently waited on a young man to urge the attractions of a certain young woman. The shadchan was accompanied by a satellite, whose business it was to reecho his eulogies. The changes were rung on her beauty, family and wealth. "Well, so far you have described the young woman's good qualities," observed the prospective bridegroom. "Now let me hear if she has any defect." "Well," answered the shadchan, "candor impels me to admit that she has a hump." "And what a hump!" sang the echo. The engagement did not come off.

AN APPEAL TO HONOR.

It Did Not Fail With a Famous Hungarian Robber Chief.

Treat a man as if he were a gentleman and he will rarely disappoint you. In illustration of this truth Mr. Crosse, author of "Round Ahont the Carpathians," tells a good story of a robber chief in Hungary. Years ago the Carpathian mountains were infested with organized bands of robbers, and neither life nor property was safe. At this time a lady of great wealth, the Countess Z., who lived not far from the main highway between Budupest and Vienna, received a polite note ona morning informing her that twelve gentlemen would dine with her at midnight. She understood what it meant.

It was impossible to summon help, and well she knew that every approach to the castle would be guarded to prevent communication. In this dilemma she made ready for her uninvited guests.

At midnight up rode an armed band, twelve men in all. Immediately the gate of the outer court and the entrance door were thrown wide, as if for the most honored and welcome guests. The countess stood at the entrance to receive them, richly dressed. She bade the chief and his men a gracious welcome, gave orders that tbeir horses be cared for and then, taking the arm of her guest, led the way to the dining hall. Here a goodly feast was spread, and all the gold and silver plate of the castle was lavishly displayed.

The leader of the robher band started back in surprise; bnt, recovering his self possession, he seated himself beside his charming hostess, who engaged him in merry talk of the gay world at Vienna, with which they were both familiar. At length when the feast was nearly ended the chief took out his watch and said:

"Countess, the happiest moments of my life have always been the shortest. I have another engagement this night. Bad as I am, none ever appealed to my honer in vain. You have received me as a gentleman, and I shall take my departure as one. As for you, my men," he said, looking sternly round with hand on his pistol, "I charge you to take nothing from this house. He who disobeys me dies that instant."

The chief then asked for pen and paper and wrote some words upon a sheet, which he handed to his hostess. "This, madame, will serve to protect you in future. You have but to show it, and it will save you from any molestation or loss."

The name of the robber chief was afterward known. He was an impoverished cadet of one of the noblest families in Hungary. His fate was sad enough. He was captured a few months after the incident which has been related here and ended his life at the hands of the common hangman.

How Mountains Were Formed.

Geologists agree that many thousands of years ago—they do not agree on the number of thousands—great icefields, like immense glaciers, moved slowly out of the north over a large part of the United States and Europe. These glaciers were so thick that they have left on the top of the White mountains howlders which they had carried hundreds of milas, and they had much to do with shaping the hills and valleys of New York, Pennsylvania and New England. The marks made by these glaciers as they ground and crushed their way over the rocks are still plainly visible in many places, and it is easy to trace the large bowldars thay carried northward to regions where such stone occurs in large quantities.

Easily Explained.

So many quick retorts are ascribed to the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" that it sometimes seems as if the witty poet could scarcely have taken time to eat or slaep. Tha last reply is quoted by a man to whom it was made only a few months before the death of Dr. Holmes.

The talk between the two men had fallen on the subject of age.

"You're five years my junior," said Dr. Holmes, "but I believa I don't envy you."

"I can't sea why you should," said his friend. "You carry your years much more lightly than I do mine."

"That's natural," said the autocrat. "I'va had five years' more practice."

Had One Qualification.

An Irishman who, much to his wife's sorrow, had got into the company of men who managed cockfights determined to raise some game roosters for himself. So he got some prize eggs and put them under the old hen in the back yard.

In order to teach him a lesson and discourage his growing vice his wife removed the prize eggs from under the unsuspecting hen and put in their place some ducks' eggs.

Some weeks later the wife heard a commotion in the woodshed. She rushed out, and there stood Pat, watching with delight the first efforts of a newly hatched duck to waddle.

"Bridget, Bridget, will ye luk at the fut on him? Sure, a birrd twice his size couldn't thrip him!"

Lazy.

There was once a club of lazy men.

Fines were inflicted on those who ever forgot themselves so far as to do anything in haste.

One day several members saw an old doctor who was renowned for his laziness drive past the door of the club at a furious rate, and loudly they chuckled at the thought of fining him.

But on applying to him on the ground of his having been in such a hurry the doctor slowly replied:

"No, I wasn't in a hurry, but my mare wanted to go fast, and I was too lazy to stop her."

An Indoor Snowstorm.

Nature tells of an indoor snowstorm on a very clear, cold evening at a party given in Stockholm, Sweden. Many people were gathered in a single room, which became so warm as to be insufferable. The window sashes were found frozen, and a pane of glass was smashed out. A cold air current rushed in, and at the same instant flakes of snow were seen to fall to the floor in all parts of the room. The atmosphere was so saturated with moisture that the sudden fall in temperature produced a snowfall indoors.

Nerve of Wild Bill

How He Outwitted a Desperado Who Had the Drop on Him.

Daring Feat of Gun Play In a Border Saloon -- Four Against One--Courage Honored.

Perhaps no man is more familiar with the old days of the border than Colonel John S. Crawford, close friend of Wild Bill, Buffalo Bill and other famous scouts. Colonel Crawford is now a wealthy mine owner and railroad builder and lives in Grant City, Ore. Recently he related some of the dramatic events in his career as a scout:

One of the bravest and coolest men I ever knew was the famous Wild Bill, whose name in the family Bible is written William Haycock. It is not Hickock, as often seen spelled. I knew Wild Bill as well as I ever knew any one. We were together a great deal. He was a powerfully built man, his eye was like an eagle's, and he was absolutely fearless of danger while performing his duties as United States marshal in the days of the Kansas jayhawkers and later in dealing with the Indians and bad men on the frontier.

Wild Bill was daring to an extreme. He thought only of his duty, and he fulfilled it always. He was honest and tender hearted, and I have seen him give up his last five dollar bill to aid some poor immigrant who was starving. By this action he often changed places with the sufferers.

One time Wild Bill and myself were riding along the trail from Sidney to Deadwood through the buffalo swales. It was a terrible country, infested by a motley gang of cutthroats and all around bad men. We rode on until we came to a little dugout where a man named Reddy Kelly kept a saloon. It wasn't a pretentious place. The roof was supported by a post in the middle of the room. A simple rough plank served as a bar.

A bucket of water and one demijohn of whisky composed the entire stock in hand. Kelly himself was a picturesque character, a man of brawn. He wore a fiery red beard and a sleeveless red flannel shirt. We all knew him very well, and when Wild Bill and I rode up we tied our horses to a small fir tree outside and went in to get a drink.

I stepped in first and walked to the opposite side of the post supporting the roof. Wild Bill stepped up to the bar, leaned on his elbow and began talking to Reddy Kelly.

All of a sudden, as if he had leaped through the floor, a man jumped before Wild Bill without any warning. In each hand he held a revolver. He got Bill and myself in line, and neither of us dared move.

"Hold up your hands," the fellow shouted to Bill, with a string of oaths, which formed the dialect of the bad men of those days. "I am going to kill you, Bill."

Bill, without a move, quietly looked at the intruder and then said to him: "Why, my man, you do not want to kill me in cold blood. Have you thought about this matter? I don't know you nor your reason for wanting to get me out of the way."

WILD BILL TURNED LOOSE.

"Well," said the stranger, "I'm going to kill you because you've strung up too many of our fellows, and now it's your time, Bill."

The threat didn't feaze the cool headed marshal. He gazed steadfastly into the other man's face and then said: "That is too bad. I never thought of that before, but I suppose it is a necessary thing. And now you want to put me out of the way?"

"Yes, and I'm going to do it right," growled the stranger. The muzzles of both revolvers were not eighteen inches from Bill's face, but he never flinched. I dared not move or the fellow would have killed Bill before I could jump aside and shoot. I saw the muscles of Bill's back grow taut; the cords stood out in his neck, and his feet seemed to sink into the rough floor.

Bill gazed into the man's eye for a minute and then gave a terrible warwhoop, throwing the man's attention from his aim for an instant. He ducked his head a foot and, like a flash of lightning, whipped out two great revolvers. As they came up the bullets were flying, and every one of the twelve leaden pellets pierced the man's body, literally cutting him in two. When Bill gave his unearthly yell, the intruder fired one shot, but it went far above the mark. In a minute the smoke blew away, and the man lay dead on the floor. Bill turned to Reddy Kelly and said, "Remove this carrion, Red, and give us another drink."

We took another drink, walked to our horses and struck out along the trail to Deadwood. I never heard Bill say a word about the affray, and I said nothing. We were not in the habit of remembering such things.

Next to Wild Bill the bravest man and one of the most desperate I ever saw was an out and out brigand. His name was Jack Burke, and he was the boldest man in the notorious Billy the Kid's gang of desperadoes.

EACH MAN HELD A GUN.

I first ran across Burke in El Paso, Tex., after I had been for some time in Mexico. I knew the habits of the banditti. I had fought and rode among bad men throughout the frontier states, but I had never found a braver man than Burke. My meeting with him was extraordinary and not accompanied by the most comforting circumstances.

In El Paso I ran across an old friend, Red Hart. He told me he was going to open a new building that night and wanted me to help him by seeing that no desperadoes entered the place. I told him I would aid him, and I remained in the building until late.

There was a varied throng there, men of all classes and descriptions, most of them rough and ready fellows. About 2 o'clock in the morning, when all the early comers were gone, I walked down the back stairs, which terminated in an alley. At the bottom of the stairway was a hooded door, behind which burned a flickering, smoky oil lamp. The shadows wavered and rather blinded one.

When I reached the bottom of the stairs and opened the door into the alley, I was confronted by four men. Each man held a gun at my head and ordered me to throw up my hands and deliver what cash I had.

To me this was rather astonishing, for I have always been a peaceful man. I did not see my way clear to accede to the demand. I quietly and slowly pulled out my revolver—a beautiful barker that shot a ball as big as a walnut—and simply stated that I did not intend to be robbed. The largest of the four men, a handsome, broad shouldered, but desperate looking fellow, again ordered me to give up my money.

"You are four to one," I said—"four cowards to one man, and I am a brave man, understand that. You can kill me, I know, but I can shoot quicker than you, and before I go down I will send two of you to the happy hunting grounds. Turn loose if you want to, and I'll give you more than a fair show, but I'll get two of you."

The tall man lowered his revolver and stepped forward. "You don't kill a brave man like this fellow, boys," he said, "and I'm on his side. I fight with him."

I told him to get back with his gang, that I was not afraid of the four. The big fellow ordered the men to put up their weapons, saying: "It ain't a square deal to get a live one cooped up this way. The treats are on us, stranger, if you'll come around the corner."

I went, but told them they must pay for the treat and that nothing less than a five dollar goldpiece would square matters. They opened a bottle of champagne. We drank up, and then the four left. I never said a word to any one about the experience, but I found thereafter that every man in Billy the Kid's gang was my friend. I met them time and again in the Seven Rivers district, along the Rio Grande and all through No Man's land, and they never once stopped or offered to harm me. The big fellow was Jack Burke, and he was afterward killed by his own gang, although not until he had killed five of them after he had been mortally wounded.

Judging by Appearances.

"What is this?" asked the crusty boarder, poking at something in his dish, while he turned a glaring eye on the landlady.

"That, Mr. Sasseigh," explained the chatelaine of the feedery, "is one of the new predigested foods. I thought my boarders might appreciate the introduction of a novelty of some sort."

"Predigested, eh?" growled Mr. Sasseigh. "It looks prehistoric to me!"

Why Thunder Sours Milk.

You have often asked or been asked, "Why does thunder sour milk?" The answer is this: Milk is very susceptible to atmospheric changes. Electricity, the cause of thunder, produces, or if it does not really produce follows, great and rapid changes in the atmospheric conditions. Lightning is the discharge which comes of electrical inequalities, producing chemical changes in the air. Thunderstorms represent the greatest activity of electrical phenomena, and the best authorities give it as their opinion that the electricity in the atmosphere is the prime cause of milk souring during the prevalence of such storms.

Dead Men's Shoes.

It is not generally known that a special line of shoes is manufactured for the undertaking trade. In appearance they differ to only a slight extent from the shoes made for ordinary purposes, but there is no leather in the soles, and they are made entirely for show. They are sold to the trade in assorted sizes for prices varying slightly from $1.50, and they answer every purpose as well as those costing five times as much. It is said there is only one factory in the country in which they are manufactured, and, considering the amount of orders the firm receives all the year round, this is probably correct. It is well known that special lines are made for burial purposes in various articles of clothing, but it will be news to many that shoes with light pasteboard soles are made to go with them.—Exchange.

HIS "HONEY" HAD VANISHED.

The Waiter Didn't Understand Johnson's Inquiry, But He Thought He Did.

A young Philadelphian whom we may call Johnson, because that is not his name, was married several days ago, and it occurred to him that he would take his bride into an upstate town on their honeymoon, relates the Philadelphia Ledger. He was particularly desirous of visiting this town, as he told his bride, because at the hotel where he intended staying "they served such delicious honey at every meal." "That will be delightful," said Mrs. Johnson.

The couple arrived at the hotel in due course, and they were just in time for tea. Johnson escorted his bride proudly to a table in the dining room and then, after an admiring glance at her, looked quizzically round the board. There was no honey on the table and none in the room. Johnson was surprised and called a waiter. "See here," said he, "where's my honey?" The waiter seemed at a loss as to what to say, but finally leaned forward and in a stage whisper said: "She don't work here no mo'!"

An Adjustable Limit.

It was a Maine girl of whom the story is told that she refused to marry a most devoted lover until he had amassed a fortune of $10,000. After some expostulation he accepted the decree and went to work. About three months after this the vivacious young lady, meeting her lover, asked:

"Well, Charley, how are you getting along?"

"Oh, very well, indeed," Charley returned, cheerly. "I've saved $18."

The young lady blushed and looked down at the toes of her walking boots, and stabbed the inoffensive earth with the point of her parasol. "I guess," she said faintly, "I guess, Charley, that's about near enough."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

One Answer for All.

Lancaster, N. Y., Mar. 30th.—Postmaster Remers is still in receipt of many letters asking if his cure has been good.

It will be remembered that some time ago the particulars of Mr. Remers' case were published in these columns. He had been very low with Diabetes. Physicians could do nothing to save him and he grew worse and worse till some one recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills. A treatment of this remedy was begun and when eight boxes had been taken Mr. Remers began to see an improvement which continued as the treatment proceeded till he was completely restored.

He has since enjoyed perfect health and is as robust and able a man as any in Lancaster. Interviewed the other day he said:

"Many people wrote to me when the story of my case was first printed and some write to me yet asking if the cure was only temporary and if the diabetes has returned. I have only one answer to everybody. Three years ago I was very low with Diabetes. The best physicians failed to help me and Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. I am well and strong and have not had the slightest return of the old trouble."

Notice Too Good.

A Jasper county (Mo.) farmer paid a high tribute to the literary talents of a Carthage real estate agent the other day. He decided to sell his place and got a real estate agent to write the notice. When the agent read the notice to him he said: "Read that again." After the second reading he said: "I believe I'll not sell. I've been looking for a place of that kind all my life and didn't know I had it until you described it to me."—Milwaukee News.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, March 25.—Senator H. J. Gjartsen's bucket shop bill was killed by the house yesterday, and in its stead there was placed on general orders a bill the passage of which would legislate out of existence not only every bucket shop in the state, but the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce as well.

Senator Johnson's bill on the calendar, to regulate the suspension or cancellation of school teachers' certificates, was recommended to pass.

After fighting about it in and out of the committee, making it a special order for yesterday afternoon and indulging in many wise sayings anent the justice and equity of taxing all alike, the house by a vote of 73 to 34 passed the Haugland tax code bill yesterday afternoon. The Haugland bill incorporates nearly all of the suggestions unsuccessfully offered by the governor's tax revision commission at the special session.

The bill providing for a state board of charities and corrections was introduced by Senator Wilson at the afternoon session.

Of the bills introduced in the senate perhaps the most interesting was submitted by Senator Jepson. This authorizes the county commissioners of every county to set aside from the road and bridge fund of the county a sufficient sum of money for the purchase of road implements and machinery for building and repairing roads. COMMUNING WITH NATURE.

Laura Was Not Saddened by the Beautiful Scenery—It Was a Bug.

Close beside the sparkling brook, whose silvery waters danced merrily in the sunlight and rippled joyously over the golden sands, they sat in silence—George and Laura—drinking in the glorious beauty of the rustic scene and communing with nature in one of her chosen shrines. Afar off in the west the sun seemed to linger on the rim of the horizon as if unwilling to shut out from his gaze the lovely landscape that glowed with a softened and even melancholy radiance in his departing beams, says Woman's Home Companion.

A thrilling cry burst from the lips of the beautiful girl. "George! George!" she almost shrieked.

"What is it, darling?" he asked, placing his arm tenderly around her waist. "Has the romantic, yet oppressive, loveliness of the scenery saddened your spirit—"

"No, George!" she screamed, waving her hands wildly and making a frantic jab at the small of her back. "I think it's some kind of a bug!"

The Best Way to Teach History.

The idea of object teaching, the foundation of the Froebel system of instruction, has in recent years met with general acceptance and adoption in almost every branch of education, high and low, with resultant benefits which are beyond question. Even such subjects as grammar and arithmetic are now taught in this way so far as practicable, and with marked advantage over the old dry and abstract method. The practice of teaching history by making pilgrimages to the very scenes where great historical events have occurred is an application of the same principle and much more valuable in the way of impressing the reality of history upon the minds of the young than any amount of mere text-book instruction could be. A recent issue of the "Four-Track Series," published by the New York Central management, gives a description of the historical sites in the immediate vicinity of New York, which will be of exceeding value for the guidance of teachers and others who desire to adopt this method of historical study. One of the best ways to develop civic pride and promote good citizenship lies in this very direction, an increase of knowledge of local history being accompanied with an increase of interest in matters of local government and a higher concern for what affects the welfare and good name of the community.—From Leslie's Weekly.

"KIDNEY COLDS."

Nothing will "lay you up," "play you out," "put you to bed" quicker than a kidney cold. Thousands feel the first effect of colds in the kidneys. Backache, rheumatic pains, urinary disorders, retention of the urine, infrequent and too frequent urinary discharges tell of kidneys out of order.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills from common backache to dangerous diabetes.

A. T. Ritenour, owner of the wood yard at 125 East Cork Street, Winchester, Va., says: "Ever since I had La Grippe I have been a sufferer from kidney troubles, which made themselves apparent in racking pains through the region of the kidneys and across the small of my back. The pains were always severe, and sometimes so sharp and biting that they compelled me to take to my bed. The kidney secretions furnished further evidence of disorders. They were off color, irregular, and painful of passage. Added to this there was an annoying weakness. The newspaper advertisements of Doan's Kidney Pills attracted my attention, and I procured a box of that remedy at France Baker & Sons' drug store. The relief I experienced was magical. The pills lifted me from my bed of sickness, placed me on my feet, and made me a well man. I can work as well as ever. Doan's Kidney Pills, I believe, saved my life. They are a great remedy to stop kidney troubles resulting from colds."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Ritenour will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

Happy Homes

One of the essentials of the happy homes of to-day is a fund of information as to right living and the best methods of promoting health and happiness. With proper knowledge, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and are of not less value than the using of the most wholesome foods and the selecting of the best medicinal agents when needed. With the well-informed, medicinal agents are used only when nature needs assistance and while the importance of cleansing the system effectually, when bilious or constipated, has long been known, yet until within recent years it was necessary to resort to oils, salts, extracts of roots, barks and other cathartics which were found to be objectionable and to call for constantly increased quantities.

Then physicians having learned that the most excellent laxative and carminative principles were to be found in certain plants, principally in the leaves, the California Fig Syrup Co. discovered a method of obtaining such principles in their purest condition and of presenting them with pleasant and refreshing liquids in the form most acceptable to the system and the remedy became known as—Syrup of Figs—as figs were used, with the plants, in making it, because of their agreeable taste.

This excellent remedy is now rapidly coming into universal use as the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually without disturbing the natural functions and without unpleasant after effects and its use may be discontinued when it is no longer required.

All who would enjoy good health and its blessings should remember that it is the one remedy which physicians and parents well-informed approve and recommend and use and which they and their little ones alike enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all reliable druggists, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, in original packages only, having the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs—and the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

THE PRESIDENT.

He is Greeted by a Large and Enthusiastic Crowd in Minneapolis—Discusses the Tariff Question.

Minneapolis, April 6.—The biggest, most tremendous, most enthusiastic reception ever tendered any man in the Twin Cities was that to President Theodore Roosevelt Saturday. From the time the president arrived in St. Paul at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon till his departure from Minneapolis at 11 o'clock at night for the west, he was the recipient of a continual ovation, the streets through which he passed in both cities being a solid mass of people, and Armory hall, at the University of Minnesota, being crowded to its limited capacity.

The weather was ideal and temperate. Houses and residences all along the line of march were profusely decorated, and colored lights were burning at all down-town street corners.

The speech which was upon the tariff and reciprocity brought out much enthusiasm, the president treating extensively of the Cuban situation, declaring that we must have military control of Southern waters and saying that the United States is the most prosperous nation ever known.

Even thousands of persons marked the route of the private electric cars that brought the distinguished guest and party from St. Paul.

Perhaps 200,000 persons, altogether, saw him in the two cities, although his auditors were limited to the capacity of the armory in Minneapolis and legislative hall in St. Paul, the the space in front of the capitol building and about 1,500 students in university chapel.

DISHES FROM ABROAD

Europe and Asia Supply Us with Some Strange Foods.

Jews and Gentiles, Mohammedans and Confucians, Import Their National Dainties with Great Regularity.

[Special Washington Letter.]

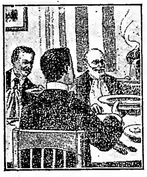
"FOR reading during the Lenten season your fish story was creditable," says Tom Cavanaugh, a veteran customs inspector. He added: "But you ought to tell your readers something about the multifarious foods which pass through the customs houses.

"You are probably not aware of the fact that upwards of 70 nationalities are represented in our composite citizenship. At some time every year each one of these nationalities will appear on the books of some port of entry, because of the desire of the immigrants for home dishes. There are hundreds of these dishes, and all of their names are unfamiliar to our people.

"The Irish cannot make many boasts concerning the excellence of their native gastronomy; and yet they import regularly pieces of bacon, genuine 'murphies' and Irish moss; a peculiar kind of dried seaweed which is gathered on the western coast of old Ireland. This is said to be especially wholesome for persons disposed to be dyspeptic. It is not very attractive in appearance, to Americans. It looks somewhat like the material used at our coast resorts for the preparation of clam bakes. When it is cooked, however, according to the notions of the old folks, it develops into a dark gelatinous mass which is very agreeable to the taste, and undoubtedly beneficial to the health.

"There is a seaweed very like the Irish importation which the Scandinavians import from Norway and Sweden; and they also import several kinds of bread, and a very small cabbage. There are three kinds of bread; one like German pumpernickel, one like unleavened bread, which the Jews call matzos, and another kind which seems to be betwixt and between the two. All of these breads are palatable, and extremely nutritious. They are usually toasted and served with milk, cream, butter or cheese.

"The amount of food which a Frenchman will import is limited in quality and quantity only by his financial limitations. The French have no religious belief more deep seated than their belief that their people alone have been blessed with an absolutely perfect understanding of what to eat, and how to prepare and serve it. They import everything that goes on their table, if they have money enough. They will even eat and declare that they enjoy chewing the toughest of leather, in the form of imported coxcombs. The animal tissue of the coxscomb is sometimes put up raw, but is usually half cooked, and then pickled or spiced. It is brilliant, but makes the molars of an American work overtime while acquiring the taste. But imported French blood pudding, darker, heavier than the German blutwurst, is the worst of them all. Made from the blood of beeves and horses, these puddings are so extremely disagreeable that very few Americans can acquire a taste for them. Blood pudding can be found on the tables of French restaurants and boarding houses in almost every city of this country, and it is usually the imported article."



A SECOND HELPING WANTED.

"Nearly everybody is familiar with the German food importations, and the American imitations of them. Upon many American tables it is customary to find sauerkraut, sausages, pickled herrings and soused mackerel. But, particularly in winter time, the German-born citizens import wild boars and hares, and a singular confection called matzapan, which is made of white sugar, cream and blanched almonds. They also import various kinds of bread and pastry, occasionally bringing in German cabbages and potatoes. Their cabbages are very small; little baby cabbages, indeed. But they are of finer fiber and more delicate flavor than ours. Their potatoes are very small and every way inferior to our product; and yet, a cabbage soup, enriched with those potatoes, will stick to the ribs, and make you send up your plate for a second helping; indeed, they expect you to call for a second dish of soup of their own importation and of their own making. If you are being entertained by a German-born friend who wants to give you a full fatherland meal you may expect goose breasts, which have been dried, smoked and pickled, and you don't dare turn up your nose at this delicacy, either. All of their various kinds of ham are delicious, and their mushrooms, grown in caverns along the Rhine, are almost fit for angels' food.

"Nobody will be glad to hear it," continued Mr. Cavanaugh, "but it is a fact that the villainous race recently driven off of this hemisphere by Schley and the other men behind the guns knows more about sausages than all the rest of us. They import long, thin, narrow sausages, smoked until they are almost as dry, black and hard as a piece of wood, and call them Vic. Catalan and Basque sausages. They are finer than any sausage that comes to this country, or than any other people on earth can make. And I guess I know something about good eatin' myself."

"IT MAKES ME FORGET LENT."

And he does. Big Tom Cavanaugh knows more about delicatessen than any other man in this ten-miles-square seat of government.

"These people who used to call us 'American hogs,' have good ideas of food," continued the veteran customs inspector. "They import guayada and guayabada, which are made from the guava fruit alone, or are mixed with other fruit and boiled down so hard as to justify the use of the Castilian knife and fork when served upon the table. They also bring in the red and green peppers which have been canned in 10 or 20 pound tin boxes.

"But it makes my mouth water to think of their preserves of cocoanut, pineapple, orange, banana and guava, made by boiling the fruit and then adding to it brandy or strong wine to keep it from fermenting; and their beef, air dried, which resembles so much the smoked meat of our own smokehouses, but which differs from it altogether in taste and tenderness; and to think of their Spanish sardines, smoked or dried, and their various forms of anchovies, the most pungent of all the finny tribes; and, say, it makes me forget Lent and all of my Catholic ancestors when I think of these good things which are imported from Spain by these mischievous devils whom we recently fired out of our hemisphere.

"The Japanese have a practical monopoly of the nests used in making soup. And a whole lot of our people have yet to learn that bird's-nest soup, prepared by an American chef, is the most delicious dish of its class in the world. From Japan come all of the armies of dried devil fish; also tree mushrooms and sea mushrooms, which are deliciously flavored too.

"The Chinese are deeply interested in American markets, for they send to us a long list of delicacies, such as crystallized limes, dates, figs, watermelon rind, preserved watermelon seed, dried chickens and ducks, which are cleaned and flattened out until they resemble hemlock shingles; tremendous sardines in oil, each fish a foot long, and the boxes each more than a cubic foot in dimension; salted cabbage, of which the leaves are an inch wide and three or four feet long; sugared flowers, laichee nuts, matais, sweet pumpkins, and all sorts of sweetmeats, made upon the plan of the Canton ginger, being the fruit, cleaned, prepared and boiled for hours in strained honey. In August and September they send us countless numbers of moon cakes, curious little pieces of pastry used in celebration of the harvest moon festival. They look like small pork pie, stuffed with quaint mixtures of almonds, raisins, watermelon seeds, lard, ginger, sugar, rice, flour and spices."

This customs house raconteur told a lot more about the imported things, making one's mouth water with hopeless greediness for goodies unobtainable. Some day, when all of us have plenty of sixteen-to-ones, we may buy these importations and fully realize all of the pleasures of intelligently conceived gluttony.

A wise man named Bennett who succeeded in getting elected to the legislature from Polk county has just discovered that the primary law "is a newspaper graft." Mr. Bennet is evidently a ward heeler who believes in the old fashioned method of controlling conventions through the medium of two or three self-constituted local bosses.

—Red Lake County Courier.

In the good old convention days, it was costomary to send representatives to the legislature and not pay any more attention to them until they returned home with the long handle of Hon. Mr.——to their name, but since the advent of the newspaper the gentelman are in the broad open light of the day. One of the smart alecks of the prsent legislature has introduced a bill to reduce the legal rate of official printing, and they would undoubtedly pass a law to prohibit the publication of newspapers if it was constitutional.

B.S. Bennett seems to be about the only representative who has made an attact on the newspapers of his district by calling them "grafters". What newspaper in this district has been working a graft on Bennett?. Speak up gentelman and tell us how you did it. We will pay $5.00 reward to any newspaper man that will tell us how or when he got any graft" of Bennett. On the other hand the newspapers have used him kindly and he has at last shown his gratitude.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philidelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up.

Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters: to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guarenteed at Krouschnabel & Bolstad.

Nothing Fixed.

Recently when a church steeple was in course of erection in a village in the west of Scotland one of the leading heritors had a conversation with the architect and pointed out the danger which he supposed might arise from the action of the wind upon the weathercock, the great size of which surprised him when he saw it on the ground. He thought it would be apt to disturb the stones upon the pinnacle of the steeple.

"Oh, there's no danger," said the architect. "You see, the weathercock turns round with the wind and never presents any great surface to it. There is nothing fixed but the cardinal points."

"Aweel," said the heritor, "could ye no' mak' the cardinal points turn round too?"

Moorish Revenge

Terrible Punishment Inflicted on the Caliph of Tangier.

How the Hill Men Resented an Insult to Their Tribe. Blinded With Red-hot Ramrods.

A strange story of outrage and revenge comes from Morocco. Caliph Abd'el Harach, lieutenant of the bashaw of Tangier, insulted the beautiful young wife of Hamed Aseej, son of the sheik of the Fahs' village of Ambrorbra, who had been imprisoned for the purpose of exacting ransom.

When the young wife returned to her husband after having paid the ransom, she told him of the evil that had befallen her.

"I do not know what we shall do, but I know that it is no wrong of yours," he said slowly. "I am afraid the law of the Koran will divorce us. I do not know. We will have to go back and tell the old men and hear what they shall say."

TORTURE OF THE CALIPH.

What the verdict of the old men was is not known. But when a month later the tax agents of the bashaw went to the Fahs' tribe village of Ambrorbra the old men refused to treat with them, telling the agents that by the acts of his caliph the bashaw had sacrificed all right to rule them. This announcement could of course have only one result. Two days later the bashaw of Tangier and Abd'el Harach rode side by side at the head of a company of soldiers to the village. The chiefs were summoned to the bashaw's tent. They told him that they had no quarrel with him, but so long as Abd'el Harach was his caliph they would withhold loyalty. They recited to the bashaw the shameful story of young Hamed's bride. But the governor's answer came angrily.

"What sort of dogs are you," he demanded, "to dictate to me whom my officers shall be? The caliph shall remain. There he sits now. He shall sit with me and watch you bring your tribute."

"If that is he," one of the old men said, "then he must depart from the village at once. He cannot stay here."

"He will not depart," said the bashaw, "and now you go back and return in three hours to tell me what your final word is."

Without further word they left the tent. An hour passed. Suddenly the reports of guns sounded, and bullets whistled past the bashaw's tent. The Fahs of the village were descending, white with anger. They fell upon the governor's tent. To him they did no harm. They merely thrust him forth among his fleeing soldiers. He ran with them to the houses, and they all rode at mad pace away—all but Caliph Abd'el Harach.

When he would have fled with the governor, he was seized, and sturdy hill men wrenched his arms behind his back, pinioning them there. For awhile other of the hill men stood upon the knolls, waving a laughing farewell at the governor and his men riding back to Tangier at breakneck speed. And for awhile the caliph was left unbound, lying on his back, in the bashaw's tent.

Then the tent was torn from over his head. Men came running, bearing water skins. Gallons of icy well water drenched the lieutenant governor of the province. Then his costly official cloak and turban and his undergarments were stripped from him, his gold mounted rifle bent, his wrought brass handled dagger broken. His official cloak and turban were torn to rags and the rags flouted mockingly in his face.

A barber was brought, the caliph's head was held, his face lathered and his venerable beard roughly shorn from his face. To a Mohammedan this shaving away of one's beard is one of the deepest of degradations. It is done usually only to thieves and murderers.

Women's garments were thrust upon the man's body, and women were brought and made to dance around him, crying derision and pointing their fingers at his shaved chin. Twilight had come on the rough, heather grown hillsides. But it caused no halt of the men who were fetching stones, which they piled on the spot where the bashaw's tent had been. On the stones they threw masses of brushwood, and this was fired. It blazed luridly for an hour in the gloom.

When the fire had gone down, the embers were brushed away. The thongs were taken off the caliph's limbs. He was brought forward. They flung him on the burning hot stones. He scrambled to his feet. Frantically he ran over the fiery floor and sought to break through the circle of men around the pile of stones. They hurled him back. There, with the mob jeering and the fiery stones stinging his feet, he could do naught else but dance, a dance of agony to the harsh music of mocking cries. Not until the stones had ceased to be burning hot did the frightful torture dance of the caliph end.

Meanwhile two men had made a charcoal fire close to the scene. In it they heated until red hot three ramrods. Then as the caliph lay moaning on the ground they blinded him. They did more. They touched with the red-hot brands the muscles and ligaments in his back and legs until they shriveled. The weird, tortured creature begged for a little water. Laughter answered the request. And, worse, they stuffed his mouth with dry dust. He became unconscious.

His horse, that stood bewildered without its master at the fleeing of the bashaw, had been captured. On it the unconscious, blinded, crippled lieutenant governor was tied. A whip fell on the horse's flank, and he galloped away toward Tangier.

In the night the white horse stood before the startled soldiers at the city's gates. Beside its neck hung the limp, helpless head and on its back the sprawled, crippled form in woman's garments of the little loved but greatly feared Abd'el Harach, caliph of Tangier.

WOMAN RIDES A WILD ELK.

Exciting Dash on Back of Frenzied Animal, Clinging to Its Antlers.

Miss Emma Kellogg of Routt county, Colo., had a most thrilling adventure a few days ago. While in the hills one day she came suddenly on an angry bull elk. She had leaned her gun against a tree, and before she could get it the elk was upon her.

She took refuge in a sapling and tried to hold the animal's antlers around it, but her strength was not sufficient, and the elk broke away. Miss Kellogg took advantage of a moment's respite to climb a tree and sat on the first limb. This angered the elk more than ever, and he gave the tree such a bump that Miss Kellogg fell off.

She would have been stamped to death by the animal's sharp hoofs had it not been that luckily she fell on the elk's back. Then, with great presence of mind, she grasped the antlers and held on for dear life.

The elk was not expecting a development of this kind, and it tore through the woods terror stricken, endeavoring to shake off its burden. Miss Kellogg, however, did not propose to be shaken, and she only clung the tighter.

Away they went, the crazed animal dashing through the trees with the velocity of an express train. Up hills and across valleys the animal sped, jumping over the rocks with tremendous leaps that almost unseated the frightened rider.

THE WOMAN GRASPED THE ANTLERS.

Miss Kellogg was becoming weak from the terrible strain and felt that she must soon release her hold when an unexpected incident proved her deliverance. The elk had made violent efforts to dislodge the girl and it was one of the animal's tricks to accomplish this which saved Miss Kellogg's life.

The elk darted through some thick brush where overhanging branches came low down in order to brush the rider off. But the terrified animal miscalculated about its antlers and got caught in the branches. It struggled, but could not get loose, and it was but the work of a moment for the intrepid mountain girl to kill the captive animal by cutting its throat with her hunting knife.

The Right Way to Boil Water.

"To boil water would seem to be a very simple thing," writes some one in the Boston Cooking School Magazine, "and yet the late Charles Delmonico used to say that very few people know how to do it. 'The secret is,' he said, 'in putting good fresh water into a kettle already quite warm, setting the water to boiling quickly and then taking it right off for use in tea, coffee or other drinks before it is spoiled. To let it steam and simmer and evaporate until the good water is in the atmosphere and only the lime and iron and dregs left in the kettle is what makes a great many people sick, and it is worse than no water at all.' For water boiled like this and flavored with a few drops of lemon juice Mr. Delmonico used to charge as much as for his best liquors, and he often recommended it to his customers and friends who complained of loss of appetite. It is worth trying."

The Boys.

'Twas thus a shrewd old farmer spake the other day the while he combed from beard and hair the seedlets of the hay:

"Our Freddie is a business man an' makin' piles in soap. Ezekiel is a doctor an' feeds the people dope. Our Mary Ann is pretty an' full of education. She's bagged a dude from town who's rich as all creation.

"Hennery's a preacher an' runs a gospel shop. Pete's a politician a-climbin' to the top. Willum is industrious—he stays with me an' marm—an' me an' him an' her get a livin' from the farm.

"But Tom! It really seems Tom never had no sense. He couldn't take a hammer an' pound nails into a fence. But marm she's not despairin', or if she is she don't show it. Says she: 'You leave that Tom alone. He's fixin' to be a poet!'"—Atlanta News.

THE IMPRESSIONS OF A WOMAN

What a Woman Says About Western Canada.

Although many men have written to this paper regarding the prospects of Western Canada, and its great possibilities, it may not be uninteresting to give the experience of a woman settler, written to Mr. M. V. McInnes, the agent of the Government at Detroit, Mich. If the reader wishes to get further information regarding Western Canada it may be obtained by writing any of the agents of the Government whose name is attached to the advertisement appearing elsewhere in this paper.

The following is the letter referred to:

Hilldown, Alberta, Feb'y. 5, 1903.

Dear Sir:

I have been here now nearly five years, and thought I would write you a woman's impression of Western Canada—in Alberta. There are several ranchers in this district who, in addition to taking care of their cattle, carry on farming as well. Their herds of cattle number from 100 to 200 or 300 heads, and live out all winter without any shelter than the poplar bluffs and they come in in the spring in good order. Most of the ranchers feed their cattle part of the time, about this time of the year, but I have seen the finest fat cattle I ever saw that never got a peck of grain—only fattened on the grass. You see I have learned to talk farm since I came here—farming is the great business here. I know several in this district who never worked a day on the farm, till they came here, and have done well and are getting well off.

I think this will be the garden of the Northwest some day, and that day not very far distant. There has been a great change since we came here, and there will be a greater change in the next five years. The winters are all anyone could wish for. We have very little snow, and the climate is fine and healthy. Last summer was wet, but not to an extent to damage crops, which were a large average yield, and the hay was immense—and farmers wore a broad smile accordingly.

We have good schools, the Government pays 70 per cent. of the expense of education, which is a great boon in a new country. Of course, churches of different denominations follow the settlements. Summer picnics and winter concerts are all well attended, and as much, or more, enjoyed as in the East. Who would not prefer the pure air of this climate with its broad acres of fine farms, its rippling streams, its beautiful lakes, its millions of wild flowers, its groves of wild fruit of exquisite flavor, its streams and lakes teeming with fish and its prairies and bluffs with game, to the crowded and stiff state of society in the East. I would like to go home for a visit sometime, but not to go there to live, even if presented with the best farm in Michigan. Beautiful Alberta, I will never leave it. And my verdict is only a repetition of all who have settled in this country. This year, I believe, will add many thousands to our population. And if the young men, and old men also, knew how easy they could make a home free of all incumbrance in this country, thousands more would have settled here. I would sooner have 160 acres here than any farm where I came from in Michigan; but the people in the East are coming to a knowledge of this country, and as they do, they will come West in thousands. All winter, people have been arriving in Alberta, and I suppose in other parts as well, which is unusual, so we expect a great rush when the weather gets warmer.

We have no coal famine here; coal can be bought in the towns for $2 to $3, according to distance from the mines, and many haul their own coal from the mines—getting it there for 50 cents to a dollar a ton.

Very truly yours.

(Signed) Mrs. John McLachlan.

CHILD INSTINCTS.

Are More Often Responsible for Likes and Dislikes Than the Reasoning Faculty.

Many ways of infancy and childhood seem to adults unnatural; and if children chance, as they frequently do, to exhibit tendencies animal rather that esthetic, we are apt to consider them such as to be properly frowned upon. Yet it might often contribute to one's equinimity if it were born in mind that child instinct, more frequently than reason, is in the right, says Youth's Companion.

For example, the lusty fit of crying incident to the baby's bath, although it may prove annoying to the mother, is one of the best possible tonics for the infant. The vigorous respirations and increased activity of the muscular tissues conduce even more than the friction of the bath-towel to a healthful glow of the skin. The infant that is obstreperous enough to resent with loud crying its nurse's efforts to soothe it, until it is again in its flannels, is not likely to take cold from its bath.

Again, in the matter of eating, the child sometimes exhibits singular tendencies. From the time a child begins to come to the table until the period of youth he often shows strong likes and dislikes. Just how much such tendencies may be combatted is perhaps of little moment, but in the quantity of food desired, each child should be a law unto himself. To bribe or coax a child to eat more than he wants is certainly not commendable. Many who as children are extremely "delicate" in their eating, develop in later life digestive organs of superior ability. Overfeeding is never so fraught with dangers as in childhood, and in those numerous cases in which the child instinct opposes the eating of as much food as is ordinarily regarded as normal, it should be respected. In the event of a small appetite being the evidence of impaired vitality or disease, other concurrent symptoms will be so evident as to lead to consultation of a physician. Glowing cheeks and sturdy limbs are admirable and a delight to fond parents, but to many children they are simply not natural, and no amount of food can produce them.

In many children nature exhibits a conservative tendency, and the scrawny limbs and sallow cheeks may be an indication of conserved energy by virtue of which some organ or organs may not be overtaxed during the growing age.

The diseases of childhood often result in temporarily damaged organs, which time and a following of the instincts of preservation which nature meanwhile imposes may entirely overcome. Thus it is that many children, regarded throughout childhood as delicate and not likely to survive till adult life, not only reach manhood and womanhood, but attain qualities of extraordinary physical or mental vigor.

It is well to realize that very rarely are there two children, even in the same family, similar in their physical equipments, and that therefore no "rule of thumb" method of rearing them is ever eminently successful.

LUNCHEON SUGGESTIONS.

For the Woman of Limited Means Who Has an Eye to Attractiveness and Economy.

The woman who has unlimited means and servants at her disposal is not apt to look upon a luncheon for six in the light of an undertaking. She merely gives her orders and calmly awaits the arrival of her guests.

These suggestions apply to the woman who has limited resources and who is consequently on the qui vive for new ideas in decoration and serving, says American Queen.

It is well to remember that it is bad form, as well as an unnecessary expense, to overload the table, either with service or food.

If you are fortunate enough to possess a handsome table, do not use a cloth, an embroidered center piece and little doilies taking its place.

One point in favor of a cloth is that it is more easily decorated than a bare table. It takes but the simplest vine or flower to make a plain white cloth artistic and beautiful.

Ribbon and roses form an attractive and artistic decoration.

Nothing is prettier than a center piece of smilax and violets, or a long-stemmed American Beauty rose at each plate.

As for the viands, almost any woman can prepare the following simple, informal lunch: Cream of celery soup, saltines, lettuce salad, fried oysters, scalloped potatoes, bread and butter, coffee and banana pudding.

The assistance of one maid is sufficient to serve such a luncheon, and the expense is very moderate.

The Wise Mother.

Do not compel your child to eat what he does not like. Anything that causes the stomach to revolt prevents the assimilation of food, hence indigestion is the result. If the article of diet is nutritious and you think it good for him have him take a very little at a time, thus cultivating a taste for it. To compel him to eat more would not only produce bad effects, but would also confirm his distaste for it, besides being a form of refined cruelty. Should you like to be compelled to take a dose of bitter medicine with your dinner? It is not likely.—American Queen.

Tomato Fritters.

For tomato fritters stew a quart tin of the vegetable, or a quart of fresh ones, until they are reduced one-half. Set aside to get cold, then season with salt, pepper and celery salt. Add the beaten yolk of an egg and sufficient fine breadcrumbs to make a mixture thick enough to hold together when dropped from a spoon into smoking hot lard.—Boston Budget.

HOW A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN ESCAPED SPRING CATARRH BY USE OF PE-RU-NA.

Nothing Robs One of Strength Like Spring Catarrh—Spring Fever is Spring Catarrh.

MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Miss Helen Whitman, 308½ Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it." MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Have you got nerves? Well, you ought to have nerves. But they ought to be strong nerves, good nerves. Does your hand tremble? You are living too fast. Does your heart flutter at times? You had better call a halt. Americans live too fast. They crowd too much into a single day. They have too little leisure. The hospitals and insane asylums are filling up. The quiet, pastoral scenes of yore are becoming rare. It's time that we quit this sort of business.

How to Get Strong Nerves.

First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary of Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass. She said in a recent letter: "I suffered for over a year with general weakness and debility manifested in severe headache and backache. I took four bottles of Peruna, and for two months have been entirely free from these maladies."

Nervous Prostration.

Thousands of cases might be quoted in which Peruna has been used to rescue people from the perdition of deranged nerves, and put them on the good, solid foundation of health. The County Auditor of Erie county, New York, Hon. John W. Neff, in a recent letter written at Buffalo, New York, stated: "I was persuaded by a friend to try a bottle of your great nerve tonic, Peruna, and the results were so gratifying that I am more than pleased to recommend it."

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Catarrh In Spring.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says:

Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

"For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorders until it seemed that there was nothing to me but a bundle of nerves. I was very irritable, could not sleep, rest or compose myself, and was certainly unfit to take care of a household. I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and to-day I consider myself in perfect health and strength. My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health."—Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Northern Securities Company Receives a Hard Blow.

United States Circuit Court at St. Paul Declines to Allow Merger of Northwestern Railroads to Stand.

St. Paul, Minn., April 10.—The position of the United States government in the suit brought against the Northern Securities company, the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railways and individual officials and directors of those companies, was sustained in the decision handed down in the United States circuit court of appeals in this city Thursday. The case was originally brought in the United States district court here, but under a special act of congress was taken at once to the court of appeals, which court was to expedite the hearing and decision of the case in every manner possible. The taking of testimony in this city and in New York lasted for several weeks and the arguments in St. Louis before Circuit Judges Caldwell, Sanborn, Thayer and Vandevanter took several days. The decision of the court was written by Judge Thayer and was filed in this city, where the original action was instituted. An appeal to the United States supreme court will be taken immediately. All four judges concurred in the conclusion of the court, which were stated by Circuit Judge Thayer. The substance of the decision is stated in the decree as follows:

The Decree.

"A decree in favor of the United States will accordingly be entered to the following effect: Adjudging that the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies, now held by the Securities company, was acquired in virtue of a combination among the defendants; in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states, such as the anti-trust act denounces as illegal; enjoining the Securities company from acquiring or attempting to acquire further stock of either of said companies; also enjoining it from voting such stock at any meeting of the stockholders of either of said railroad companies or exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction or supervision or influence over the acts of said companies or either of them, by virtue of its holding such stock; enjoining the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies respectively, their officers, directors and agents, from permitting such stock to be voted by the Northern Securities company or any of its agents or attorneys on its behalf at any corporate election for directors or officers of either of said companies and likewise enjoining them from paying any dividends to the Securities company on account of said stock or permitting or suffering the Securities company to exercise any control whatsoever over the corporate acts of said companies or to direct the policy of either; and, finally, permitting the Securities company to return and transfer to the stockholders of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies any and all shares of stock of those companies which it may have received from such stockholders in exchange for its own stock, or to make such transfer and assignment to such person or persons as are the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange for the stock of said companies."

A formal decree was later filed in accordance with the decision as handed down by Judge Thayer.

The defendants are the Northern Securities company, the Northern Pacific Railway company, the Great Northern Railway company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker and Daniel Lamont.

Will Be Appealed.

New York, April 10.—The case of the Northern Securities will be appealed.

President Hill made this statement later in the day: "I am not satisfied with the reports thus far at hand. They are too meagre to give us a definite idea as to how the decision was reached. All I can say at this time is that the roads of the Northern Securities company are showing good earnings, the properties are paid for and they cannot be taken away. The decision, as I understand it, does not disturb the ownership of the properties."

Deed of a Jealous Woman.

Henny, who is employed at a local saloon, went to work after eating luncheon. He soon became ill and his life was saved only by prompt work of physicians. Miss Guinan admitted before death that she had put poison in Henny's tea and then taken a large dose of the poison herself, and stated that jealously was the cause for her action.

Material for the new sewer system is on the ground at Slayton and work will begin at once. The village council has given a franchise to B. I. Weld to put in a gas plant for public and private lighting.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Washed His Money.

A. A. Appleby, put $140 under his pillow in a Minneapolis hotel. The next morning the Butte man overslept his call, rose in a hurry, and after dressing, rushed down stairs with no thought of the money. It was afternoon when he discovered his loss, and he at once told George Wertz, day clerk at the Vendome. Mr. Wertz instituted a search for the money, but it was nowhere to be found.

Late the next afternoon, a telephone message came from the Dispatch laundry, to the effect that a package of what might once have been $10 and $5 bills had been found in a bundle of linen from the hotel. The money had passed clear through the laundry, until it came to the ironing machine, when it was discovered by the boy in charge. Every vestige of color had been washed from the bills, only the figures of the number and denomination remaining.

The linen had been handled at least three times in the hotel, and six or eight times in the laundry, without disclosing its hidden treasure. The Butte man believes he is a lucky man, after all.

The New Capitol.

An addition of three months to the working time on the new capitol was made in an opinion from the attorney general, allowing the state capitol commission to reconsider the bids for the woodwork received last December. When the bids were received last December the lowest was made by the Butler-Ryan company. The firm's bid of $111,703 was in excess of the estimate and was rejected by the commission.

The additional appropriation of $1,500,000 made it possible to take up the work again. The commissioners thought they should advertise for new bids for the work, which would set the work back at least three months. The opinion received stated that the commission may accept the old bid.

The price of material has increased at least 10 per cent since the bids were received, but the Butler-Ryan company accepted the contract and will begin work on the interior at once. The interior stone and marble work, for which bids were received last December, was awarded to the Butler-Ryan company for $782,000.

The First Fair.

There is a common belief among the old settlers of Minnesota that Col. W. S. King, who died two years ago in Minneapolis, started the first fair ever held in Minnesota. This is a mistake, although there is probably no man who has been more closely identified with the great fairs held in this state during the past fifty years.

The first fair, of which there is any record, since Minnesota became settled was held at Minneapolis, Oct. 6, 1854, by the Hennepin County Agricultural society. It was but a primitive affair only occupying one block of ground. Minneapolis was but a village then and St. Paul helped out as it was intended to hold the fair for the purpose of showing off to Eastern visitors the adaptibility of Minnesota soil for raising food stuffs. About $400 in prizes was offered and paid, notwithstanding the fact that money was almost a curiosity at that time.

Cows and Creameries.

State Dairy Commissioner McConnell has issued his biennial report. At the close of the year 1902 there were 800,000 cows in Minnesota of which number 382,356 contribute milk to the creameries, the product of which places over $14,000,000 in circulation annually. There are 800 creameries and cheese factories in the state, and their output is 20 per cent larger than in any previous period of the state's history. In 1900 the value of creamery butter was less than $10,000,000, as against $14,000,000 in 1902. These creameries ship 50,000,000 pounds a year out of the state.

Pool-Selling Defeated.

The attempt to repeal the anti-pool-selling law of 1894 and compel the lease of the Minnesota state fair grounds to an association having the purpose of establishing running meets with the pool-selling feature, failed utterly. When the bill was reported to the house recently it was recommended for indefinite postponement. This recommendation was accepted by the house without a dissenting voice. There was such general objection to the bill that it was not even brought to a vote.

A Boy's Antics.

James Hamilton, the 16-year-old grandson of J. M. Broome, formerly editor of the Beobachter at Mankato, created consternation at the latter's home by shooting five holes through the house. When arrested he gave as a reason for his act that he "wanted to see the old man jump." No one was harmed, and Hamilton got off with a light fine. He is a member of the senior class of the high school and very proficient in his studies.

When you have any spare time talk railroad, and if you get no relief, talk removel of county seat.

The legislature ajourns next week, and the professional lobbist will be out of a job for nerely two years.

The Mentor Herald Vol.1 No.1 reached our X table this week. It is a bright newsy sheet and is a credit to the Village of Mentor.

What good reason have some of our preasant members of the legislature got to give their constituents for returning them two years hence. The farmers of Simons district will not wade out of the swamps to send him to St.Paul to pass sugar beet bounty bills.

The new wolf bounty law, as approved by the legislature is somewhat of an improvement on the preasant law as it provides for a bounty $7.50 to be paid by the state on all full grown wolfs and $1.00 per head for cubs, and gives the County Commissioners the power to increase this amount. Now if they appropriate the money to pay the hunter after he has hunted the wolf the law will be good enough for the preasant.

Editor Foss, of The Thirteen Towns is tickling himself because a bill has passed the legislature, provideing for an even vote for the removal of a County seat, instead 55 per cent as under the old law, which will be sure to bring on a County seat fight in this County.

Foss is O.K. He is first in war and first in peace, and was the first man that the Columbia co. Commissioners went after to let the printing to, (at the highest price,) after he had fought them as hard as he could in the campaign. Surely he must have a winning smile.

Senator Stephens has made a legislative record that is a credit to his district and his constituents. We do not hesitatet to condemn mistakes, carelessness, and inability, of a member of the legislature, but would prefer to give praise and credit, where it is due and Mr.Stephens is certainly entitled to his share of the latter for the able manner, in which he has represented this district in the legislature the past winter, and we have not had cause to regret that he recieved our support for the position.

The County division war will be settled this week and the majority of Polk county residents will draw a breath of relief. It has been a bone of contention in the legislature all winter which hindered and interrupted legislation that should have been passed. Representative Benifett has put in a large portion of his time in drafting and springing bills to affect the organization of new Coutys, and the location of the County seats thereof. He has not taken time to consider that he was sent to the legislature to represent this district and not a few politicians, that are booming county seat property.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philidelphia, as fllows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up.

Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guarenteed at Kronschnabel & Bolstad.

Mirth, Not Misery, Loves Company.

I have always doubted the proposition that "misery loves company" and have believed that such a statement was first put forth by some arch hypocrite whose misery was but a pretense and who was beckoning some other sham sufferer into a quiet corner where they could both be jovial on the sly.

However slight my knowledge of universal misery may be, I can attest from personal experience that my own misery claims solitude and slips away all by itself and turns the key upon the curious world, asking nothing so much as to be "let alone." I do not care to weep in company, nor would it cheer me to have a chorus of other weepers to sob in unison with me. Rather would I remain in unmolested wretchedness until my tears had vanished and my eyes and nose assumed normal appearance.

'Tis mirth then, and not misery, which pines for company. Fun cannot thrive alone and flourishes only among congenial spirits. Our laughter must be shared, our smiles responded to, and every glance of merriment needs recognition to make it worth the while.—Caroline Ticknor in Atlantic.

A Visitor

In the morning of a sultry July day Professor Botkine of the University of California was sitting on his front steps at Berkelay.

Ha was delightedly watching the efforts of his pat toad to capture a very large angleworm, and his enjoyment was enhanced by the fact that his beautiful German wife, who usually declined to interest herself in anything which she even suspected of a connection with science, was seated beside him, giving eager little pressures to his hand and uttering a pleased exclamation in her pretty foreign accent whenever the toad made an extra effort.

The worm gava a little wriggle as it began to come out of the ground; when, quick as a flash, the toad mada a leap and seized the end of the worm in its mouth.

Then began the tug of war. But the toad was not to be discouraged. It jerked and jerked until it fairly stood on its hind legs. Still it could not dislodge the worm.

At this interesting point a train whistled.

"Why, Selma," said the professor, "there is the train already! I had quite forgotten that I must go to tha city today. Where is my hat?"

"Do wait an instant, dear. Just see what that toad is doing!" she answered, holding him back.

He glanced down and saw the toad twisting its legs about until the worm was wrapped twice around it. Then the toad gave a hop, and out came the worm. This had been too fascinating a spectacle for the unwary professor. He dashed into the house and back again, kissed his wife and, with a regretful glance at her rippling hair and soft blue eyes, started off.

Suddenly he rushed back.

"Why, dear," he cried, "I forgot to tell you that Mr. Smith, the Canadian who wrote the paper on bacteria, will be here this afternoon to stay a day or two. He may come before I am back."

She clasped her hands in mock despair.

"Oh, don't be alarmed! Just let him have a good soaking in a bathtub. Then he will come out perfectly human and happy. He's an Englishman, you know."

She grew sober as she thought how ruthlessly science and scientists seemed to dog her unwilling footsteps. Her husband certainly loved her, but he had a way of becoming utterly absorbed in his studies and then bursting into her reflections with remarks which sounded perfectly ghoulish.

Now here was this Canadian coming! And how was she to be properly interested in his old bacteria and not disgrace her husband by betraying her ignorance on the subject? she asked herself.

Manifestly he must take a bath, and everything possible must be done to make the bathroom attractive, so that ha would stay there as long as possible. She went upstairs, and her own dimpled hands got down a new cake of perfumed soap.

She eyed it critically. Perhaps his severe scientific mind would be disgusted with such effeminate luxury.

She would place beside it a cake of white castile. Then, whatever his tastes, he must be pleased.

She put the alcohol and a cologne bottle within easy reach, got out smooth and rough towels and a bath blanket, saw that the shower bath worked and, with a sigh of relief, went downstairs to impress the cook that during the entire afternoon there must be plenty of hot water in the boiler.

Suddenly a happy thought struck her. She went into her husband's study and brought out every book on bacteriology that she could find. These she ranged on a shelf at the foot of the bathtub. Standing out a little beyond the others, as if but just shoved in, was Mr. Smith's own pamphlet on bacteria.

Mrs. Botkine pinned on the wall some colored illustrations of various forms of bacteria and then surveyed the effect with the calm satisfaction of a general who foresees the success of his maneuvers.

She had done all she could. With this virtuous feeling she was abla to go about her occupations for the day and in the afternoon even banished the thought of her expected guest enough to take a quiet nap.

She was awakened by a knock at her door, and the maid handed her a card bearing the seemingly innocent inscription, "Mr. Worthington Smith."

Sha lingered outside the drawing room as long as she dared and then, putting her trust in the bathroom, walked in and greeted her visitor with a smile of timid welcome.

He did not look at all alarming. She was surprised to see that he was young, darkly handsome and dressed with more regard to fashion than the scientific mind generally deigns to bestow.

After the first polite commonplaces Mr. Smith smilingly observed, "Professor Botkine's recent researches have been of such interest to scientific men that they must lay him open to a great deal of persecution from inquiring admirers; but"—

"Oh, not at all," she answered rather incoherently, "or, rather, I should say he likes to be persecuted—that is (with some confusion), he will be delighted to find you here when he returns. He was so sorry that he had to go to town for a few hours. In the meantime I hope that you will let me look after you."

"Thank you very much. Perhaps you would be so kind as to explain to me a few things I should like to know about Professor Botkine's theories on bacteria."

He was surprised to see a deep flush and a look of distress come over her face.

Here he was plunging into science the very first thing and turning shy besides. Oh, she must send him off to that bath! It seemed rather awkward, but she nerved herself to the effort.

"No, Mr. Smith," she said gayly, "I am sure that I could not tell you anything on the subject, and I cannot think of leaving you here alone. You must let ma make you comfortable. I know that after your journey you would like a bath."

He looked amazed and then embarrassed.

"Thank you very much, Mrs. Botkine," he stammered, "but I do not care at all for a bath. I shall do very well here, and"—

"No, no!" she said nervously. "I know that you are only afraid that there is no hot water on such a warm day, and you do not wish to give trouble. Not a word, if you please, Mr. Smith. You will really annoy me if you refuse."

She thought to herself that he little knew how more than annoyed she was at the thought of his possible questions.

As he followed James, Mr. Smith remarked to himself that before this experience he would have vowed that she was too pretty to be eccentric. He had no wish to bathe, but, fearing to vex her, meekly proceeded to perform his ablutions.

She was so elated that she went to the piano and sang for half an hour.

She was startled by hearing some one come rushing into the room behind her. She wheeled on the stool and encountered the gaze of Mr. Smith, who stood before her, looking decidedly uneasy.

"I beg pardon for interrupting you, Mrs. Botkine," he said, "but I wished to thank you for your kindness and to make my adieus."

"Why, Mr. Smith"— she began, but he waved his hand apologetically and continued:

"I am very sorry not to have found Professor Botkine, but perhaps I can come again. There is just time for me to catch the 5 o'clock train."

For a moment she felt stunned. Then a flood of questions poured through her mind. Was the man insane, or what had she done to offend him? What was there in science to turn an apparently "nice" young man into such a distrait savage? The rest of the day seemed endless, but at last she descried Professor Botkine and with him a rather desiccated and "dug up" looking man.

"Here we are at last," said the professor. "I found our friend on the train. He had mistaken tha train and gone to Alameda. Mr. Smith, let me present you to Mrs. Botkine."

She welcomed her guest cordially, but the minute she was alone with her husband she seized him by the lapels.

"What joke have you been playing on me?" she demanded. "Who is this Mr. Smith?"

"Why, my dear, there is no joke. This is the Mr. Smith that I told you I was expecting this afternoon. What is the matter?"

"Matter!" she cried. "Who is the Mr. Smith that came here this afternoon with a satchel and asked about your theories?"

"Why, we met him at the station. He had a few specimens to show me. He is the son of my friend Colin Smith of San Francisco. He had just run over for a short call."

"A short call!" she echoed again. "What will he think of me! I sent him upstairs to take that bath!"

Responsibilities.

"Remember," said the serious citizen, "that wealth has its responsibilities."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "So long as you are [illegible] and obscure you can say 'I seen it' and 'I done it' and eat with your knife all you want to."—Washington Star.

SECURE A FREE HOME IN THE FERTILE WHEAT FIELDS OF WESTERN CANADA.

To the Editor:

The emigration of well-to-do farmers from the United States to the Canadian Northwest has assumed such proportions that organized efforts are now being made by interested persons and corporations to stem the tide. The efforts are being initiated chiefly by railway and real estate interests in the States from which the bulk of the emigration takes place. The movement of population has taken from numerous states thousands of persons whose presence along railways in these states made business for the transportation companies. The movement has also become so widely known that it has prevented the settlement of vacant lands along these lines, parties who might have located there, being attracted to the free and more fertile lands of Canada. The result of the movement has been that the railway companies not only see the vacant lands along their lines remain vacant, but they also see hundreds of substantial farmers who have helped provide business for these railways move away and so cease their contributions. The farmers have moved to Canada because they were convinced that it would be to their financial interest to do so. In moving they have been inconsiderate enough to place their own financial interests before those of the financial interests of the railway corporations.

In addition to the railway corporations, real estate dealers are working to stem the flow of emigrants. Of course every emigrant who goes to Canada means the loss of commissions on land deals by real estate dealers. Now a person has but to know what the interests are that are trying to stop the flow to know what motive is influencing their course. The emigration means financial loss to railway corporations and to real estate men. These interests therefore are not directing their opposition efforts out of any love for the departing emigrants or out of any high patriotic motives either. They are doing so purely from selfish interests. It is a matter of dollars and cents with them. They are so patriotic, they are so consumed by love for their fellow citizens that they want to prevent these fellow citizens going to Canada and getting free farms of the best wheat land in the world; and instead they want to make them stay on high priced farms in the United States where they will continue to pour money into the pockets of these railways and real estate men.

One of the methods employed by these interests to stem the tide is the distribution of matter to newspapers, painting Canada in the darkest colors. These articles emanate chiefly from a bureau in St. Louis. They are sent out at frequent intervals for simultaneous publication. A writer is employed at a high salary to prepare the matter.

Moreover, statements absolutely at variance with the truth have lately been published broad cast. These appear chiefly in what purport to be letters from persons who are alleged to have gone to Canada and become disgusted with it. Only a few of such have been published and they contain statements that are absurd in their falsity. Whether the parties whose names appear in connection with these letters have ever been in Canada and if so, their history while there, is to be thoroughly looked into. The discovery of their motive, like the discovery of the motive of the interests who are engineering the opposition, may prove illumining. In the meantime, however, it may be pointed out that only a few of such letters have appeared but since 1897 over 87,000 American settlers have gone to the Canadian West. Can any reasonable person suppose for a moment that if Canada was one-quarter as bad as represented in these letters the 87,000 Americans now there would remain in the country; or, if the Canadian West had not proved the truth of all that was claimed for it, the papers of every State in the American Northwest would not be filled with letters saying so? Imagine 87,000 aggressive Americans deceived and not making short shift of their deceivers. The fact is the 87,000 are well satisfied and are encouraging their friends to follow them.

Anyone who sees any of these disparaging letters should remember that it is railway and real estate interests who have from purely selfish reasons organized a campaign to stem the flow to Canada. If Canada were half as bad as represented there would be no need of such an organization. The fact that such exists is of itself a magnificent tribute to Canada. Finally it should not be forgotten that the letters published are brimful of falsehoods and that 87,000 satisfied Americans in the Canadian West constitute a living proof that such is the case.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, April 8.—The anti-vaccination bill was recommended for passage by the senate yesterday.

The Dorsey anti-bucket shop bill was finally and formally introduced into the house, was placed on general orders and then referred to the judiciary committee which is to pass on its constitutionality.

Among the bills passed by the house were the Peterson bill, making it a misdemeanor for any one not an employe or the owner or his agent to sweep out grain cars; the Wilson bill, relating to abandonment of wife and children, and the Tighe bill, authorizing cities of over 50,000 inhabitants to build sidewalks and assess abutting property without a petition.

Among the bills on the senate calendar passed were the following: To require the surveyor of logs and lumber to inspect and survey cedar posts, poles and farm poles, cedar electric light, telephone and telegraph poles and to provide for the compensation therefor; to amend section 1, chapter 312 general laws 1897, entitled, "An act to amend section 2, chapter 105, general laws 1895, relating to the sale and lease of mineral and other lands belonging to the state of Minnesota."

Senator Wilson's bill relieving holders of stock in companies other than manufacturing companies from double liability was passed.

St. Paul, April 9.—The senate in committee of the whole yesterday recommended to pass Representative Nils Nyquist's bill to allow old soldiers to "vend and peddle goods, wares, fruits and merchandise" without a license.

Representative S. A. Nelson's measure imposing a license fee on the sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or imitation butter, wholesale or retail, was one of four measures recommended for passage by the senate committee on public health.

The bill fixes the license for a wholesale dealer at $480 and for a retail dealer at $48. The license is to be issued by the State Dairy and Food Commissioner.

The committee recommended for passage Representative George M. Gillette's bill requiring the State Dairy and Food Commissioner to inspect all vinegar brought into the state. The bill does not apply to vinegar in less quantities than fifty barrels containing from forty-five to fifty-five gallons each.

Representative George E. Perley's measure prohibiting the adulteration of food with chemical preservatives was favorably reported.

The house passed the following:

To limit the term of office of the field and general officers of the national guard.

To provide for the isolation of juveniles charged with crime from adults so charged, and to provide for tha isolation of said juveniles at their trial from public idle gaze.

Authorizing the organization of mutual creamery fire insurance companies and mutual dwelling house insurance companies.

To amend chapter 258 of the general laws of 1901, an act providing for the drainage of lands in certain cases prescribing the duties and power of country commissioners nad other officers in the premises and appropriating funds for the payment of assessments against state lands affected thereby.

The movement for a training school for girls, separate from the one at Red Wing for girls and boys, was defeated yesterday in the house.

St. Paul, April 10.—The senate yesterday passed fifty bills, the largest number it has passed in one day this session. General orders was taken up and no bills were introduced. The senate will meet at 10 o'clock this morning.

The senate indefinitely postponed the bill by Representative H. W. Stone, of Morris, which prohibits railroads from raising rates without the consent of the railroad and warehouse commission.

Senator T. M. Pugh's measure establishing a civil service commission to examine grain inspectors was passed by the senate by a vote of thirty-two to seventeen.

The senate judiciary committee will recommend for passage, as amended, the house judiciary committee's bill proposing a constitutional amendment to the taxation code. The bill to be reported is practically a new measure.

Representative J. H. Dorsey's bill authorizing the Minnesota Sugar Company to sue the state to test the validity of the sugar bounty law of 1895 was killed by the senate yesterday by a vote of 25 yeas and 32 nays.

The house yesterday afternoon showed that it believes automobiles are too rich a species of property to go in the exempt class.

The house killed the bill by Ole Peterson, of Nicollet county, creating a state highway commission. It received fifty-four votes, six less than was necessary, and there were fifty votes against it.

Severer tests of kerosene and a new test for gasoline are provided by W. A. Hinton, of Martin county, which the house yesterday in committee of the whole, recommended to pass. In addition to the present tests on kerosene the bill provides for a density test, requiring that oil must not have more than 46 degrees Beaume at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

The investment of state school funds in bonds issued by counties for drainage purposes is permitted by a bill by Senator A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, which the house passed.

The house committee on appropriations yesterday recommended for passage with amendments the bill by Senator A. F. Ferris, of Brainerd, providing for a sanatorium for consumptives to be built near Walker, Cass county.

St. Paul, April 11.—Representative Joel Gregory's bill prohibiting boards of health from requiring the vaccination of school children failed to pass the senate yesterday by five votes. The roll call was 28 yeas and 27 nays.

The senate committee of the whole favorably reported the measure introduced by the road and bridge committee which creates a state highway commission to superintend the construction of roads and bridges.

The senate decided to make a special order for 11 o'clock Tuesday morning of three important house bills. One introduced by Representative H. E. Fryberger, of Minneapolis, raises the gross earnings tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent. The second, by the house judiciary committee, proposes an amendment to the constitution relating to taxation. The third, by the committee on elections, requires proposed constitutional amendments to be printed on a separate ballot.

The house yesterday passed thirteen bills and waded through all its work in time to adjourn at noon for the day. There were several bills left on the calendar that were not touched, but it was considered doubtful whether enough members could be brought back to an afternoon session to pass them, so they went over to today, when the house will meet at 9:30 o'clock.

The house disposed of the dog tax bill by H. W. Rulifson, of Lyon county, which had been killed and then revived. When it was amended Thursday so as to provide that towns and villages should vote on the question of having the law apply to them it looked somewhat as though the measure were going to pass, but it failed, getting only forty-nine votes. There were thirty-four against it.

The bill by W. A. Hinton, of Martin county, adding a density test to the present requirements on illuminating oils, passed the house. It had been amended the day before in committee of the whole so as to require that gasoline should be tested as well as kerosene.

The house killed the bill by W. I. Nolan, of Minneapolis, requiring contractors to protect their employes on high buildings by putting in temporary floors as fast as the stories are built.

FOUND HIM OUT.

Thought He Had the Grocer Thrown Off the Track, But Was Mistaken.

"Mind, I was in a strange town dealing with a strange man, and I tried not to act strange, and still the fellow found me out," said the newly married man, according to the New York Times. "My intended wife and I had a sentiment about spending our wedding night in our own home. The honeymoon trip was not to begin till the following morning. That required laying in a stock of provisions for breakfast.

"On the morning of the wedding day I called at the nearest grocery store and ordered a supply. There was butter and salt and eggs and sugar and—well, everybody knows the string! Understand, I did everything a bridegroom is not expected to do to throw the fellow off the track. I ordered things off-hand, not from a fool slip of paper, but from memory. I talked to the pretty cashier and ate an apple out of a barrel as if I had been born in the place, like the store cat. Everything conceivable I did, and thought I had the grocer completely fooled when, on handing me the packages, he said:

"Well, sir, I hope you'll give us your trade when you get settled."

A Veteran's Story.

Bath, N. Y., April 13th.—The first consideration of the Commandant and Officers in the conduct of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home here, is the health of the Veterans. Kidney Troubles are the most common cause of ailment, very few of the old men escaping these in some form or other.

Of course the comrades do as much as possible for themselves and one of the most popular and useful remedies employed is Dodd's Kidney Pills which seem to be almost infallible in cases of Kidney derangements. Indeed, there are among the veterans, several who claim to owe their lives to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For instance, A. E. Ayers, who came to the home from Minneapolis, Minn., was given up by four doctors in that city. He had Bright's Disease and never expected to live through it, but his life was saved and his health restored by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

His experience has made the remedy very popular among the men and no one who has used Dodd's Kidney Pills for any Kidney Trouble has been disappointed.

THE MEN AND WOMEN

Who Enjoy the Choicest Products of the World's Commerce.

Knowledge of What Is Best More Important Than Wealth Without It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain permanently to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preeminence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting, enjoying and learning the real worth of the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the method of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. The above is true not of food products only, but is especially applicable to medicinal agents and after nearly a quarter of a century of growth and general use the excellent remedy, Syrup of Figs, is everywhere accepted, throughout the world, as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system and presented in the form of a pleasant and refreshing liquid, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. Ask any physician who is well informed and he will answer at once that it is an excellent laxative. If at all eminent in his profession and has made a special study of laxatives and their effects upon the system he will tell you that it is the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after-effects. Every well-informed druggist of reputable standing knows that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative and is glad to sell it, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, because it gives general satisfaction, but one should remember that in order to get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs it is necessary to buy the genuine, which is sold in original packages only; the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs and also the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

"Whenever the cold weather sets in I have for years past been very sure to catch a severe cold which was hard to throw off, and which would leave after-effects on my constitution the most of the winter.

"Last winter I was advised to try Peruna, and within five days the cold was broken up and in five days more I was a well man. I recommended it to several of my friends and all speak the highest praise for it. There is nothing like Peruna for catarrhal afflictions. "About two years ago I caught a severe cold while traveling and which settled into catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and so affected my voice that I was obliged to cancel my engagements. In distress I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had never used a patent medicine before, I sent for a bottle.

"Words but illy describe my surprise to find that within a few days I was greatly relieved, and within three weeks I was entirely recovered. I am never without it now, and take an occasional dose when I feel run down."—Julian Weisslitz.

DELVING FOR POWER

Political Moles of Both Parties Are Busily at Work.

How a Successful Presidential Boom Is Created, Expanded and Transformed Into a Potent Reality.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE political moles are burrowing deep down beneath the presidential pastures, where they would not be discovered, nor suspected, but for the work of inimical political ferrets. They are unlike the coyotes and gophers who abrade the surface sward, but delve far, far below.

One of the wonder-workers in the political world is the senior senator from Ohio, the man who from obscurity stepped into national fame early in 1896 as the manager of the McKinley campaign for nomination. The old-time politicians thought that he could soon be disposed of; but they found that for three years Mark Hanna had been burrowing for delegates to the national convention. And when that great aggregation of politicians met in St. Louis Hanna had complete control of the situation.

Politicians do not rest during the Lenten season, nor for any other season. They are not primarily religious, although some of them are nicely veneered with churchly in-goings and out-comings. Primarily, they are self-seeking and ambitious, ready to sacrifice others, even good friends, for their own advancement. The most successful of them are always burrowing for future preferments.

Senator Davis, of Minnesota, once said to the narrator: "I went to church this morning, just for a few minutes. I sat up last night until after midnight thinking over the applicants for an office. Having concluded that a certain man should have preferment, I went to bed and slept as calmly as a child. After late breakfast this morning I lighted a cigar and took a walk. Just as I was passing a church, memory called up a picture of my first election to the senate. One of the candidates for office had sacrificed a great deal for me at that time, and I remembered having said: 'If ever you need a friend, rely on Cush Davis.' And yet, because another had seemed to me to be of greater future value, I had made up my mind to turn that friend coldly down. I went into church, stayed until the conclusion of service, came home and concluded to have my former helpful friend appointed. So, you see, once in awhile conscience will make even a politician do the right thing."

Well, while ambitious men are burrowing for the presidency, all of them are denying their ambition. Senator Hanna, the greatest burrower of them all, keeps gravely quiet and affects indifference to the quest. But there are surface indications which point to his ambition in that direction. An old politician here today called the attention of the writer to one very interesting fact. He said: "Do you remember that last October the physicians informed Senator Hanna that he must quit politics and go to bed, because of danger from heart failure? Well, what did Hanna do? He went home for only a couple of days, and then appeared on the hustings in Indiana to help his friend Senator Fairbanks; and he was so weak that he was obliged to quit speaking in the midst of one of his addresses. What did he make that effort for in Indiana?"

ARTHUR PUE GORMAN.
(Senator from Maryland and Prince of Campaign Managers.)

But the chief burrowers are on the other political side, and all of them seem to believe that the democratic presidential nomination will be worth striving for next year. Senator Gorman, of Maryland, who is close to the national capital; Mr. Hearst, Judge Parker and Mr. Hill, all of New York; Mr. Olney, of Massachusetts; Mr. Cleveland, of New Jersey, and Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, are all of them standing right in the line where the presidential lightning is expected to strike.

Now you would like to know how this burrowing is done. It is a great game, and is very well understood in this center of politics as well as of statecraft. The stimulus for all politicians is the federal patronage. Every political worker wants an office.

There is a blue book published by the national government every two years, and it contains lists of all of the federal office-holders, even down to the lowliest and lowest-paid. The big politicians employ little politicians to take up certain parts of this blue book, and go to work on the former office-holders. For example, suppose that Mr. Olney, of Massachusetts, wants to get the delegates from the state of Illinois to support him for the presidency in the next national convention.

The blue book will give the names of 2,000 postmasters in Illinois who held office during the last Cleveland administration. It will give the names of all other office-holders, and each one of them must have been a democrat of some consequence, to have secured an office. Each one of those office-holders must be communicated with, either directly or indirectly. He must be assured that if he will get out and hustle and work for Olney he can again be postmaster, or held some other office equally good. Now, unless Mr. Hearst, or Mr. Cleveland, or some other candidate will get in ahead of him, Mr. Olney can form quite a strong army of politicians who can control the next state convention and name Olney delegates to the national convention. The delegates are almost all bought with offices or with the hope of office. Sometimes they change, but usually they remain true to the individuals to whom they pledge themselves. Lewis Cass, of Michigan, bought supporters with offices, and he said: "An honest politician is one who will stay bought."

GROVER CLEVELAND.
(Stands Right Where Presidential Lightning May Strike Him.)

Gathering in delegates more than a year in advance is one of the new tricks in politics which Mr. Hanna developed previous to 1896. Those who are far-sighted enough to do this systematically have what is called "a good organization." That is to say, that if one has an organized army of ex-postmasters, all of them hungering for political fleshpots, he is a political general with whom one must reckon.

In the state of Pennsylvania there are 5,000 postmasters and about 1,500 deputy postmasters. These, with the other federal and state office-holders, make an organized army of political workers numbering upwards of 10,000 men, all of them working to retain their positions, and all of them under the skillful direction of Senator Quay; and yet people outside of that state wonder that Quay always succeeds.

Early in March, soon after his reentry into the senate, Senator Gorman, of Maryland, said to Champ Clark, of Missouri: "William Jennings Bryan must be reckoned with. While his friends may not constitute the necessary two-thirds to nominate in a national convention he will undoubtedly have more than a majority in the convention next year, and will be able to dictate the platform. Whoever overlooks this all-important fact will find himself hopelessly in a minority when the convention gets down to actual work."

From this it is apparent that Mr. Gorman realizes, and fully understands, that Mr. Bryan is burrowing also for delegates, although not for the purpose of forcing his renomination. It means that the eloquent Nebraskan intends to remain a dominant factor in his party.

And so, while all of the others are burrowing for delegates to gain the presidential nomination, the astute politician from Maryland says that "Bryan must be reckoned with." When it is recalled that Mr. Gorman is the only man who has been able to lead his party to success in presidential campaigns, for well-nigh 50 years, it may be well for all of the other burrowers to hearken to his words of wisdom. And it is worthy of note also that while Mr. Gorman thus respectfully takes off his hat to Bryan that worthy in his weekly paper says that "Gorman was regular, but not too regular."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Arbor Day.

Gov. Van Sant issued his proclamation designating May 1 as Arbor and Bird day. The proclamation reads as follows:

"In compliance with law and custom I hereby designate May 1, 1903, as Arbor and Bird day, and earnestly recommend that upon said day suitable exercises be held in all the schools throughout the state with a view to arousing the full appreciation of the usefulness of our song birds and the beauty and utility of trees, shrubs and vines. To the end that our homes, streets and public places be made more attractive and beautiful, I urge that the day may in a measure be given to planting; in addition to planting it behooves to preserve. Public sentiment appreciative of the value of our forestry and the necessity of its preservation from wanton destruction should be cultivated."

Death at a Wedding.

Death came as an unbidden guest into the midst of a wedding party at Duluth when a rifle bullet fired by Oscar Londen crushed through the side of the house and killed Mrs. Hannah Matson.

The tragedy occurred at the house of John Alp, where Matt Anton and Hilda Frederickson had been married earlier in the evening. Following the wedding the assembled friends participated in a party in honor of the event.

Oscar Londen was one of a charivari party and carried a 40-60 Springfield rifle. Standing near the house he was firing the gun in the air, lowering the muzzle each time he pumped a new shell into the firing chamber. At the fatal shot he failed to get the muzzle of the gun elevated sufficiently before the weapon was discharged, with the result stated.

Important Notice.

Public Superintendent J. W. Olsen, secretary to the state high school board, sent an important notice to the schools under the supervision of the board. The notice states that the board has made a ruling that after July 31, 1903, no teacher will be accepted by the state board as qualified to teach in the grades of such schools who has not at least a second grade state certificate, and no teacher shall be deemed qualified to teach above the sixth grade who has not at least a first grade state certificate. This rule will not be enforced against teachers already employed

A Wiser Man.

Joseph Garrish, a farmer living near Garner, Iowa, put trust in a stranger, and will leave the city several hundred dollars poorer than he was when he arrived. He landed in Minneapolis a few days ago while on his way to North Dakota and had $370 in his pocket. Fearing highwaymen, he decided to leave the money in a safe place, and deposited it with the bartender in a Washington avenue saloon. When he called for his money he found that the bartender had disappeared and that the money was gone. Garrish reported the matter to the police.

Interesting Relic.

A gun owned by John Other Day, the noted friendly Indian of the Sioux uprising, is the recent acquisition of the state historical society. During the Sioux uprising a colony of sixty-two whites were surrounded by the Yellow river station. The country was filled with hostile Indians, and it was apparently only a matter of days when they would sweep down on the station. John Other Day made his way to Yellow Medicine and guided the besieged colonists in safety to the stronger posts at Hutchinson, Carver and Shakopee.

A Relic.

An interesting relic of pioneer days stands in the court house yard at Red Lake Falls and many in passing wonder what history can be connected with the old water wheel that it should be so prominently displayed. The wheel is the first turbine ever operated in Minnesota and was originally set up at St. Anthony Falls, later being moved to Fergus Falls. For some years it furnished power for a grist mill at Red Lake Falls.

News Notes.

Burglars entered the dress silk store of W. F. Cleary, 722 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, between the hours of 9 and 10, and carried off silk to the value of $500.

William Whalen, aged 12 years, of Minneapolis, was seriously injured by the explosion of a revolver cartridge with which he was playing.

The new wolf bounty bill in Minnesota provides for a bounty of $7.50 for full grown wolves and a dollar each for cubs. It is a question if the brutes can be raised from puppyhood to maturity for the difference.

Two men supposed to be Harry Satterlee and Ed McCluo were arrested at Horska on suspicion of being concerned in cracking the safe of the Nicollet bank.

The Supream court has given county division a set back, that is liable to kill the beast dead, but it is not deader than some of the fellows that helped to kill it.

With this issue we present our readers with, Vol 3 No 1 of THE SUNBEAM. We are as confident of its future success as we was that it would succeed at the time of getting out the first issue. Our maxim has been, that he that by the plow would thrive, himself must hold or drive.

The end of the legislature was wild and exciting, on Tuesday last. Senators and representatives was rushing from one house to the other trying to get help to pass local bills that they have been neglecting through the winter, but will have to answer for to their constituents.

A THOUGHTFUL MAN.

M.M. Austain of Winchester, Ind. knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusal case of stomach and liver trouble, phycians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finall cured. Only 25c at Kronschnabel & Bolstads.

A DYNAMITE STORY.

It Was Wholly Untrue, but It Served a Very Useful Purpose.

"Lying may be a useful thing sometimes, even newspaper lying," said a man from Mississippi, "and one little incident during the overflow of 1893 convinced me of the fact in a rather forcible way.

"Do you remember reading a story about a fellow being shot while trying to dynamite the levee in Sunflower county? It was a fake pure and simple, and a newspaper fake at that. Daily, weekly and monthly papers all over the country came out with stories and editorial comment on the thing, publishing pictures of the scene along the levee line where the alleged attempt to dynamite was made. A bloody hat was found near the scene, and it had been shot full of holes by the men who caught the man in the dastardly act of trying to relieve the high tension of the river for some mysterious motive. You will remember that this motive was carefully concealed; that the body of the man had disappeared as suddenly and mysteriously as if it had melted into thin air.

"All these things came about for a specific reason. The levee at that point was very weak. There was danger of a break, and one would result in inestimable losses of property values and life. It was impossible to get labor enough to strengthen the weak place. The river was rising rapidly. The pressure had touched a high point. Danger was upon the people in the lowlands. But they were indifferent to the situation. Evidently they did not understand the real state of things, else they would have been out working like Trojans. So the story of the effort to dynamite the levee at the weak point, with all its blood curdling and harrowing details, was sent out, published and circulated in every possible way. By sunrise on the following day fully 500 men had swarmed around the place, and before the sun had set that day the weak point had become the strongest in that section. It shows what direct lying will do sometimes, for there would have been a fearful disaster but for the circulation of the dynamite story."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Their Last.

"Yes," remarked the sad looking stranger, "I have seen the last of many a good man."

"Doctor or undertaker?" queried the man behind the white apron.

"Neither," replied he of the sad looks. "I'm a shoemaker."

A Deep Thought.

"In a brown study, eh?"

"Yes. I was just thinking."

"Thinking what?"

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philidelphia, as fllows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement: I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man: I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guarenteed at Kronschnabel & Bolstad.

Pat's Puzzle.

Five or six men were recently chatting in a village inn when one of them said:

"I say, I bets ye dinners all round ye can't tell me the answer to a puzzle I knows of."

"Done," they said. "I bet we can. What is it?"

"Well," said Pat. "why is a journalist the funniest creature in the world?"

After vainly trying for about two hours they sadly said they must give it up.

"Why," said the delighted Pat, "because his tale comes out of his head, don't it?"—Spare Moments.

Willie and His Politeness.

Willie (reading his verse at Sunday school)—"And they took Joseph's coat, killed a boy and dipped the coat in the blood."

"Now, Willie," said the teacher, "you know the text reads 'killed a kid,' not a boy."

"Yes, but didn't you tell us it is vulgar to say 'kid' when talking about little boys?" replied the apt scholar, beaming with delight at his good memory.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A MODERN ANECDOTE.

One Writer Imagines He Has Traced It to Its Source.

"It is well known among joke writers," said the antiquary, "that there exist in the world only seven jokes. All the rest have been made and still continue to be made from these seven. But it is not so well known that there are only seven anecdotes, out of which by ingenious blendings and twistings the unnumbered thousands of the world's anecdotes are created.

"I am an amateur or loving collector of anecdotes. When I come upon one that is strange to me, I delight to trace it back to its source. I get the same pleasure out of this that an etymologist gets in tracing back to its Sanskrit root a disputed word.

"Some time ago I heard of an anecdote about Charles Lamb. Lamb, the story went, was on a journey, and the time was that of the publication of the ingenious stories for children that he and his sister Mary had written in collaboration. Lamb said to one of his fellow travelers:

"'Have you read Lamb's tales?'

"'No, but I have a black sheepskin rug,' the other replied.

"This anecdote struck me as pretty good, and I tried to trace it back. For a long time I was unsuccessful, but my search was rewarded. I found the story from which the Lamb one was derived.

"It was a story of a traveler on a rainy day who had left his wrap in a stagecoach. After he had got out he missed the wrap and told the driver to go inside and inquire for it. The guard, putting his head within the door, called:

"'Is there a black mackintosh here?'

"'No,' was the reply, 'but there are two red MacGregors.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Digging For Kauri Gum.

The ordinary method of searching for kauri gum in New Zealand is by first feeling for it a little below the surface with a steel pointed piece of iron called a "gum spear" and then digging it out with a spade. A skillful and industrious digger can earn as much as $5 per week at the work, and even children can earn a few shillings a day; but as the gumfields are [illegible] for all sorts and conditions of men, many who are old and infirm resort to them, and so the average earnings are reduced to [illegible] or so a week. This gum is used principally in the manufacture of varnish, but it is also found useful for many other purposes, such as dressing "glazed" calicoes, etc.—London Times.

VISION OF A MURDER.

Remarkable Experience of a Young Englishwoman. A Vivid Dream.

The dean of a certain cathedral in the east of England recently related this remarkable story, which is as great a mystery to him as to those who have heard it. The facts are beyond dispute.

His niece, ordinarily a strong and active young lady, was slowly recovering from an unusually severe attack of scarlet fever and was in a nervous and weak condition when one night her sleep was disturbed by a strange and terrible dream.

It seemed to her that she stood before a house she had never in her life seen before and that her sight could penetrate the walls as though they had been of glass. The whole interior lay open to her view, the staircase with curiously carved balusters, the lower and the upper rooms with all they contained, and finally her attention focused itself on one room in particular—a bedroom, the walls of which were covered with wall paper of a peculiar pattern.

In one corner of the room was a bed, and on it lay a sick man. He was asleep, to judge from his appearance. Suddenly and silently another man entered the room, crept toward the sleeper and with a quick movement removed the pillow from under his head. The sick man awoke and stared at the intruder with horror stricken eyes. The next moment the pillow was brought down on his face and held there with all the murderer's strength. The sheets moved convulsively; the sick man was being smothered. What followed the sleeper never saw, for at that juncture she awoke with a cry and in a fever of horror.

For change of air she was afterward taken to the cathedral town and stayed for awhile at the house of the dean, her uncle. He tried to amuse her by driving her about in a pony chaise. One day he took her into the country to see a house which he thought might suit her, for her people intended to take a place in the neighborhood. But on arriving at the palings before the path that led to the door the girl showed the greatest reluctance to get out of the chaise.

"No, no," she said, "not that place! I will not be taken there! It is the place I dreamed of!"

The dean told her she was talking nonsense.

"No, no! I know the place! I will prove it to you. You will find that the stair is one with curious balusters, the pattern of the wall paper is as I will describe it to you, also the peculiar pattern on the walls of that bedroom to the right of the stairs landing. The bed is placed in the corner, and in that bed the man was murdered. I will not go in!"

The dean discovered that all was exactly as she had said. He knew also that a strange death had taken place lately in that house. He pressed her no further, agreeing with her that "the place would not do."

There is no doubt that the girl, through some strange bond of sympathy between her soul and that of the murdered man's, had witnessed a crime which to this day remains a mystery.

THE PILLOW WAS PRESSED ON THE SICK MAN'S FACE

Banes of Civilization.

Civilization is slowly ridding Africa of the slave trade and in one way improving the lot of its people. But the parties of white explorers who are now so frequently traveling from both east and west across the heart of the dark continent have brought new ills in its blessings.

Smallpox is at present killing off whole tribes and villages in the country west and north of Uganda, and in Uganda itself, territory, sleeping sickness is causing fearful havoc.

Sleeping sickness has long been known along the swamps of the west coast, and has followed civilization up the Kongo into the Kongo Free State and so into the highlands of British Central Africa. Up to the end of June last it had carried off no fewer than 60,000 people in the province of Busoga alone.

IN BORROWED PLUMAGE.

Well Dressed Women Who Wear Goods Sent on Approval.

When the ways of some women are considered, it is less remarkable than such numbers of women dwelling in the large cities dress extravagantly than before their methods of securing rich costumes for all occasions have been scrutinized.

There are women, and many of them very wealthy, who make a regular practice of having elegant garments sent to their homes on approval, wearing them once and then returning them to stores or costumers. Some women will wear a dress or a cloak to the opera and send it back next morning. Or they will get a hat or wrap and go driving or visiting in it. The average person would be astonished to know all the things, from handsome umbrellas and fans of great beauty to jewelry and clothes, that some women borrow from the shops.

Of course all of these women are not well off, but they all dress well and go out a great deal, and although the shopkeepers often discover the manner in which they are being deceived, they do not always like to make a fuss for fear of losing a good customer. Besides they know that if they incur the enmity of such impostors the women are quite capable of abusing their goods and robbing them of other and more honest customers. Strange as it may seem, these women generally mingle in pretty good society, or the fringes of it, and have some influence in the matter of dress, since they have won the reputation of always dressing elegantly and in the newest things.

This sort of imposition had been carried on so often by a customer of a certain large firm that its members determined to put a stop to her flaunting about in borrowed plumage, at least when the plumage belonged to them. One Saturday this woman had a splendid wrap sent home on approval, and on Sunday one of the head clerks of the firm who knew Mrs. Blank as the offender stationed himself near her pew in the fashionable church which she attended. When she sailed down the aisle after service, resplendent in the borrowed cloak, this man stepped up to her and said:

"How do you do, Mrs. Blank? I am delighted to see that you like our cloak well enough to keep it."

Of course after that she could not return the cloak.

Still, with all the efforts put forward by shops and costumers to break up the pernicious habit of forcible borrowing on the part of sundry feminine customers, the practice goes merrily on, and many a fair dame with an enviable reputation for exquisite dressing appears but once in garments and hats that when next seen are bedecking another woman or hanging in the showroom of some smart shop.—Washington Star.

Barred Out Immigrants.

Uncle Sam has a black list of birds and quadrupeds which it is absolutely prohibited to introduce into this country, says the Chattanooga Times. The mongoose, the flying fox and the starling are on the list. The mongoose is a species of ferret, a native of India, where it is domesticated as a sort of animal rat trap and snake destroyer. It was introduced into Jamaica to get rid of the sugar cane rats. These exterminated, however, the mongoose went on to diet off the insect destroying birds, with the result that the crops have been devastated by insects in some sections of the island. The animal is exceedingly crafty, nocturnal in its habits and evades traps with ease. The flying fox, known also as the fruit bat, is a voracious harvester of fruits and vegetables. The starling belongs to the crow family.

AN ARAB'S HORSE.

The Story of an Englishman's Attempt to Purchase It.

In his "Souvenirs d'un Voyage" M. Spoll describes a visit to Arabia and the attempt of an English friend to buy an Arabian horse. The Englishman was at great pains to induce the Arab who owned the [illegible] to sell him. He persuaded the man to make an appointment to conclude the sale after employing "as much diplomacy as would be used in a year in making or breaking the balance of power in Europe."

On the eventful day the Englishman with M. Spoll and M. Lascaris rode to the rendezvous and found the Arab sitting by his horse, which was browsing quietly.

"Las salam aleik" (I salute you), began the Englishman courteously. "What shall I pay you for your horse?"

"Who knows?" said the Arab. "Throw on my cloak here whatever you offer."

Three thousand piasters fell at the feet of the impassive Arab, then 10,000, then 10,000 more. The Arab's eyes shone. Ten thousand piasters more won him. "Ah," he said, going up to his magnificent animal, "we must part."

The Englishman began to bridle the horse. The Arab sobbed. Suddenly the intelligent animal, perceiving his new owner, sprang away and [illegible]. DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN.

Mrs. E. B. Bradshaw, of Guthrie, Okla., cured of a severe case by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary medical treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects as well.

Thousands of testimonial letters prove beyond question that nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It always works in harmony with the female system.

NEVER SAW SUCH LARGE YIELDS.

The Climate Is Healthy—The Winters Are Pleasant In Western Canada.

Writing from Stirling, Alberta, to one of the agents representing the Canadian Government Free Homestead Lands, Mr. M. Pickrell, formerly of Beechwood, Kentucky, says of Western Canada:

"In the first place we will say that the summer season is just lovely indeed. As to the winter, well we never experienced finer weather than we are now enjoying. We have just returned from Northern Alberta and will say that we found the weather to be very mild, the air dry, fresh and invigorating. Considering everything we can say that the winters here are most pleasant, healthy and enjoyable to what they are in the States. Here it gets cold and continues so till Spring—there are no disagreeable winds. In South Alberta it is some warmer—two to four inches of snow may fall and in a few hours a Chinook wind come along, evaporating the entire snow, leaving terra-firma perfectly dry; in fact, we did not believe this part until we came and saw for ourselves and we now know what we herein write to be just as we write it. There has not been a day this winter that I could not work out doors. Farmers here are calculating on starting the plough the first of March.

"As to farm wages, we would not advise a man to come here with the expectation of living by his days' work, but all who do want a home I advise to have nerve enough to get up and come for there never has been, and may never be again, such a grand opportunity for a man to get a home almost free.

"As to the crops. I have been in the fields before harvest, saw the grass put up and the grain harvested, and I never saw such large yields. I saw oats near Edmonton over six feet tall that yielded 80 bushels per acre, and I talked to a farmer near St. Albert who had a field year before last that averaged 110 bushels per acre, and weighed 43 pounds to the bushel. All other crops would run in proportion—as to potatoes and vegetables, the turnout was enormous. I have such reports as the above from all sections that I have visited, and that has been every community between the Edmonton district and Raymond in the Lethbridge district.

"As to stock raising, I would advise a man to locate in this place, or any place, in South Alberta, but for mixed farming, I would say go up farther north, say near Lacombe, Wetaskiwin or Edmonton, where it is not quite so dry and where there is some timber to be had. I will say that nowhere have I ever seen a better opportunity for a man, whether he has money or not, to obtain a home. Nowhere can be found a more productive soil, better water and a better governed country than Western Canada affords. Inducements to the homeseeker are unexcelled. I met two men near Ponoka on the C. & E. R. R., who borrowed the money to pay for their homestead and in four years those two men sold their farms—one for $2,500, the other for $3,000. I met a man near Wetaskiwin who landed here with 25 cents six years ago. He is now worth $8,000. The advantages for ranching are excellent, in fact I do not believe this section can be beat. Markets are good; as to living, a family can live as cheap here as they can in the States. The average yield of oats in this neighborhood, last year, was 70 bushels per acre; wheat averaged 35, barley 40, and the beet crop was good. In consequence of the successful cultivation of the beet, a large beet sugar factory is being erected at Raymond, seven miles from here.

"In conclusion, I will say that N. W. T. from Manitoba to a long distance north of Edmonton produces most wonderful crops. Lakes and rivers abound with fish, and game is plentiful. And that this is unquestionably the country for a man to come to if he desires to better his condition in life. I would advise the prospective settler to look over the Lethbridge, Lacombe, Wetaskiwin and Edmonton districts before locating.

"I will locate in the Edmonton district next Fall and several families from the States will locate with me. In the meantime, I will receive my mail here and will be pleased to give the interested all the information desired."

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The Transactions of the Lawmakers at St. Paul.—A Short Summary of the Regular Routine.

St. Paul, April 14.—The Wilson bill to allow district court judges traveling expenses while absent from their home counties on official business was recommended to pass.

The Armstrong bill to compel hotel-keepers to supply fire escapes was recommended to pass after being so amended as to apply only to cities of more than 10,000 population. The bill provides that strong ropes shall be placed in rooms which are not handy to the fire escape.

Senator Morgan's bill requiring graduates from the law department of the state university to pass an examination for admission to the bar was recommended for passage. The act is to take effect July 1, and will not effect the '03 law class.

St. Paul, April 15.—Representative H. E. Fryberger's bill increasing the gross earnings tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent was passed by the senate yesterday, without amendment, by a vote of 52 to 5.

The senate passed without debate the house election committee's measure providing that questions proposing to amend the constitution shall be printed on a separate ballot. The vote on the measure was 49 yeas and no nayes.

The senate decided to place on general orders the bill creating a new judicial district to consist of Chisago, Pine and Kanabec counties. A minority of the judiciary committee had submitted a report recommending the bill for indefinite postponement. There was a long discussion on the report.

The house yesterday passed a board of control bill, the fourth it has acted upon, and the first it has passed.

The bill is by George E. Perley, of Moorhead, with amendments by the committee on education that seemed to appease both sides, for the bill passed by a vote of 79 to 19. As originally drawn, the bill took the state university and the normal schools away from the board of control entirely.

The committee amendments provide that the board of control, in co-operation with the local boards, shall have charge of the construction of buildings, and the local boards are to have charge of maintenance and repairs.

The house passed the bill by George R. Smith, of Minneapolis, providing for a state tax commission of three members. The house has already passed the Haugland bill, providing for a single tax commissioner, so it has in effect passed two conflicting bills. A fear that the senate will shelve the Haugland bill, however, is responsible for the passage of the Smith bill.

St. Paul, April 16.—The following bills were passed by the house yesterday:

Regulating public officeholding and elections.

To permit the use of fish houses within the state.

To amend section 69, chapter 2, Laws of 1902, relating to the taxation of real estate.

To provide for the manner of changing names of persons and for the registry of names.

To impose a tax on the property in this state of freight line companies.

To provide for carrying money from one county fund to another.

In the senate the following bills were passed:

To prohibit compulsory vaccination except in epidemics.

To amend the law regulating sheriff fees and the service of district court papers.

To establish a state highway commission.

To provide that damages recovered for death by wrongful act shall go to the deceased's mother if he leaves no widow or children and if his parents are divorced.

To establish a state bureau of immigration.

To appropriate $5,000 for a cottage at Anoka for veterans, their wives and widows.

To reduce the membership of the state board of law examiners from nine to five.

To legalize conveyances of real estate made by a wife to her husband.

To regulate the transcribing of records in counties.

To legalize school district bonds.

To appropriate $5,000 annually to reimburse district court judges for traveling expenses.

To fix the fees of probate judges and court commissioners for examining lunatics.

To require railroads to allow shippers thirty-six hours in which to load grain and farm produce into cars.

To amend the law authorizing counties to employ special attorneys.

To legalize corporations where they have failed to file articles of incorporation.

To provide that no person shall vote at an election unless he has resided in the district twenty days preceding the election.

To increase the salary of the state superintendent of public instruction from $2,500 to $3,000.

St. Paul, April 17.—The following bills passed in the senate yesterday:

To authorize the payment of expenses of county attorneys from county funds.

To provide for records of offenses for which convictions are had before justices of the peace.

To require hotels and lodging houses to be equipped with fire escapes.

To prohibit the use of track bicycles on railroads.

To abolish days of grace.

To prohibit the adulteration of food with chemical preservatives.

To prevent trespassing in Itasca state park.

To provide for the vacation of public roads on mineral lands.

To regulate the publication of articles of incorporation.

To prohibit the adulteration of spices and condiments.

To amend the law relating to limited partnerships so that death shall not work dissolution where the contract so stipulates.

To provide for the arbitration of disputes regarding fire insurance losses by a board of three disinterested persons to be appointed by a district court judge.

Omnibus appropriation bill.

Authorizing a special tax to raise $250,000 for the state school of agriculture.

The house passed the following:

Authorizing cities under 10,000 to condemn water works and issue bonds in pay for them.

Relating to qualification of teachers in the public schools.

Relating to the allowance of expenses of county superintendents of schools.

To appropriate money for the general expenses of the state government and for other purposes.

To assess a tax to raise funds and to appropriate the same for the buildings and other equipments for the departments of agriculture of the University of Minnesota.

To codify and amend the laws concerning the state library and appropriating money for its care and maintenance.

St. Paul, April 18.—Senator J. G. Schutz's bill abolishing the state normal schools at Mankato, Moorhead and Duluth was killed by the senate yesterday after it had been recommended for passage by the committee of the whole.

The senate passed, under suspension of the rules, Representative James A. Hickey's bill authorizing St. Paul to issue $600,000 of bonds for the construction of bridges, school houses, municipal buildings and main sewers.

The senate adopted a resolution by Senator Samuel Lord, of Kasson, providing that hereafter all speeches be limited to five minutes.

The house yesterday passed the bill by S. A. Nelson, of Lanesboro, taxing the property of sleeping and buffet car companies in this state.

The Helliwell inheritance tax law was recommended for passage by the senate in committee of the whole, with an amendment fixing the exemption at $10,000. The exemption was originally $1,000 but it was changed to $15,000 by the senate committee on taxes and tax laws.

If the people approve the action of the legislature, the next legislature will be in a position, if it sees fit, to do away with the grand jury system in this state.

The bill by Senator George R. Laybourn, of Duluth, proposing an amendment to the constitution that will permit this, was passed by the house, 63 to 21.

The house committee on game and fish yesterday recommended for passage the senate bill creating a new game and fish code, with a large number of amendments, which the house adopted.

The house passed the bill by Senator A. F. Ferris, of Brainerd, establishing a Minnesota sanatorium for consumptives at Walker, Cass county.

He Wasn't a Cheese.

The physicians were holding a consultation beside the cot of the man supposed to have appendicitis concealed about his person.

"I believe," said one of the surgeons, "that we should wait and let him get stronger before cutting into him."

Before the other prospective operators could reply the patient turned his head and remarked feebly: "What do you take me for—a cheese?"—Baltimore American.

A Sudden Drop.

"Yep," said Dakota Dan, resting his glass on the bar, "he pretended to be a friend of mine, but he wasn't. Last summer he done me a dirty, sneakin' trick—sold me a saddle that wasn't his'n, and I had to give it up."

"I suppose you were not very friendly with him after that?"

"Nope—I dropped him then and thar. His widder married the sheriff last week."—Kansas City Journal.

"They Waited" and "Saw."

Warren's Corners, N. Y., April 20th.—"Wait and see—you're better now, of course, but the cure won't last."

This was what the doctors said to Mr. A. B. Smith, of this place. These doctors had been treating him for years, and he got no better. They thought that nothing could permanently cure him. He says:

"My kidneys seemed to be so large that there wasn't room for them, and at times it seemed as if ten thousand needles were running through them. I could not sleep on my left side for years, the pain was so great in that position I had to get up many times to urinate, and my urine was sometimes clear and white as spring water, and again it would be high colored and would stain my linen. The pain across my back was awful. I was ravenously hungry all the time.

"After I had taken Dodd's Kidney Pills for four days my kidneys pained me so bad I could hardly sit down. On the morning of the fifth day I felt some better, and the improvement continued till I was completely cured.

"As this was months ago, and I am still feeling splendid, I know that my cure was permanent and genuine."

Contagious Only.

"This fishin' fever seems to be contagious," said the stranger, noting the long row of anglers perched upon the creek bank.

"Yes, it's contagious, all right," said the man who had been fishing four hours without a nibble, "but not ketchin'."—Baltimore American.

"POOR DIGESTION LANGUID AND TIRED."

[An Interesting Letter Concerning Pe-ru-na.]

Miss Della Janveau, Globe Hotel, Ottawa, Ont., is from one of the oldest and best known French Canadian families in Canada. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

"Last spring my blood seemed clogged up, my digestion poor, my head ached and I felt languid and tired all the time. My physician prescribed for me, but a friend advised me to try Peruna. I tried it and am pleased to state that I found it a wonderful cleanser and purifier of the system. In three weeks I was like a new woman, my appetite had increased, I felt buoyant, light and happy and without an ache or pain. Peruna is a reliable family medicine."

Adia Brittain, of Sekitan, O., writes: "After using your wonderful Peruna three months I have had great relief. I had continual heaviness in my stomach, was bilious, and had fainting spells, but they all have left me since using Peruna."—Adia Brittain.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The Longest Sentence.

A schoolmaster was giving his class a lesson in grammar when he asked the boys to tell him the longest sentence they had ever read. There was silence for a minute or two, but at last a small boy stood up and said he could remember the longest sentence he had ever read.

"Well, Tommy," said the teacher, "what is it?"

"Imprisonment for life," replied the boy.—N. Y. Tribune.

MR. ROBSON'S START.

Famous Comedian Began Life as Page Boy in Congress.

Owed His Appointment to Robert Toombs and the Fact That He Stumbled Over Gen. Scott's Ample Feet.

[Special Washington Letter.]

TWO times 27 are 54. If you don't believe it, you can count it up on your fingers.

The difference between the Thirtieth congress and the Fifty-seventh congress, is 27 congresses; and, as each congress endures two years, the difference in time between the Thirtieth and Fifty-seventh congresses is 54 years.

By this simple method of calculation we reach the conclusion that Stuart Robinson, the comedian, is growing old; in fact, is already an old man, for he tells the narrator that he was a page boy in the Thirtieth congress. He is now nearing his seventieth year. No one would believe it to see and hear him on the stage. It would indeed be easy to make one believe that his voice was only born last night, or early this morning; it is such a little bit of a thing.

"I was a page in the Thirtieth and Thirty-first congresses," says Mr. Robson. "It was not an easy matter in those days to secure such an appointment, and I had a great struggle before success came. I was born in Annapolis, and raised in Baltimore.

"Well, after many ups and downs of a few weeks, I secured from Mr. Jefferson Davis a letter to the doorkeeper of the house of representatives. With that letter as my sole reliance, I waited on the doorkeeper, camped in his office, followed him to his home, nagged his family, and finally secured his promise that I should be appointed as substitute for the first boy that should be absent sick. The very next morning a boy was reported sick. I collared the doorkeeper just in the nick of time. He had made the same promise to about 50 other boys; but all of them had homes in Washington, while I had none. I was the first to demand the temporary appointment, and I secured it. When the house met, I was ordered on the floor, and I must have had a hundred eyes in my head. Every time anyone called for a page, I was first to answer the call. I wanted to do all the work, and the other boys seemed quite willing to let me do it. Howell Cobb was speaker of the house, and Alex H. Stephens and Robert Toombs, of Georgia, were members. Inasmuch as Mr. Toombs had signed my application, I kept my eyes on him all the time, and never missed an opportunity of jumping to his desk to serve him.

"Late in the afternoon while Mr. Toombs and Mr. Stephens were conversing, there came in an awful big man, a giant with the biggest feet I had ever seen. I thought them the biggest feet in all the world. While I was looking at those feet a member back of Mr. Toombs clapped his hands for a page, and I immediately rushed in his direction. In passing that ponderous man with the feet I stumbled over him. I guess I must have jarred his bunions dreadfully, for he gave me his elbow in my ribs and nearly knocked the breath out of me, as he shouted: 'You careless little rascal; can't you see where you are going?'

STUMBLED OVER SCOTT'S FEET.

"Mr. Toombs laughed very heartily, but I was greatly chagrined over the incident. Having completed my errand for the member who had called me, I returned to my seat below the desk of the speaker. In a few minutes the big man slowly rose and left the floor of the house. Mr. Toombs called me and said: 'In all of the Mexican war not all of the enemies of his country ever jarred Gen. Winfield Scott as you jarred him just now.'

"I trembled in my little knee breeches at mention of the name of that great soldier, and felt that I might as well get off of the floor and off of the earth. But I was soon reassured by Mr. Toombs, who said it was a good joke. He pointed out a member across the aisle who had fairly good-sized feet, and told me that if I would go and stumble over them he would give me a dollar; but I declined the money, much as I needed it.

"Mr. Toombs then asked me if I wasn't a new boy on the floor, and I gave him my name, reminding him that he had been one of my indorsers on account of Reverdy Johnson. In reply to numerous questions, I told him all about myself, and how I happened to be on duty for only one day. He took an immediate interest in me, and went to the doorkeeper with me, to whom he said: 'Mr. Horner, I've recommended this boy, and I want to know why he isn't on the regular roll.' The doorkeeper explained that he was so crowded with applications that he could not find a place for me, but he promised Mr. Toombs that I should have the first vacancy on the regular roll."

"So, falling over the feet of Gen. Winfield Scott proved to be the beginning of my successful career as a page boy, for it attracted the personal attention of the great Robert Toombs, of Georgia, who became my firm friend.

"IS SENATOR DOUGLAS IN?"

"Inside of another week I ascertained that one of the boys was about to be taken off, by his parents, and I tackled the doorkeeper for the place. He put me off with the story that he was under so many other obligations that he could not take care of me. In great haste I reported to Mr. Toombs that the doorkeeper had refused to keep his promise and give me the first vacancy.

"'The devil you say,' remarked the statesman. 'I'll see for myself whether he puts you on or not.' Taking me by the hand he led me to the doorkeeper's room, and said: 'Why don't you put this boy on, as you agreed to do?'

"'My dear Mr. Toombs,' he replied, 'I cannot do it. I have made some other promises that I must first fulfill.'

"'The thunder you must!' said Mr. Toombs, most emphatically. 'You'll either put this boy in, or I'll put you out.'

"And that settled it. I was appointed, and from that day I was a page in the capitol until I got so big that I had no business there. And, until the day of his death, I retained the warm friendship of the great statesman from Georgia; and, moreover, I had the honor of his presence several times after I had achieved reputation and success on the stage."

One of the most interesting of the hundreds of interesting reminiscences of this quondam page boy, is the following:

"The first $25 that I ever made extra was well earned. Henry Clay's compromise bill was taken up unexpectedly and was about to be passed when nearly all of the opponents were absent. To kill time, some one was put up to make a speech, while the pages were sent hunting the absentees. Mr. Jeremiah Clemens, of Alabama, came to the house, and offered $25 to any boy who would find Senator Douglas, of Illinois. I had just come in from an errand, and asked all of the boys where they had been. I suggested half a dozen places, but the boys had been there. Finally I got an order for a horse, secured a skinny old nag, and went galloping up the avenue, a mile and a half away. Knocking at the door of a private residence, I asked if Senator Douglas was there, and was informed that he was. I said: 'Tell him the Clay compromise bill will pass unless he gets to the capitol and prevents it.'

"'Great heavens!' exclaimed Senator Douglas, as he appeared in the hallway. 'Let me have your horse, boy.'

"I started to walk back to the capitol and had not gone far when I was passed by Senator Douglas making for the capitol as fast as the animal could go. It was one of the funniest things I have ever seen—that large man, with immense body and little, short legs, riding down Pennsylvania avenue, and sitting his awkward mount in the most awkward manner. I took my time walking back to the capitol and received my $25 for bringing the great Illinois statesman into the debate on that compromise bill." SMITH D. FRY.

Polk county's Solons have returned. but nothwithstanding the fact that they had a solid republican delagation, and a solid republican legislature, they do not seem to have accomplish any more than an ordinar old moss back delegation would have done.

We knew you would say that, but give us a chance to look at the session laws before we answer, and if the present members did no more good than the former ones the republican party had better swap horses at the next primary election.

If The St. Hilair Spectator, would copy more extesively from our local colum, what they call litrary gems, into the editorial colum of that paper it might get the reputation of being alive. As to our error in our article we would just call the gentelmans attention to the fact, that if they will look a little above the article copied from us they will find the word in spelled IT, and the word vicinity devided on the second i, and has been that way for months a standing advertisement to the publishers, that are spending their time coregting the mistakes of others.

Tilden is getting to be quite a railway center that is going to be a big city some day. Why not get up a petition for the removel of the county seat from Crookston to Tilden, and have it in the center of the county and be content to live in peace and harmony in old Polk.

Under the new law for the removel of county seats only 25 per cent of the legal voters are required to sign a petition to call an election, and a majority vote at the election removes the county seat. It would be a very easy matter to get the required number of votes for the move and make Crookston the trouble of going to the supreame court to get them set aside.

How Savages Walk.

Savages always walk with their toes turned in for two reasons. In the first place the foot naturally falls in that position when it has never been confined by boots or the ankles distorted by high heels. In the long stride of the savage the leg swings freely like a pendulum round the center of gravity, which is somewhere between it and the other leg. In the swing the abductor muscles of the inside of the thigh bring the sole of the foot under the center of gravity, and in doing so slightly rotate the foot toward the inner line, turning the toe in. Convenience is also on the side of the natural position of the foot in the case of the savage, for he has to do much walking through long grass and undergrowth in forests.

A moment's reflection will show how very much his progress would be impeded if he turned his toes out to catch these obstacles instead of brushing them aside and outward as he now does. Lastly, the savage uses his foot much more as a help to his hands than we do, and it is obvious that in doing this he must turn his toes in.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philidelphia, as flows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guarenteed at Kronschnabel & Bolstad.

Animals and Alcohol.

Many animals yield to the seduction of rum drinking, especially elephants, horses, cows and swine. Poultry, especially turkeys, will absorb the tempting drink till they wabble over in leaden sleep, lying around as if dead and utterly ignoring their accustomed roost. On awakening they stagger for a few moments and soon recover, but it is hours before they renew their cheerful cackling.

DISGUISES OF NATURE.

The Quality of Defense Is Found in Every Animal.

By o decree of nature one-half the world flonrishes at the expense of the other half. The sparrow chased the hntterfly, but the hawk chases the sparrow. For the problem of life is twofold. It is not enongh merely to eat. It is necessary to avoid being eaten. Yet nature detests killing for killing's sake. Massacre forms no part of her great plan: So we see that every creature is provided with some more or less effective quality of defense by means of which the attacks of its natural enemies are rendered less frequent or less deadly.

Thus the antelope by means of its superior speed at times escapes from the lion. The armadillo, rolled in its wondrous coat of mail, lies secure among a score of hungry, gnawing foes, while the white hare, scarcely distinguishable from the snow on which it crouches, is often overlooked by his foe, the fox. But of all creatures none has received more ample protection than the insects. Some of them possess stings, others bite, and a few puff out clouds of poisonous vapor to stupefy or blind their pursuers. Again, there are insects clothed in impenetrable armor, insects covered with sharp spines and prickles and others whose means of defense consist in nothing but a likeness to the objects which surround them.—[illegible]

In Coils of A Snake

Desperate Fight For Life In the Jungles of Dutch Guiana.

How an American Prospector Overcame a Huge Boa Constrictor—A Lucky Shot In the Nick of Time.

J. S. Hendrickson of Feruando, Cal while prospecting for gold in the wilds of Dutch Guiana last year came neor losing his life in the folds of a huge boa constrictor. Mr. Hendrickson thus describes his awfnl experience:

Leaving the camp to look for game to replenish onr larder, I entered o jungle, my knife in my right hand to cut the entanglement of underhrush and my shotgun in my left. Instantly, without the least warning—no rattle, no rustic, no grunt—I felt myself struck with some tremendous force that laid hold of my body with the grasp of a Goliath.

THE SNAKE TIGHTENED ITS COILS.

The impetus of the attack carried me sprawling to the gronnd. I was in the toils of a boa constrictor. The snake had wrapped its long, sinuous arm abont me ond, with its tail securely coiled abont a tree os an onchor, proceeded to pull in its prey.

A numbness seized me as the huge serpent tightened its coils. In falling my knife was thrown from my hand. My shotgun fortunately still remained reody for use. Terrified beyond measure hy this awful hand stretched ont in death dealing embrace, the determination of despair came to my rescuc as I thought of my two comrades waiting my returu.

The boo in striking had lapped its body oround me, starting about three feet from the head, so its horrible head swayed near my own ond seemed to mock at my helplessness.

Every instant now was precious. I could feel myself slowly moving toward destruction. The serpent's hold seemed tighter than a rope around a windlass. It was oil utter impossibility to release it.

Shuddering at my impotency, I raised my shotgun to my left shonlder, aod with all the skill I could muster I aimed at the boa's wriggling body, hoping to hreak it in two by the force of the shot at such close range. The kick of the gun was followed immediately by a tremendous lashing and writhing of my toroientor, ond I knew that my shot had taken effect, although where I could not discern till the smoke cleared.

Already glorying in my release, I soon fonnd that I was reckoning withont my hoa coostrictor. Although the No. 10 shot had torn its shattering way through the entrails, it had not severed the body, and the hoa seemed to draw its now wounded body in a tighter grip abont my fettered form.

Hitherto the boa, content with its terrible powers of constriction, had not menaced me with its teeth. Now when it knew its gripping power was fast ebbing away from the effects of the wound it came upon me with gaping mouth, which threotened new danger for me. But as I had drawn the first blood in the encounter with the slimy monster my courage seemed to increase.

It was out of the question to reload the gun. I sconred the gronnd for my knife. I monaged to grasp it and struggled to my feet just as the hissing head, with mouth distended, made a savage lunge at me. In my overanxiety to bury the knife deep into the monster's head and put myself out of jeopardy with the first stroke I missed my aim, and the infuriated serpent bit my left arm slightly. With its wicked eyes gleaming it came at me again.

This time my hand was steadier, and I sank my knife into its head with telling effect. Again and again I stahbed the now weakening monster, gloating in my triumph as my antagonist's attacks decreased.

In a few moments more the fight was over, and I had completely severed the serpent's head from its crippled body.

WONDERS OF THE NEEDLE.

Beautiful Work of the Artisans of Former Centuries.

The wonders of the needle were in ancient times in Egypt, India, Babylonia ond Phœnicia mainly lavished hy women on veils and hangings for temples. Connoisseurs consider the veil decorating the tomh of Mohammed at Medina, priced at 10,000,000 rupees, the most marvelous piece of embroidery ever made. Its pattern, a cunning interlacing of scrolls and arabesques, exclusively delineated with rare pearls and precious stones, produces, when exposed in the rays of the sun, a stupendous effect of coloring, soft and harmonious and equal to the bold gracefulness of the design. Linen, silks, leather and the richest stuffs were in turn beantified with the little insignificant tool, the needle.

Diaphanous Indian muslin charmingly embroidered with green beetle wings is still renowned, as well as examples of painted spangles and artificial pearls strewn amid devices wrought in gold. Bnt where is now to be fonnd the incomparahle Decca muslin, thirty yards of which were once inclosed for a turban in an ordinary cocoanut incrusted with gems and presented hy a Persian ambassador to his master, the shah. Other varieties known as invisible have also disappeared. The term originated from the fact that when dipped in water or spread out on the grass the material was lost to the eye through its extreme fineness.

The trained fingers have disappeared, and through modern competition customers are no longer willing to pay the real value of genuine hard work. This superiority of eastern craftsmen over their western fellows was recognized centuries ago; first by Portuguese, who were in the habit of sending satin to India to be embroidered by the natives after European designs, a fashion which at times renders somewhat puzzling the classification of the marvels of handiwork.

The French followed suit, since the majority of the Louis XVI. court suits, including coat, waistcoat and breeches, in satin, velvet, [illegible] or corded silk, so exquisitely adorned with delicate sprays and admirable borders wrought in satin and tambour stitches, are due to the skill and industry of the Chinese, who have reproduced the French devices with floss silk in such lovely and fast colors which still appear in all their beauty, with a mellowness imparted by time, which further adds to their charm.—Ledger Monthly.

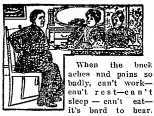
HARD TO BEAR.



When the back aches and pains so badly, can't work—can't rest—can't sleep — can't eat—it's hard to bear. Thousands of aching backs have been relieved and cured. People are learning that backache pains come from disordered Kidneys, that Doan's Kidney Pills cure every Kidney ill—cure Bladder troubles, urinary derangements, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's disease.

Read this testimony to the merit of the greatest of Kidney specifics:

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Kentucky, living on East Main Street in that city, says:

"With my nightly rest broken, owing to irregularities of the kidneys, suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys, and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions, life was anything but pleasant for me. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition, and for the reason that nothing seemed to give me even temporary relief, I became about discouraged. One day I noticed in the newspapers' the case of a man who was afflicted as I was and was cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. His words of praise for this remedy were so sincere that on the strength of his statement I went to the Hugh Murrey Drug Co.'s store and got a box. I found that the medicine was exactly as powerful a kidney remedy as represented. I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Walls will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

DOCTOR OR MILKMAN?

An Illustrative Instance of the Perversity of Some Simple-Minded Patients.

One of the hardest blows to the professional pride of physicians and surgeons is the excess of wisdom on all such subjects possessed by the world at large, says the New York Times. A surgeon tells of a case where he recently set a broken arm. The operation was successful and the splints had been removed. The surgeon advised his patient to leave off the bandages and manipulate the injured member at intervals.

Just as the doctor was leaving the house the milkman arrived on his rounds, and missing the splints, said to the patient: "You'll take cold in that arm. You ought to keep it bandaged."

A few days later the surgeon called again and found that the patient, who had followed the milkman's warning, complained of soreness in the arm, and said: "Doctor, I think you've botched it."

The doctor, observing the bandages still on the arm, remarked: "And whose advice are you taking now, mine or the milkman's?"

Frenchman Who Presented Reasonable Excuse for Not Understanding Our Language.

A Frenchman recently propounded through the columns of the Liverpool Daily Post a problem which may not be without interest for Americans. At any rate, it involves a principle of rhetoric which ought not to be disregarded, says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"I am in Liverpool since a month," writes the French gentleman, "and I saw many things the which I stupefy; but of these this most amaze me. On your tramcars one writes: 'Passengers are requested not to board or leave the car while in motion.' 'Board' I comprehend not. My friend say it is aborder to go on ship, therefore one me demanded not to go on car and not go off whilst in motion. How can that be? I see thousand passengers since four weeks go on and off a car, but they all go whilst in motion. Shall one explicate how passengers whilst not in motion have power to go on and off a car?"

GOV. RAMSEY DEAD.

The First Governor of Minnesota Passes to His Long Rest.

A Long and Useful Life is Ended—Death Came at a Ripe Old Age, Surrounded by His Family and Friends.

St. Paul, April 23.—Alexander Ramsey, aged 89, pioneer and first governor of the territory of Minnesota, died at his residence, 265 Exchange street, St. Paul, shortly after 6 o'clock last evening.

His death, while not wholly unforeseen, in view of his extreme age, and his illness since February last, was unexpected, and will come as a shock to the large number of friends whom he had gathered about him in this city, as well as to the people of Minnesota, to whom he was known during a long and honorable public career.

Alexander Ramsey was born near Harrisburg, Pa., on Sept. 8, 1815. His father, Thomas Ramsey, was of Scotch descent, and his mother was of a German family which early in the eighteenth century settled in Pennsylvania.

From his parents he inherited a strong constitution and a taste for study, which was developed during his boyhood by his schoolmaster, Isaac D. Rupp, who afterwards became prominent as a historical writer in Pennsylvania.

His father died when he was about 10 years old, and Frederick Kelker, a grand uncle, gave the orphan boy a home.

In 1837 he left college and commenced studying law with Hamilton Alricks, of Harrisburg, and two years later, when he was 24 years of age, he was admitted to the bar.

Within a short time he had established himself in practice at Harrisburg, and devoted himself largely to the settlement and administration of estates. He became quite successful and secured a large clientage.

While paying strict attention to his business, he also found time to engage in the active political campaign of 1840, and the following year was elected chief clerk of the Pennsylvania house of representatives.

In 1843 he was elected to congress from the district composed of Dauphin, Lebanon and Schuylkill counties.

In congress he was a useful rather than ornamental member, making no attempt at oratorical display. He exhibited unusual practical ability, and was noted for attending to the interests of his district.

In the following year he was re-elected and would have undoubtedly received a third term had he not declined a renomination.

On retiring from his congressional duties, Mr. Ramsey resumed his law practice, but could not entirely withdraw from politics, for the following year he was chosen chairman of the whig state committee, during the important campaign which resulted in the election of Taylor as president.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY.

This campaign also affected Mr. Ramsey's destinies to an important degree, for, in March, 1849, shortly after President Taylor came into office, he appointed Mr. Ramsey governor of the Minnesota territory, then recently established.

The appointment was accepted, and Mr. Ramsey at once came to St. Paul, arriving there on May 27th, 1849. Four days afterwards, the other territorial officers having arrived, he issued a proclamation, declaring the territory organized.

The first legislative body of Minnesota convened in two small rooms of a hotel on the banks of the Mississippi in St. Paul.

The governor read his first message to the joint convention of the two houses, twenty-seven members in all, assembled in the hotel dining-room.

Among the first acts of Governor Ramsey were efforts in the direction of extinguishment of the Indian titles by treaty, and the negotiations made at Mendota and Traverse de Sioux in 1851 brought some 40,000,000 acres of what is now the most valuable portion of the state, into settlement.

He was elected mayor of St. Paul in 1855, and when Minnesota was admitted to the union, Governor Ramsey was nominated for state governor by the republican party, but was not elected.

Two years later he was again nominated and received a handsome majority. He entered his office on Jan. 2, 1860. At that time the state was in debt and the treasury was empty, taxes were difficult to collect, and there were many difficulties connected with the administration of so young a state in war time, but the administration was successful.

At the time of the fall of Fort Sumter Governor Ramsey was in Washington on official business. Upon seeing the necessity for troops he at once called upon President Lincoln and tendered him a regiment of 1,000 men from Minnesota.

Governor Ramsey was re-elected in the fall of 1861, and his second term was more important and trying than the first. There were repeated calls for troops from the government, and five regiments were recruited in 1862.

In the middle of this activity occurred the Sioux massacre in the southwestern part of the state. With the rare executive ability which always characterized Governor Ramsey, he organized a battalion to go to the front to the relief of the besieged settlers.

In January, 1863, Governor Ramsey was elected United States senator from Minnesota, and in 1869, at the close of his term, he was re-elected for six years more.

His service in the senate was marked by the introduction of many important bills; including measures for the improvement of the Mississippi river, aiding of the Northern Pacific Railroad, the repeal of the franking abuse, and various measures for the benefit of the northwest. Being chairman of the senate committee on postoffices, he was especially interested in postal reforms.

For a few years after the close of his congressional term he enjoyed a period of rest from his official life, but on Dec. 10, 1879, President Hayes tendered him the portfolio of secretary of war. This position he filled with much honor during the remainder of President Hayes' administration. Under the "Edmunds law," which created a commission of five to control the affairs of the polygamists in Utah, Senator Ramsey was appointed in 1882 to serve on this board, and was elected its chairman.

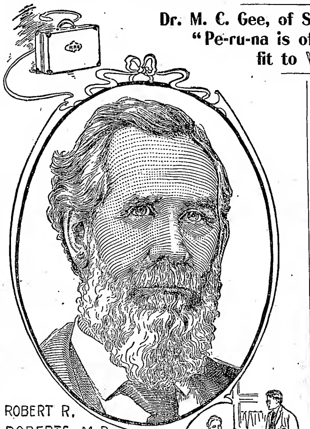
He filled this position for four years, resigning in 1886. It was his last public service.

During his long and active life as a public man in Minnesota, Governor Ramsey has been active in many movements for the benefit of his city and state not connected with official affairs. Since 1849 he was one of the most active members of the Minnesota Historical Society. He was president and director of the St. Paul public library and a leading member of the Old Settlers' Association, and an honored member of the Minnesota commandery, Loyal Legion.

On Sept. 10, 1845, Governor Ramsey married Miss Anna Earl Jenks, a daughter of Michael H. Jenks, a judge and congressman of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. They had two sons, both of whom died in infancy, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Furness.

PROMINENT PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE PE-RU-NA.

Dr. M. C. Gee, of San Francisco, Says, "Pe-ru-na is of Especial Benefit to Women."



ROBERT R. ROBERTS M.D

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."—Robert R. Roberts.

A CONSTANTLY increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their regular practice. It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession today. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of United States.

F. H. Brand, M. D., of Mokena, Ill., uses Peruna in his practice. The following case is an example of the success he has through the use of Peruna for catarrh.

Dr. Brand says: "Mrs. 'C.,' age 28, had been a sufferer from catarrh for the past seven years; could not hear plain and had watery eyes. She came to me almost a physical wreck. She had tried the Copeland cures and various other so-called specialists, and had derived no benefit from them. She told me she did not want to spend any more money on medicines unless I could assure her relief.

F. H. Brand, M. D.

"I put her on Peruna and told her to come back in two weeks. The effects were wonderful. The cast-down look she had when I first saw her had left her and a smile adorned her face. She told me she felt a different woman, her hearing was improved and her eyes did not trouble her any more.

"This is only one case of the many I have treated with your valuable medicine."—F. H. Brand, M. D.

Catarrh may invade any organ of the body; may destroy any function of the body. It most commonly attacks the head, nose and throat, but thousands upon thousands of cases of catarrh of the lungs, stomach, kidneys, bladder and other pelvic organs have been cured by Peruna.

Peruna is able to cure catarrh wherever it may be located by its direct action upon the mucous membranes. Catarrh means inflamed mucous membranes. Peruna acts at once to cleanse and invigorate the catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane no matter where it may occur in the body. Its action is the same on the mucous lining of the nose as on the mucous lining of the bowels. It cures the catarrhal inflammation wherever it may occur.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes:

"Peruna is the best medicine I know of for cough and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Beside prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and it fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope you may live long to do good to the sick and suffering."

We say Peruna cures catarrh. The people say Peruna cures catarrh. Prominent men and women all over the United States from Maine to California do not hesitate to come out in public print to say that Peruna is what it is recommended to be, an internal, systemic catarrh remedy that cures catarrh wherever it may be located.

Dr. M. C. Gee's Experience.

Dr. M. C. Gee is one of the physicians who endorse Peruna. In a letter written from 513 Jones street, San Francisco, Cal., he says:

"There is a general objection on the part of the practicing physician to advocate patent medicines. But when any one medicine cures hundreds of people, it demonstrates its own value and does not need the endorsement of the profession.

"Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of. I heartily endorse your medicine."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Women are especially liable to pelvic catarrh, female weakness as it is commonly called. Especially in the first few weeks of warm weather do the disagreeable symptoms of female weakness make themselves apparent. In crisp, cold weather chronic sufferers with pelvic catarrh do not feel so persistently the debilitating effects of the drain upon the system, but at the approach of summer with its lassitude and tired feelings, the sufferer with pelvic catarrh feels the need of a strengthening tonic.

Peruna is not only the best spring tonic for such cases but if persisted in will effect a complete cure. Write for a copy of "Health and Beauty," written especially for women by Dr. Hartman. If you want to read of some cures also, write for a copy of "Facts and Faces." That will surely convince you that our claims are valid.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Why He Called Her Peggy.

"I thought your wife's name was Elizabeth?"

"So it is."

"Then why do you call her Peggy?"

"Why, Pegasa is feminine for Pegasus."

"What of that?"

ON ROAD TO WEALTH

Two Colored Men with a Little Trust of Their Own.

They Control the Boot-Blacking Business of the Post Office Department and Are Making Good Money.

[Special Washington Letter.]

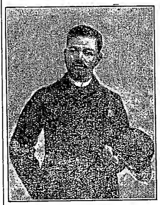
"MEN must know that in this theater of man's life it remaineth only to God and the angels to be lookers-on."

It required the brain of Bacon to think that thought and frame it in epigrammatic form, but the fact is appreciable to every one who has to toil or struggle; and as the world grows more and more strenuous, every man must feel that it is necessary for him to "get busy," according to the vernacular of the multitude.

Success is necessary to happiness. And he is not wholly unsuccessful who has not achieved the object of his earliest ambitions; for in the callow days we oftentimes overrate our abilities to achieve. Therefore while we properly advise every youth to "aim high," we may as well understand that there can be only one first violin in every orchestra. He is not wholly a failure who plays second fiddle and steadily as well as conscientiously pours a rich undercurrent of harmony into the music. There are millions who cannot even play second fiddle.

Without education, crippled, indigent and almost friendless, some years ago a young man entered the profession of journalism in this city, and made a success of it. He cannot to-day construe a sentence, nor correctly spell vernacular English, and yet he is a successful newspaper man, because he makes a good living at the business. With nobody to blaze the way for him, he marked out a track for himself through life. He noticed that all of the correspondents here were obliged to go to the executive department every day for information about appointments to post offices and other positions; to get decisions on land office matters, and to secure lists of pensions issued to their several states. The young man undertook to do this for all. He charged each man from two to five dollars per month, according to the amount of work required. His income has been in the neighborhood of $100 per month for many years; he regards himself as a thorough newspaper man; and yet his education is such that his utterances are atrocious, when they are considered as the sayings of a trained journalist. He has succeeded, and deserves all credit for his achievements. He plays second fiddle, and does it exceedingly well.

Two young colored men have successfully tackled the problem of life and its labors in the post office department building, in which is also established the office of the treasury auditor for the post office department. These colored brothers, Rufus and Jerry, have formed a bootblack trust. They have a monopoly of the privilege of chasing themselves through the corridors from clerk to clerk, blacking boots for 50 cents per month. They have so many clerks on their list that each of them makes upwards of $80 per month. One of the clerical employes wrote the following:



JERRY R. JOHNSON.

In this massive granite structure,
  With official life replete,
You may see two humble workers
  Who are artists for the feet.
'Tis a servile occupation,
  Which perhaps you would refuse,
But for Rufus and for Jerry
  There is bread in glossing shoes.

They are brothers and are colored—
  May be classed as "black and tan"—
But in manly, good behavior,
  Each is every inch a man.
Both suave, polite and cheerful,
  Each is skillful in his work,
And they seek no other honor
  Than to gloss the gov'ment clerk.

There's a wonderful resemblance
  In these artists of the gloss,
Should you ever see them once together
  You could never guess the boss.
For Jerry looks like Rufus,
  And Rufus shows his kin,
So the one may be the other;
  For the other one is twin.

Other bootblacks in the vicinity denounce the Johnson brothers as typical of the great trusts which are said to be crushing the life out of small dealers of various sorts. But these Johnson brothers never pay any more attention to the whiners who make faces at them than J. Pierp pays to the unsuccessful who shy bricks at him as he pushes ahead with his enterprises.

As stated in the verses, these brothers are twins. They are about 30 years of age, and look so much alike that even the clerks whose shoes they have been shining for years cannot tell "t'other from which." About ten years ago one of them was a lunchroom waiter and the other a newsboy. The lunch room in which one of the Johnsons worked was located in the post office department building; so he happened to be on hand when an old bookblack was driven from the department because of the inexplainable disappearance of a pocketbook. Young Johnson applied for the privilege, and it was granted. He worked so diligently and faithfully that he became quite popular with the employes of both sexes. The ladies particularly took a shine to the boy who shined their shoes, and patronage increased until he needed help, and called his brother from the street to become his assistant in the business.

RUFUS HENRY JOHNSON.

These successful workers are perfectly silent, never uttering one word except in reply to questions. They come flitting into an office room, drop to their knees before their customers, lift a foot onto a box and go to work. The clerks keep on with their work, too, so that this monopoly does not interfere with the time of the government employes. Outside of office hours the Johnson brothers may be heard whistling and singing, for they have reason to be mirthful. They are the only monopolists or trust magnates who do not lose any sleep over the variations of the markets.

These hard workers are wise fellows, too. They noted that every two years the government clerks go to their homes to vote, in order to keep themselves politically solid. Well, the Johnson brothers go home to Syracuse every two years to vote. One of them votes the democratic and the other the republican ticket. Consequently they are not worrying over any possibility of a change in the administration of government. It costs some money to go to Syracuse, too; but they believe it to be wisely expended. If a political change should come, the democratic brother would produce affidavits from friends that he had always voted the democratic ticket; and he would be placed at the head of the monopoly; but the other brother would continue to divide work and profits with him.

Thousands of government clerks would not pay, nor be able to pay, for having their shoes shined every day, even at five cents per shine; for that would amount to $1.50 per month. But when it comes to paying only 25 cents on pay days, the fifteenth and thirtieth of each month, and having credit with the Johnson brothers between pay days, scores of clerks have jumped at the chance to have their footwear always kept in good order, or in the appearance of good order.

These deserving colored Dromios look alike, even to the smallest kinks in their hair and mustaches, walk alike, dress alike, talk alike—are of the same color, and amusing mistakes are made by and with them. They used to have trouble collecting their money and keeping accounts straight, because clerks would be asked to pay who paid yesterday, and investigation would prove that they had paid to the other twin. Now they have a system of collecting by which errors are avoided.

Another poet in the department, who sometimes brightens the columns of a local newspaper, devotes to Rufus and Jerry a few lines of more than ordinary merit:

Honest labor doth ennoble
  Both the scepter and the brush,
If one toils within a palace
  Or down near grime and slush.
It is character we're building,
  It is purpose that controls;
We may find the kingly virtues
  As the wealth of honest souls.

So, you see, that these Dromios have attracted the attention of men of more than ordinary talent. They have plenty of friends, and there are no enemies in sight save those on the outside, who envy them the privilege of shining the clerks' shoes. Jerry is after a government job. He has passed an examination, and hopes to some day receive an appointment in the civil service as a laborer.

And hundreds of people would applaud the appointment of the colored man who has blazed his own pathway.

We present our readers with a copy of the session laws this week. Read them over carefully and preserve them for future reference.

If Hon. F. M. Eddy enters the gubernatorial race, the candidate that defeats him for the nomination will have the appearance of haveing been in a political 'scrap'. Eddy should not be handicaped by opposition from the old 7th congressional district, if he becomes an active candidate.

Gen. Miles report of the conditions in the Philippines, will not be given much credence by loyal Americans, as his information was obtained from a hostile foe. If the good old man had interviewed the Spaniards after the battle of Manila, they would told him, that Dewey had shamefully abused them.

Down in Georgia they disfranchise the "niggers" by an enactment of the legislature. In Polk county Minnesota the saintly City of Crookston would disfranchise the whites by a decision of the supreme court. The Georgia method would be preferable, to the Crookston scheme, as it would save the farmers the time lost going to election to vote.

Members of the legislature say that among the prominent candidates for governor before the next state convention will be Judg Collins, Frank Eddy, Robert C. Dunn, C. A. Inseth, Dr. Babcock, and Senator Lord. The returns are not all in yet. In this list no mention is made of Joel Heatwole, and when it comes time to harvest the real helthy booms Jole's, is likmely to be found one of the most robust.

Crookston Journal.

It may be all right to talk about booms, but the man that has the power to disfrachise the common voter is the man that will win, for if he should not win on the first ballot Crookston could bring an action in supreme court to have the vote set aside, and of course they would win.

If there is no remedy but to take the decision of the supreme court on the question of the division of this county, then it would be proper for the people, before voting to ask that august body how to vote. The voters of the eastern end of this county voted solid yes, for county division at the last election, notwithstanding they were not agreed where they wanted the county seat of the new county located. That desision of the supreme court was just as unsatisfactory to the average voter in this end of Polk county, who voted for Nelson or Star county as it was to the ones that cast their vote for Columbia county. What the farmer wanted was division, because they are to far from the county seat, and let the villages settle the county seat question afterward. Friends of Nelson county were in hopes, that county would be established, but when the court said no county, they were as much offended as the friends of Columbia county, and freely express the opinion, that the supreme court of this State would deny them the privilege of an American citizen to express his opinion at the ballot box.

A THOUGHTFUL MAN.

M. M. Austain of Winchester, Ind. knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusal case of stomach and liver trouble, physicans could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finall cured. Only 25c at Kronschnabel & Bolstads.

The Essential Thing.

The primary class in Sunday school was listening to a lesson on patience. This, according to the Boston Herald, was what came of it, ot least in the minds of the more literal minded children:

The topic had been carefully explained, and as an aid to understanding the teacher had given each pupil a card bearing the picture of a boy fishing.

"Even pleasure," said she, "requires the exercise of patience. See the boy fishing. He must sit and wait and wait. He must be patient."

Having treated the subject very fully, she began with the simplest, most practical question:

"And now can any little boy tell me what we need most when we go fishing?" The answer was shouted with one voice:

"Bait!"

What Makes Things Grow.

According to Maurice Springer, a French writer on the subject, the energy of growth is closely related to electric energy and may be identical with it. At any rate, growth energy is closely connected with the phenomenon called osmosis—that is, molecular pressure due to differences of density in adjacent liquid masses. Such molecular pressure in the cells of the body he believes to be the phenomenon that underlies the multiplication of these cells in growth, and osmosis has been shown by experiment to be closely connected with electricity. The writer referred to believes that we shall soon be able to measure growth energy as we now do heat or electricity and perhaps control it so as to produce tall or short families or races at our pleasure.—Success.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnabel & Bolstad.

Perfectly Safe.

A tourist in a remote part of Ireland, having stayed the night at a wayside inn not usually frequented by visitors, informed the landlord in the morning that his boots, which had been placed outside his room door to be cleaned, had not been touched.

"Ah, shure," said the landlord, "and you moight put your watch and chain outside your room door in this house, and they wouldn't be touched."—London King.

Naval Discipline.

The force of naval discipline is shown in this true story of the captain who, fatally smitten with cholera, was being taken ashore to the hospital. The story is told in "Sport In the Navy."

The captain's men were rowing as slowly and gently as possible in order not to disturb him. The dying captain beckoned the midshipman in charge of the boat and whispered these last words:

"Ten days' black list for the crew for not giving way!"

Sleep Methods.

It is said that hours of sleep can be regulated by two simple methods: First, never allow yourself to be awakened, but insist on being undisturbed until you awaken naturally; second, get up the minute you are awake. The hours of sleep will soon become adapted to the requirements of your constitution.

We present our readers with a copy of the session laws this week. Read them over carefully and preserve them for future reference.

If Hon. F. M. Eddy enters the gubernatorial race, the candidate that defeats him for the nomination will have the appearance of haveing been in a political 'scrap'. Eddy should not be handicaped by opposition from the old 7th congressional district, if he becomes an active candidate.

Gen. Miles report of the conditions in the Philippines, will not be given much credence by loyal Americans, as his information was obtained from a hostile foe. If the good old man had interviewed the Spaniards after the battle of Manila, they would told him, that Dewey had shamefully abused them.

Down in Georgia they disfranchise the "niggers" by an enactment of the legislature. In Polk county Minnesota the saintly City of Crookston would disfranchise the whites by a decision of the supreme court. The Georgia method would be preferable, to the Crookston scheme, as it would save the farmers the time lost going to election to vote.

Members of the legislature say that among the prominent candidates for governor before the next state convention will be Judg Collins, Frank Eddy, Robert C. Dunn, C. A. Inseth, Dr. Babcock, and Senator Lord. The returns are not all in yet. In this list no mention is made of Joel Heatwole, and when it comes time to harvest the real helthy booms Jole's is likely to be found one of the most robust.

Crookston Journal.

It may be all right to talk about booms, but the man that has the power to disfrachise the common voter is the man that will win, for if he should not win on the first ballot Crookston could bring an action in supreme court to have the vote set aside, and of course they would win.

If there is no remedy but to take the decision of the supreme court on the question of the division of this county, then it would be proper for the people, before voting to ask that august body how to vote. The voters of the eastern end of this county voted solid yes, for county division at the last election, notwithstanding they were not agreed where they wanted the county seat of the new county located. That desision of the supreme court was just as unsatisfactory to the average voter in this end of Polk county, who voted for Nelson or Star county as it was to the ones that cast their vote for Columbia county. What the farmer wanted was division; because they are to far from the county seat, and let the villages settle the county seat question afterward. Friends of Nelson county were in hopes, that county would be established, but when the court said no county, they were as much offended as the friends of Columbia county, and freely express the opinion, that the supreme court of this State would deny them the privilege of an American citizen to express his opinion at the ballot box.

A THOUGHTFUL MAN.

M. M. Austain of Winchester, Ind. knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c at Kronschnabel & Bolstads.

The Essential Thing.

The primary class in Sunday school was listening to a lesson on patience. This, according to the Boston Herald, was what came of it, at least in the minds of the more literal minded children:

The topic had been carefully explained, and as an aid to understanding the teacher had given each pupil a card bearing the picture of a boy fishing.

"Even pleasure," said she, "requires the exercise of patience. See the boy fishing. He must sit and wait and wait. He must be patient."

Having treated the subject very fully, she began with the simplest, most practical question:

"And now can any little boy tell me what we need most when we go fishing?" The answer was shouted with one voice:

"Bait!"

What Makes Things Grow.

According to Maurice Springer, a French writer on the subject, the energy of growth is closely related to electric energy and may be identical with it. At any rate, growth energy is closely connected with the phenomenon called osmosis—that is, molecular pressure due to differences of density in adjacent liquid masses. Such molecular pressure in the cells of the body he believes to be the phenomenon that underlies the multiplication of these cells in growth, and osmosis has been shown by experiment to be closely connected with electricity. The writer referred to believes that we shall soon be able to measure growth energy as we now do heat or electricity and perhaps control it so as to produce tall or short families or races at our pleasure.—Success.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnabel & Bolstad.

Perfectly Safe.

A tourist in a remote part of Ireland, having stayed the night at a wayside inn not usually frequented by visitors, informed the landlord in the morning that his boots, which had been placed outside his room door to be cleaned, had not been touched. "Ah, shure," said the landlord, "and you might put your watch and chain outside your room door in this house, and they wouldn't be touched."—London King.

Naval Discipline.

The force of naval discipline is shown in this true story of the captain who, fatally smitten with cholera, was being taken ashore to the hospital. The story is told in "Sport In the Navy."

The captain's men were rowing as slowly and gently as possible in order not to disturb him. The dying captain beckoned the midshipman in charge of the boat and whispered these last words:

"Ten days' black list for the crew for not giving way!"

Sleep Methods.

It is said that hours of sleep can be regulated by two simple methods: First, never allow yourself to be awakened, but insist on being undisturbed until you awaken naturally; second, get up the minute you are awake. The hours of sleep will soon become adapted to the requirements of your constitution.

How Sleigh Bells Are Made.

"Tha making of sleigh bells is quite an art," says an iron founder. "The little iron ball is too big to be put in through the holes in the bell, and yet it is inside. How did it get there? The little iron ball is called 'the jinglet.' When you shake the sleigh bell it jingles. In making the bell the jinglet is put inside a little ball of mud, just the shape of the inside of the bell. Then a mold is made, just the shape of the outside of the bell. The mud ball with the jinglet inside is placed in the mold of the outside, and the metal is poured in, which fills up the space between the ball and the mold.

"When the mold is taken off you see a sleigh bell, but it will not ring, as it is full of dirt. The hot metal that the ball is made of dries the dirt so that it can be shaken out. After the dirt is all shaken out of the holes in the bell the little iron jinglet will still be in the bell and will ring. It took a good many years to think out how to make a sleigh bell."

HOLDING A CIGAR.

Points In a Man's Character the Act Is Said to Disclose.

Did you ever notice the different ways men hold cigars or cigarettes? Did you ever observe how you yourself hold one?

There are about a dozen different ways, and probably no two men hold their cigars exactly alike.

A judge of human nature may pick up interesting points as to character from watching smokers.

One man will hold his cigar firmly between thumb and forefinger. He is usually a resolute, tenacious man, strenuous or merely phlegmatic, as the case may be, but never lazy. His fingers are stumpy.

Another man holds the cigar loosely between his first and second fingers. He is apt to be graceful, lazy, irresolute, a man of artistic temperament, but not a hustler. His fingers are long and tapering.

A third man will carry his cigar with the lighted end turned in toward the palm, the hand held scoop shape around it. He picked up that trick when smoking on the sly as a boy, fearing papa might break suddenly into the game. He is usually of a secretive nature and not marked by any special tendency to frankness.

A fourth will hold his cigar awkwardly, nervously gripping it and often staring at it inquisitively to see how it is burning. He is not a "natural smoker," nor is he apt to be what is known as a "good fellow." He is usually anxious to conciliate others and has not great force of character.

Watch the man behind the cigar and see if all these character drawings are not correct.—New York World.

A CHEAP SQUARE MEAL.

Successful Scheme That Was Worked by Two Hungry Men.

"One of the cleverest 'grafts' I ever saw was worked the other day in a quick lunch restaurant on Park row," said the Observer. "I noticed two men talking earnestly just below the place as I was going in to get my lunch. One of them followed me in and took a seat just below me at the table. A few seconds later the other entered and took a seat just opposite his friend, whom he did not appear to know. The first man ordered a very extensive dinner, commencing with soup and ending with charlotte russe and coffee. He got the very best that the place could afford, and his check for $1.35 was placed in front of him. The other man took his time about ordering, taking corned beef and beans—10 cents' worth. His check was placed in the center of the table, between the two men.

"Number one ate hastily and finished first. He got up, put on his hat and then calmly picked up the ten cent check that belonged to his friend. Without turning a hair he went to the desk, paid 10 cents and walked out. A few minutes later number two, who had been reading the paper, prepared to leave and took up the remaining check. He appeared greatly surprised and called the waiter, asking for an explanation. There was nothing for the knight of the napkin to do but give the man a new ten cent check, as it was very evident that he had not eaten $1.35 worth of food. I suppose that the two met outside and at the next place visited number two got the "square" meal.—New York Mail and Express.

Crabs and Earthquakes.

For some time previous to the day upon which the great Chilean earthquake of August, 1857, occurred great swarms of crabs of an unknown variety were seen in the bay of Payta. They all appeared to be greatly excited and were literally climbing over each other in their efforts to escape the impending calamity.

How they knew that the earthquake was collecting its strength to desolate the coast is more than man can say, but that they knew something unusual was about to happen there is no doubt whatever.

That there were millions of them may be inferred from the report of Dr. Forbes, who says that "ten days after the earthquake the dead crabs were thrown upon the beach in a wall-like line three or four feet wide along the whole extent of the bay."

What the Dickens!

The London Chronicle declares that "What the dickens!" has nothing to do with the novelist. It is as old as Shakespeare, who in the "Merry Wives of Windsor" makes Mrs. Page say to Ford, "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is." And so the word—a palpable diminutive of Dick, like Wilkins and Hodgkins and Watkins—came into use as a substitute for another and more important D. As to "play the dickens," one thinks of Smollett and Humphry Clinker and the immortal scene in which the lion "would roar and tear and play the dickens," and in comparatively late times Thomas Moore could write:

Like the Goths who played the dickens
With Rome and all her sacred chickens.

A French Dog Story.

A Parisian lady went out recently for a walk in the Avenue de Clichy, taking with her a toy terrier, which she held by a string. While she was looking into a shop window two mischievous boys substituted a bone for the dog. A Great Dane then appeared on the scene, and, seeing the bone, made a dash and swallowed it, string included. The lady turned round and [illegible] had eaten her pet. The little dog was found later on, much to the joy of his mistress, who carried him off in [illegible].

It is not a waste to buy somebody a bunch of flowers, a box of candy or a new book when it is going to bring a smile to her face and happiness to her [illegible].

MEALS BY WHOLESALE.

Extensive Kitchen Arrangements of the Modern Hotel.

The kitchen arrangements of the modern hotel are on the first basement floor. There is a chef, but so far as I could see he does not cook. He is simply a captain of the seventy-five other cooks, who work in three relays of twenty-five each. There is no range, but a solid bank of broilers—immense gridirons, beneath which are the fires that never die. As for the 400 loaves of bread and 8,000 rolls required daily the chef does not worry his mind over the potent cutters and mixers and ovens and staff of bakers needed to supply the simple item of bread or concern himself with the quality of the 1,100 pounds of butter that are each day required to go with it.

I must not forget the item of eggs. Eighteen thousand are required every twenty-four hours. Boiled eggs do not get overdone. They are boiled by clockwork. A perforated dipper containing the eggs drops down into the water. The dipper's clockwork is set to the second, and when that final second has expired the little dipper jumps up out of the water, and the eggs are ready for delivery. There are men who do nothing else but fill and watch and empty these dancing dippers and it seemed to me great fun.

On another part of this floor is the dishwashing, where great galvanized baskets lower the pieces into various solutions of potash and clean rinsing water, all so burning hot that the dishes dry instantly without wiping. Sixty-five thousand pieces of chinaware are cleansed in a day and an almost equal quantity of silver. All told, there are 300 employees in the kitchen departments of this huge living machine.—Albert Bigelow Paine in World's Work.

SUCCESSFUL SMUGGLER.

The Schemes He Worked to Deceive the Customs Officials.

"There is money in smuggling," said the retired dealer in precious stones as he leaned back, "but it is dangerous to carry on the business, as possible suspects are carefully watched and, if necessary, traced till they are finally caught. However, I knew one man who pursued the trade of diamond smuggling for fifteen years and was able to retire to respectability. He was buyer for one of the large business houses in New York, and his business sent him to Europe two, three and sometimes four times a year. Every time he returned he had with him from $10,000 to $20,000 worth of gems which he did not declare.

"His trick was perfect simplicity combined with ingenious boldness. His hair was scanty, and at the top of his head he had a most delightful little bald spot. Customs officers as they came and went all knew him, and as they knew him he had a most pronounced wen where his other acquaintances saw a bald spot. That wen was a work of art, made of wax and gum, and it contained two or three big stones that would have been a find for the men on the pier.

"The good cigar that he had just lit and allowed to go out held a few more, and sewed in the handle of the grip that he carelessly turned over to the inspection of the officers were the rest of the gems. He never varied the trick, and he never lost. Each trip was worth a couple of hundred dollars to him and a great many hundred more to those who employed him. Why, that man considered himself strictly honest. He would not cheat a man in a bargain, but would get ahead of the government."—New York Press.

Gory.

"What do you gain by deluging every street of Paris with blood?" demanded dripping Danton.

"At least I will make a great alley gory," reasoned Robespierre, glancing down the Rue Royale at the waiting guillotine.—Yale Record.

Salary and Wages.

Daughter—Yes, pa, there are two young men who have asked me to marry, and both are nice fellows.

Father—And are both in a way to support you?

Daughter—I think so. Phil tells me he has a tidy salary, and George says he is receiving good wages.

Father—You choose George, and you will make no mistake, I think. At any rate, it's safer to marry a man who has wages than one who has a salary.—Boston Transcript.

Little Elmer while out walking with his nurse saw a blacksmith shoeing a horse and upon returning home said: "Mamma, I saw the man who makes horses today."

"For some years I suffered with backache, severe bearing-down pains, leucorrhœa, and falling of the womb. I tried many remedies, but nothing gave any positive relief.

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in June, 1901. When I had taken the first half bottle, I felt a vast improvement, and have now taken ten bottles with the result that I feel like a new woman. When I commenced taking the Vegetable Compound I felt all worn out and was fast approaching complete nervous collapse. I weighed only 98 pounds. Now I weigh 109½ pounds and am improving every day. I gladly testify to the benefits received."—Mrs. R. C. Tupman, 423 West 30th St., Richmond, Va.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me?"

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women. Perhaps she has just the knowledge that will help your case—try her to-day—it costs nothing.

DUTY OF CITIZENS.

How Personal Property is Listed and Assessed.

The state auditor has just issued the following notice to county auditors and assessors, which affords information every citizen should possess:

A study of assessment returns must convince anyone, that thousands of personal property owners are escaping taxation. It is the purpose in this circular to direct the attention of assessors to certain laws relating to the duties of property owners and assessors.

Section 1515, Statutes of Minnesota, 1894. "Personal property shall be listed in the manner following:

First. Every person of full age and sound mind, being a resident of this state, shall list all his moneys, credits, bonds or stocks, shares of stock, of joint-stock or other companies (when the property of such company is not assessed in this state) moneys loaned or invested, annuities, franchises, royalties, and other personal property.

Second. He shall also list separately, and in the name of his principal, all moneys and other personal property invested, loaned, or otherwise controlled by him as the agent or attorney, or on account of any other person or persons, company or corporation whatsoever; and all moneys deposited subject to his order, check or draft, and credits due from or owing by any person or persons, body corporate or politic.

Third. The property of a minor child shall be listed by his guardian, or by the person having such property in charge.

Fourth. The property of an idiot or lunatic, by the person having charge of such property.

Fifth. The property of a wife, by her husband, if of sound mind; if not, by herself.

Sixth. The property of a person for whose benefit it is held in trust, by the trustee; of the estate of a deceased person, by the executor or administrator.

Seventh. The property of corporations whose assets are in the hands of receivers, by such receivers.

Eighth. The property of a body politic or corporate, by the president or proper agent or officer thereof.

Ninth. The property of a firm or company, by a partner or agent thereof.

Tenth. The property of manufacturers and others in the hands of an agent, by such agent in the name of his principal, as merchandise."

Section 1523, Statutes 1894. "Every person required by this act to list property shall make out and deliver to the assessor, when required, a statement, verified by his oath, of all the personal property in his possession or under his control, and which, by the provisions of this act, he is required to list for taxation, either as owner or holder thereof, or as guardian, parent, husband, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, accounting officer, partner, agent, or factor; but no person shall be required to include in his statement any share or portion of the capital stock or proprty of any company or corporation which such company is required to list or return as its capital and property for taxation in this state."

Section 1542, Statutes 1894. "The assessor shall call at the office, place of doing business or residence of each person required by this act to list property and list his name, and shall require such person to make a correct statement of his taxable property in accordance with the provisions of this act; and every person so required shall enter a true and correct statement of such property, in the form prescribed, which statement shall be signed and verified by the oath of the person listing the property, and delivered to the assessor, who shall thereupon assess the value of such property, and enter the same in his books; provided, if any property is listed or assessed on or after the fourth Monday in June, and before the return of the assessor's books, the same shall be as legal and binding as if listed and assessed before that time."

Section 1546, Statutes of 1894. "In all cases of a failure to obtain a statement of personal property, from any cause, it shall be the duty of the assessor to ascertain the amount and value of such property, and assess the same at such amount as he believes to be the true value thereof. The assessor, when requested, shall deliver to the person assessed a copy of the statement hereinbefore required showing the valuation of the property so listed, which copy shall be signed by the assessor."

Assessors should see to it that every man and woman in his district is provided with a blank for listing personal property, which statement should be properly filled out and sworn to and delivered to the assessor within a given time. Notice should be served, that if the statement does not reach the assessor on time, an arbitrary assessment will be made as authorized by law.

LOVE DESCRIBED.

As It Is in That Delightful Season When the Bumble Bees Begin to Bum.

Judge Ryder in the Granite Enterprise thus desribes his own love affair, says the Kansas City Journal. "As early as last spring, when the grasshoppers first began to hop and the bumble bees first started on the bum, when the bob white was whistling up his mate and the spring poet was springing his poetry, Judge Ryder, who had bustled in this breathing world for 34 long summers, showed symptoms of a he-dove nature. He had met the enemy of his bachelorhood and was her'n. A courtship was begun, a result of which is now a part of Granite and Greer county history. Such results have been the culmination of such beginnings ever since Eros seized his life-giving arrows and pierced the cold bosom of this old earth, and such will be the culmination of such beginnings, dear reader, till the end of the chapter. The matrimonial bond is the most sacred of all human contracts. It is dictated by nature, advocated by Cupid and smiled upon by Providence. It removes the cloud on the title of a man's right to citizenship, and completes the existence of woman, which is love. A man's existence without the clinging love of a good wife is as bare and desolate as a lattice gallery which does not support a morning glory in the spring."

HIS TIME WAS NOT UP.

And Father Made Him Take Off His Good Clothes and Work Another Half Day.

A man of a mercenary spirit had several sons, one of whom was on the eve of his twenty-first birthday. The father had always been a strict disciplinarian, keeping his boys well under parental charge, allowing them few liberties and making them work hard, relates Youth's Companion.

It was with a feeling of considerable satisfaction that the young man rose on the morning of his birthday and began to collect his personal belongings preparatory to starting out in the world.

The farmer, seeing his son packing his trunk, which he rightly judged to be evidence of the early loss of a good farmhand, stopped at the door of the young man's room and asked what he was going to do.

The boy very promptly reminded his father of the day of the month and the year, and declared his intention of striking out in the world on his own account.

"Not much you won't," shouted the old man, "at least not for awhile yet. You wasn't born until after 12 o'clock, so you can just take off them good clothes and fix to give me another half-day's work down in the potato patch."

Feels Younger and Stronger.

Festus, Mo., May 4th.—Mr. January S. Lilly, a highly respected old gentleman, aged 76, and whose home is in Festus, says:

"For many years I was failing in health. My kidneys were weak and gave me no end of trouble. I had pains in my back and hips so bad that I could not sit up straight without bracing my back, and could not sit only a few minutes in any one position.

"I had to get up during every night very frequently to relieve myself.

"Our doctor said I had Kidney and Bladder Inflammation. I have suffered for over five years in this way, always worse at night.

"I could get no relief and was getting worse till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"After I had used a few boxes of this remedy I felt stronger and better than I have for years and years. My pains all left me and I can rest and sleep.

"Every old man or woman who feels as I felt should use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I am sure they will not be disappointed. They brought me out wonderfully."

Reliable Recipe.

A case of toadstool poisoning at Wichita leads a correspondent to ask for some "reliable recipe whereby one may tell the mushroom from the toadstool." We believe that the only reliable test of these plants was given by the late Artemus Ward—"if you eat 'em and live, they're mushrooms; if you eat 'em and die, they're toadstools." And this is so simple and reliable that it ought to be in use in every family.—Kansas City Journal.

"PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE,"

Writes Mrs. W. McRoberts.

Women Made Strong and Happy Mothers.

Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs is a Frequent Cause of Barrenness.

Pe-ru-na Eradicates Catarrh From the System.

To the woman of ancient Israel not to become a mother was regarded as the greatest of earthly calamities. To become a mother—more especially the mother of a strong, healthy boy—was the height of glory for the faithful woman of the good old Bible days. Even now, when maternity is not esteemed as of yore, the mother of healthy children is an object of admiration, and sometimes envy, by her neighbors. As compared with ancient peoples, the average American woman has a low appreciation of motherhood. There are, however, a great many exceptions to this statement.

The accompanying letters from grateful women who have been made strong, healthy and happy mothers need no added words of ours to make them convincing. Catarrh had weakened and impaired their entire systems. Peruna made them sound and well.

Mrs. L. M. Griffith, Arco, Idaho, writes:

"Your medicine did me a wonderful amount of good. It cured me of barrenness. I am 30 years old and never had any children; but since beginning your medicine I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl. She is now six months old and weighs 25 pounds. My friends were all surprised. Some would not believe it until they came to see me.

"My husband says he never saw such a change in any one as there was in me after I had taken three or four bottles of Peruna. I am stronger than I have been since I was quite young. God bless you and your medicine forever. I can not tell you all. My letter is too long already; but I will say Peruna cured me. I never saw or heard of anything half so good. I can never thank you enough for your kindness. In cases of la grippe it works like a charm. It cured my baby when other medicines failed. She was real bad with la grippe."—Mrs. L. M. Griffith.

Mrs. E. E. Thomas, Alpha, Mo., writes:

"I have used your Peruna and Manalin. I had been doctoring for several years, but kept getting worse. One day a neighbor woman brought me your book, the "Ills of Life," and wanted me to take your medicine. I told her that I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I had tried so much medicine. My neighbors thought I was nearly dead with consumption.

"Finally I concluded that I would make a last trial. So my husband got me a bottle of Peruna and Manalin. I commenced taking them according to directions. That was two years ago. A year ago last November I gave birth to a 10-pound baby boy, who is well and hearty; and I am doing my own housework. I can never give Peruna too great praise. I think it is the best medicine I ever heard of."—Mrs. E. E. Thomas.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A YOUNG MOTHER'S LETTER.

Mrs. W. McRoberts, writes to Dr. Hartman from Delano, Miss., the following:

Delano, Miss.

Doctor S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"I feel perfectly well of catarrh. I did as you directed me to and took Peruna and Manalin. The third of March I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl and we are both well and happy. I am very thankful to you, and Peruna saved my life. I recommend it to everyone and can't praise it enough.

"I send you my own and my baby's picture. She is so sweet and good,—she is a Peruna baby. I have such good health now. I do all my housework and take care of my baby, and feel so good.

"There are three or four of my neighbors using Peruna now, since it did me so much good. They were just run down, and they think it is fine. It is so good to give strength."—Mrs. W. McRoberts.

The Effect of Fast Time.

One result of the placing in service of the Twentieth Century Limited, the New York Central's twenty-hour train between New York and Chicago, is to bring not only Chicago but the entire West practically 200 miles nearer New York. For instance, a man can leave St. Paul or Minneapolis Monday evening and by taking the Twentieth Century Limited from Chicago be in New York Wednesday morning; thirty-six hours from home. Or, if he is in Colorado he can leave Denver Saturday night, have several hours' layover in Chicago Monday morning, and, taking the Twentieth Century Limited, be in New York at 9:30 Tuesday morning. —From the Brooklyn Standard Union.

U. S. MARINE CORPS.

Barracks It Occupies Have a Wide Historic Interest.

Time Was When They Were the Center of Washington's Social Life —Built as Camp for British Cavalry.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE marine band is a famous musical organization of which everybody has read or heard, but very little is known concerning the marine corps itself. The marines are the policemen of the navy, walking their beats and maintaining order aboard ship, just as the policemen in our cities walk their beats and make crime and disorder difficult.

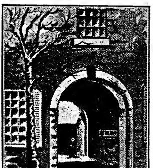
As the navy has grown the marine corps has increased in numbers until it is now as strong as a brigade of soldiers, and as efficient, for the men are well drilled and disciplined. The barracks in this city is as heavy with reminiscences and quaint memories as grandfathers and grandmothers, and as interesting. The story of the life of the old barracks is as interesting as a book; the right kind of a book, of course.

This ancient post was originally British, and it was erected under the reign of George III. At the time when old Davy Burns was farming the best land now covered by the national capital the old marine barracks was a camp for British cavalry, and afterwards for the colonial cavalry, those who were loyal to King George. So, you see, this is quite an ancient landmark in this new republic. One of the old officers has said of the marine barracks: "The first sound it woke to hear was reveille, and the last it will ever hear will be taps."

Located as it is southeasterly from the capitol, while society revels afar to the northwest, the barracks long since ceased to be in the social swim; but time was when there were greater echoes of fiddle and banjo for the two-step and merry waltz than of the notes of evening bugle. There it was that Nellie Grant was introduced to the English lout and gurgler who made her life miserable, and clouded the happiness of the entire family of the great general, whose unappreciative daughter she then was.

Everybody in society used to speak of it as "the dear old marine barracks." There the widow of a brave confederate general, whose troops made a charge famous in history, often met with handsome young officers and mingled with them in the mazy hazy lancers, until rumor had her engaged to be married to a score of them; for they all fell in love with her. It has played its part as beau par excellence as not another military or naval station in this country has done. But society has gone, and one of the young officers has said: "'All we do now is work—and read the Bible."

The old barracks mounts guard off in the eastern branch side of the city, locks arms with the navy yard, and surveys the rest of the town with that exclusive English air it has. It fills up the eight square acres there, lying between Eighth and Ninth streets southeast, and I and G streets, and has built around itself a high brick wall plastered over milk-white, with a dark red rim running all around its top, like a streak of blood, and its base tarred black as a cannon ball. The long white wings of the grisly quarters stretch out on either side of the center house. In the dark the whole place grows ghostlike. The little chimneys of the barracks come peeping over the wall, but their roofs run up away from it, and all the buildings in the yard throw shadows over such quaint, bewitching corners and sides and half-windows, that the person outside the wall is captivated with their wonder and their charm. But by day it is quite different, becomes stolid, heavy, massive, altogether British again, and, until you know it by heart, loses the enchanting ways it has by night.

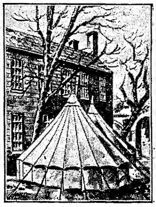


THE SOUTH GATE.

The center house and the wall are all the general public ever sees. This is an old-fashioned building, two stories, with an attic-third, and it is sandwiched in by one of those old double chimney walls. Porches, with slender iron pillars upholding a white balustrade, run off in the front and the rear, and big chocolate looking stones climb crisscross up the white plastered walls at all four corners. A square cut gate with a barred window leads off through a bit of tunnel at the right of the center house, and this is the entrance to the barracks, which is guarded by night and by day by the boys in the gray-blue coats.

The center house has always been officers' quarters, and at present is the home of eight or nine young bachelors. This end was built in 1801, and was the first in the inclosure.

During the civil war there was confined in the southeast attic room of this center house that arch-freebooter of the confederate army, old Raphael Semmes. That was in 1864. There was a second lieutenant stationed at the barracks, who was one of the three appointed to guard the prisoner. There was a sentinel below and another at the gate, and old Semmes made noise enough to be heard all over the place. He was an interesting old chap, looked like Andrew Jackson and had the old Andrew temper, too.



SOUTHWEST CORNER OF GROUNDS.

Then, afterward, there were several conspirators of the Lincoln assassination confined there for a short time. It has been stated that Booth was imprisoned there, but that, of course, is an error. Before the crime he was a frequent visitor; used to come along with another actor on Sunday afternoons. In those days the post was a great rendezvous for visitors on Sundays. Nearly every one of the presidents up to quite a late date made a habit of dropping in every now and then on the barracks to watch guard mounting or dress parade. President Johnson used to come nearly every Sunday, take off his old silk hat and sit on the steps of the commandant's quarters, and watch the drill. Then there was an old bonanza king from California, old Senator MacDougal, who used to wear sombrero chapperajos, all the straight cowboy outfit, and come riding in on his bronco. Grant was also there a good part of the time, and Nellie Grant used to come to all of the dances, together with Lizzie Porter and the Beall girls.

It is related that the British stabled their horses in the right-hand quarters now occupied by the men.

The main facts on record relating to the history of the barracks are:

1750 to 1800—Traditionary camp for colonial troops of cavalry.
1800—Established as marine headquarters.
1801—Erection of buildings.
1806—Completion of barracks.
1814—Partially destroyed by British.
1815—Repaired.
1837—Partially destroyed by fire.
1860-1864—Recruiting station.
1864-1901—Recruiting station and school of application.

The inclosure is oblong in shape, with all of the buildings surrounding the great central courtyard or parade ground. A walk leading from the center house across to the flag staff on the opposite side cuts the parade ground in half.

The quarters of the men are a study. Here only are men stationed for any length of time, and the marines have made their quarters homelike. There are no bare walls here, but photographs, flags, pictures, curios, all sorts of odds and ends picked up in travel by land and sea.

Southwest of the sand drill ground there is a whole village of new khaki canvas tents. Here the recruits are quartered, although some of them are bunked in an old ramshackle shooting gallery. There is a school also for the little drummer boys located in the southwest corner, where there are always upwards of 25 youngsters under instruction; and they make quite an addition to the marine band drum corps on public occasions.

On the north side of the inclosure is the home of the commandant of the corps, a house built in 1803. Here all of the commandants for an entire century have lived, and here they have entertained distinguished guests; such as Gen. Jackson, Gen. Scott, and all of the presidents, from time to time, until Cleveland came and ignored the old barracks. Since then no president has visited the "dear old marine barracks." That also has tended to take it out of the social swim.

Of all the sights in Washington which visitors ought to make a part of their itinerary of the city the marine barracks is one of the most interesting and important.

Put it down in the list of places you will see when you come on here, as you will some day. SMITH D. FRY.

The I told you soe's, are haveing their turn at the county division bat now days.

Mistakes of the Commissioners of Columbia county, is to be the title of a new book that is to be published at McIntosh.

It is now up to Crookston to resurect that old chestnut about how willing they are that the eastern end of the county should be divided from old Polk.

Minneapolis has convicted Albert A. Ames of accepting bribes while mayor of the city, but his attorneys Erwin and Nye will take the case to the supreme court ond expect to win there.

There are a good many voters in this locality that would like to vote for Roosevelt for President, if any arrangements can be made with Crookston and the supreme court to not disfrachise them and throw their votes out.

A Crookston politician comming up in the eastern end of this county asking for votes would be in about the same position, as a Negro who went to a Georgia planter and asked him for his consent to marry his daughter.

Sections 16 and 36 of the lands of this part of the Red Lake reservation are a determent to the building up and improveing of this part of the country, as long they are not opened for settlement. We are aware that the government is slow toacton on these small matters but they should take time to make a fiew pen strokes and open this land for settlement.

We always had one regret because we were set off in a new county, and that was our inability to heal up a slight political sore that has been troubeling a good deal since the last campaign, but the supream court has again set us witbin strikeing distance and if we don't improve the oppritunity to even up a little it will not be because it has not come our way.

If old Polk should not indorse the business transactions of the defunct Columbia county, it would be up to senator Stephens to get a law passed in the next legislature to read about as follows:

Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Minnesota.

Section 1 That where parties married in any county in this state by virtue of license issued by the clerk of court in a county that has been established by proclamation of the Governor and a vote of the electors, and afterward set aside by the supreme court, shall be declared to be lawful Husband and Wife.

This act shall take affect from and after its passage.

Approved March 19, 1905.

County division has been laid to rest for two years by his honor the supreme court. The citizens of Crookston are rejoicing over the defeat of the docile inhabitants of this end of the county who they suppose only ask the right to pay taxes and give them all the offices. In the next campaign they will discover that if the voters of this end of the county are compelled to stay in in Polk county they will take a more active interest in who is to be elected to office than they did in the last campaign, and by bunching their hits they will make some score.

The Minister's Family.

At a conference of ministers of one of the smaller American denominations the question of the insufficiency of some of the salaries was being argued. One brother who was stationed at a mission post made a strong plea for an increase in salary. "To properly provide my family with the necessities," he said, "is a serious problem." "How many children have you?" asked a sympathetic brother of the cloth. "I have four boys, and each one has a sister," was the prompt reply. Immediately the sympathetic friend took the floor. "How is it possible that our brother can provide even the barest necessities for his eight children"— "I did not say I had eight children; the boys have the same sister."

A Defense of the Spanish Woman.

More awful rubbish is written about the people, especially the women, of Latin countries, than of almost anything else. Take them all: the sparkling daughters of Andalusia, the nobly grave women of the Castiles, the enchanting Valencianas, the ruddy cheeked women of the Asturias and of Galicia, the robust and wholesome Catalonians, the proud Aragonesas, and they make up a national grouping of women hard to surpass for charm and verve.—Mexican Herald.

To save a life, Dr. T. G Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electric Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. HE CAN LOOP THE LOOP.

The death defying cycle sensation called Loop the Loop is to again be a leading feature of the Minneapolis June fair and carnival to be held June 1st to 13th inclusive, Last year it will be remembered, the loop was not looped successfully, four riders being hurt in makeing the attempt.

This year however, John Ruehl, who successfully performs the feat, has been secured and can be relied upon to "deliver the goods"

There will be excursions on all railroads.

SENSATION.

There was a big sensation in Leesvill, Ind, when W. H. Brown of that place, who was rxpected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptio. He writes: "I endured insufferable agonies from asthma but your "New Discovery" gave me amediate relief and soon thereafter affected a complet cure Simular curs of Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and Grip are nnmerious. Solomon's Horses.

By a great many people Arabia is supposed to be the home of the horse. From ancient Roman, Grecian and Jewish history we readily learn that the horse was unknown in Arabia long after he was a common factor in the life of southern Europe. The horse was scarcely known to the Hebrews prior to the days of Solomon, that worthy and illustrious sovereign having been brought into closer contact with the horse by his marriage to a daughter of Pharaoh, the reigning king of Egypt, whose gorgeous wedding outfit was supplemented by a large number of elegant horses, adapted alike to the service of war and the chase.

The appearance of those beautiful animals as they sped swiftly along the streets of Jerusalem excited the envy of a few jealous princes, but added to Solomon's popularity with the masses. After his marriage with the Egyptian princess Solomon began buying horses from his father-in-law, and so rapidly did he multiply them by purchase and breeding that those kept for his own use required, as it is written, "4,000 stables and 40,000 stalls."

His Unspoken Opinion.

Richard M. Hunt, the artist, honest in his opinion and blunt in its expression, was appreciated by budding students. What he said in criticism sometimes necessitated the destruction of a picture, but the advice eventually was profitable.

A lady called on Mr. Hunt one day requesting him to select a frame suitable for a sketch which a dear nephew had painted. "A frame in harmony with the thought suggested by the picture," was desired.

Artist Hunt betook himself to the woods. A few days after he called on a picture dealer, saying that he wished the sketch framed in the material he had collected.

"Impossible!" exclaimed the picture dealer. "Can't frame the picture with this stuff. It's rotten wood."

"You must," said Mr. Hunt gruffly "This frame is to be in harmony with the picture."

The Blood as a River.

The blood is a very river of human life, its pulmonary and systematic circulations constituting an intricate network of canals, making the body a sort of corporeal Amsterdam or human Venice, writes George Dana Boardman in "Ethics of the Body." Each corpuscle is a barge, moving with varying rates of speed in different parts of the body, toiling through the capillaries at the rate of two inches a minute, rushing through the arteries at the rate of from twelve to twenty feet a second, ceaselessly carrying on the organic functions of the body by perpetually exchanging freight, depositing at the depot of this and that tissue oxygen and taking up dioxide of carbon. What money is to society that blood is to the body. It is the means of exchange or the circulating medium.

Being Restored to Caste.

A Fyzabad Hindoo was restored to his caste by the following process of "purification." He lost caste eating cooked food in a railway carriage, in which persons of another caste were traveling. He had to pay his own weight first in rice, the value reaching 180 rupees, and then in wheat. After being twice weighed in this way he was made to sit on a square stone while his body was covered with manure, the face only excepted. He was then taken up by two men and thrown into the river, and after a bath was received by the Brahmans, fully restored to caste fellowship.

Might Have Made a Difference.

"I say," said Berkeley to his wife yesterday at dinner, "you didn't say anything to any one about what I was telling you the night before last, did you? That's a secret."

"A secret! Why, I didn't know it was a secret," she replied regretfully.

"Well, did you tell it? I want to know."

"Why, no; I never thought of it since. I didn't know it was a secret."

Character.

"The only thing that walks back from the tomb with the mourners and refuses to be buried is character." That is true. What a man is survives him. It never can be buried. It stays about the home when his footsteps are heard there no more. It lives in the community where he was known; hence we should take care to build into our character only beautiful things.

Right at Home.

"Now," said Mrs. Biggleson's cousin at breakfast on the morning after her arrival, "don't make company of me. I want to be treated just as if I were one of the family."

"All right," replied Mr. Biggleson, helping himself to the tenderest part of the steak, "we'll try to make you feel right at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Distance Lent Enchantment.

Some anecdotalist tells a story of Washington Irving, who was fond of the theater and who on one occasion went into transports over the acting of a famous woman star, yet when an accommodating friend volunteered to introduce him he instantly replied: "Please don't. It would destroy the illusion."

Thought She Knew.

"Say, mamma," queried little Elsie, "what is a stag party?"

"Stag, my dear, is an abbreviation of stagger," replied the knowing mother.—Chicago News.

The Tale of a Tail.

A writer in tracing the ancestry of the dog to wolf and jackal notices typical differences in the case of their eyes, their body colors and markings, the habit of turning around before lying down and other interesting peculiarities, but he does not mention the most striking and infallible way of distinguishing them—namely, by the fashion in which they carry their tails.

Wolves and coyotes have a sneaking way of carrying their tails low, almost dragging on the ground, while dogs carry their tails up, and the farther removed they are from the feral type the higher they carry them. Shepherds and collies, which retain many of their racial characteristics, carry their tails lowest of all; setters and pointers a degree or two higher, stiffening out straight when drawing on game; terriers and hounds elevate their tails to the spinal line; St. Bernards and Newfoundlands affect a curve over the back; while pugs actually come to a full twist. An old plainsman could tell a wolf or coyote as far as he could see him, and in buffalo days this was a most useful indication of buffalo herds being not far away. These predatory creatures always followed a moving herd.—Forest and Stream.

Bismarck's Feed of Oysters.

Bismarck on one occasion told Sidney Whitman of his well known feat in oyster eating. He was once in Liege, where he ordered some oysters in a restaurant—fifty to begin with. He saw the lady behind the counter look up in surprise; so, when he had eaten them, wishing to see what effect it might have on her, he ordered another fifty, and so on until he had eaten 170 oysters. Mr. Whitman adds that "it is only fair to remember that in all probability they were the small Ostend variety."

Woolgathering.

"For one's wits to go woolgathering" is an allusion to a pitiful industry sometimes seen in older countries. In parts of France, Germany and Spain very old people are sometimes employed in gathering wool from bushes in sheep pastures where it has been plucked from the fleece as the animals pass too close to the branches.

She Agreed.

Spinks—What made him so mad?

Winks—He told his wife she had no judgment, and she just looked him over critically from head to foot and said she was beginning to realize it.

How They Would Sound.

Mrs. Galey (musingly)—Suppose I should publish your love letters?

Mr. Galey—Why not simply make a public acknowledgment that you married an idiot?

Why has no religion this command before all others: Thou shalt work?—Auerbach.

A Tale of a Typewriter.

A quaint tale of a typewriter is told by an Anglo-Indian. An English judge in India, an expert on the typewriter, used it for the taking of judicial notes. The machine was taken into court, when a certain novelty was imparted to the proceedings by the click of the keys and tinkle of the bell. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced. Promptly he appealed on the ground that instead of listening to the evidence the judge had whiled away his time by playing on a musical instrument.

THE PINKHAM CURES

ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E. 114th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people.

Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LOVES THE PRAIRIES.

Miss Anna Gray Is Delighted with Her Western Canada Home.

Anna C. Gray is a young lady, formerly of Michigan. She is now a resident of Western Canada, and the following published in the Brown City (Mich.) Banner are extracts from a friendship letter written about March 15 to one of her lady friends in that vicinity. In this letter is given some idea of the climate, social, educational and religious conditions of Alberta, the beautiful land of sunshine and happy homes. Over one hundred thousand Americans have made Western Canada their home within the past five years, and in this year upwards of 50,000 will take up homes there.

Miss Gray took her leave for Didsbury, Alberta, the home of her sister and other relatives and friends on Jan. 10 last, and after a two months' sojourn in her western prairie home, she writes of it as follows: "I know I shall grow to love the prairies. We have a beautiful view of the mountains, and it seems wonderful to me to see home after home for miles, and it is becoming thickly settled all around us. With the exception of the last few days, which have been cold and stormy, we have had beautiful spring weather ever since I came. The days are beautiful. I call this the 'land of the sun,' as it seems to be always shining, the nights are cold and frosty. On arriving here, I was so greatly surprised in every way. Didsbury is quite a business little town. All the people I meet are so pleasant and hospitable. They have four churches in Didsbury—the Baptist, Presbyterian, Evangelical and Mennonnite. The Evangelicals have just completed a handsome church, very large and finely furnished, costing $2,500. They have a nice literary society here, meets every two weeks. They have fine musical talent here.

TIRED BACKS

Come to all who overtax the Kidney. Don't neglect the aching back. Many dangerous Kidney troubles follow in its wake.

Mrs. C. B. Para of Columbia Ave., Glasgow, Kentucky, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent brick manufacturer of that city, says: "When Doan's Kidney Pills were first brought to my attention I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides the bad back which usually results from kidney complaints, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Pare will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

BEFORE CHRIST'S BIRTHPLACE

Strange History of a Chain That Hangs Over the Grotto in Bethlehem.

Tourists invariably inquire the history and significance of a rough iron chain which hangs over the entrance to the grotto in which the Prince of Peace was born, and bear a remarkable story, says William E. Curtis, in the Chicago Record-Herald. It is explained to them that many years ago, through the influence of an Armenian who at that time was grand vizier of Turkey, the Armenian monks obtained permission from the sultan to hang a chain to which lamps could be attached, similar to chains already hung for the same purpose by the Greeks and Roman Catholics. When the governor received the order he notified the Greek bishop, who appeared very cordial, after reading the firman, and expressed his desire to cooperate in anything that the sultan had ordered. Permission was then granted to the Armenians, who appeared with their chain on the following day, and when the governor entered the church he was surprised and delighted to find several Greek monks assisting is the work.

The chain was put up without the slightest difficulty, but when an Armenian started up the ladder with a lamp to hang upon the chain a Greek monk followed and knocked him off the ladder. He fell to the floor senseless and bleeding. The Mohammedan guard immediately arrested the Greek monk. The bishop was sent for and, to the astonishment of the governor, justified the assault and admitted that it had been committed by his order. He explained that the Armenian had permission simply to hang a chain for lamps, but the firman did not include permission to hang lamps upon it. Upon examining the document this was found to be the fact. It read "a chain for lamps" and the Greek bishop contended that the Armenians had no right to do anything further. The governor insisted upon a more liberal construction of the order, but the Greeks would not concede a point, and the question was referred to Constantinople for decision.

The authorities at the sublime porte are in the habit of avoiding tha decision of perplexing questions, hence when the report from the governor reached Constantinople it was poked into a pigeon hole, where it has been lying ever since, and the Armenians have never been able to obtain permission to hang lamps upon their chain.

WOMEN WILL GROW TALLER.

Prediction That the Girl of the Coming Years Will Be of Larger Stature.

The petite woman has had her day and if the prophets are to be believed she will very soon be compelled to give way to her sister who is "divinely tall." According to an eminent eastern physician "the present century will witness striking changes in the comparative physiques of men and women. During the two final decades of the nineteenth century the average stature of the American woman showed a gain of over an inch. While it is absurd to think of an indefinite continuance of this progression, it is probable that within 50 years the six-footer feminine will be a common sight in our city streets, and the average masculine stature will not exceed five feet eight inches.

That the increase of woman's height has been due to her enthusiastic adoption of outdoor sports cannot be doubted, but why man's stature should dwindle, instead of increasing or remaining in statu quo, is not so susceptible of explanation. writes Robert Webster Jones, in the Housekeeper. The suggestion that, "with woman's growing predilection for a public life man has become of a shrinking disposition," must be rejected as trifling with a serious subject, for serious it is—to man. Equally unworthy of consideration is the theory that "matrimonial expenses keep a man 'short.'" Whatever the explanation timely warning should be accorded man that he is shortly to be "looked down upon." Whether high-heeled boots or other artificial aids can be utilized advantageously by the dethroned monarch to maintain his dignity remains to be proved. It is the condition of looking up to his wife that confronts man—not the theory. And it is a condition to which many a husband would take a long time to get accustomed.

Candidates for Retirement.

The following words have filed application for retirement from active service in the office of the secretary of expression. General debility caused by indiscriminate use is the reason assigned in every case: One, genius; two, gentleman; three, hero; four, strenuous; five, elegant; six, friend; seven, genteel; eight, honorable; nine, statesman; ten, immortal. It is to be hoped that the petitioners' requests will be granted. Information from reliable sources states that many other overworked words are preparing similar applications.

He Didn't Believe It.

"Do you believe there is anything in the old axiom about Dame Fortune knocking once at every man's door?" asked the Mt. Auburn man.

"Not me," replied the Norwood philosopher. "The old lady sends her daughter, Mis-Fortune, to call on the most of us."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE SIZE OF AMERICA.

Something of a Nation, According to a Traveled Irishman's Description.

Col. Abraham Gruber is the master of more Irish jokes, it is said, than any other man in town. In making a speech at a recent public dinner he told this one, says the New York Mail and Express:

"Micky Finnigan, who had been an American citizen for about a year and had traveled about this continent considerably, returned home to Hibernia for a visit. This is the way he described his new country to one of his relatives:

"'Phwy, Amer-r-rica is so big, begorra, thot if you wor to dr-rag England thr-rough the shtates you wouldn't lave a mar-rk in the dir-rt; an' you could lose Oireland in one o' them gr-reat inland oceans we hov phwat we call lakes; an' if you had Scotland to get rid of, there are a thousand corners you could hide her in, an' nobody could tell where you had put her except, begorra, for the bad smell o' the whisky.'"

A Tight Squeeze.

Brazils, Ark., May 11th.—To be snatched from the very brink of the grave is a somewhat thrilling experience and one which Mrs. M. O. Garrett of this place has just passed through.

Mrs. Garrett suffered with a Cerebro-Spinal affection, and had been treated by the best physicians, but without the slightest improvement.

For the last twelve months two doctors were in constant attendance, but she only grew worse and worse, till she could not walk, and did not have any power to move at all.

She was so low that for the greater part of the time she was perfectly unconscious of what was going on about her, and her heart-broken husband and friends were hourly expecting her death.

The doctors had given up all hope and no one thought she could possibly live.

In this extremity Mr. Garrett sent for a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. It was a last hope, but happily it did not fail.

Mrs. Garrett used in all six boxes of the remedy, and is completely cured. She says:

"I am doing my own work now and feel as well as ever I did. Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved me from death."

Many mothers are ignorant of the serious injury that may result from washing the clothing of an infant with strong washing powders and impure soap. DOCTOR ENSOR

SUPT. SOUTH CAROLINA STATE INSTITUTION.

Endorses the Catarrhal Tonic Pe-ru-na---A Congressman's Letter.

Dr. J. F. Ensor, Postmaster of Columbia, S. C., late Superintendent and Physician in charge of State Insane Asylum at Columbia, S. C., writes:

"After using your Peruna myself for a short period, and my family having used and are now using the same with good results, and upon the information of others who have been benefited by it as a cure for catarrh and an invigorating tonic, I can cheerfully recommend it to all persons requiring so effective a remedy."---Dr. J. F. Ensor.

Hon. C. W. Butts, ex-Member of Congress from North Dakota, in a letter from Washington, D. C., says:

"That Peruna is not only a vigorous, as well as an effective tonic, but also a cure of catarrh is beyond controversy. It is already established by its use by the thousands who have been benefited by it. I cannot too highly express my appreciation of its excellence.—C. W. Butts.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes:

"Peruna is the best medicine I know of for coughs and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Beside prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and it fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope you may live long to do good to the sick and suffering."

Only the weak need a tonic. People are never weak except from some good cause. One of the obscure causes of weakness and the one oftenest overlooked is catarrh.

Catarrh inflames the mucous membrane and causes the blood plasma to escape through the mucous membrane in the form of mucus. This discharge of mucus is the same as the loss of blood. It produces weakness.

Peruna stops the catarrh and prevents the discharge of mucus. This is why Peruna is called a tonic. Peruna does not give strength by stimulating the nervous system a little.

It gives strength by preserving the mucous membranes against leakage.

It gives strength by converting the blood fluids and preventing their draining away in mucous discharges.

Constant spitting, and blowing the nose will finally produce extreme weakness from the loss of mucus.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Unwelcome Honor Thrust Upon an American Diplomat.

Savage King Wanted Him to Marry His Daughter Because He Had Cured His Majesty's Aching Foot.

[Special Washington Letter.]

BLIND men see with the eyes of others. In matters of history and travel the majority of us see with the eyes of others.

Listening to the living voice of one whom we know and believing his words to be the words of truth and soberness, we can take a trip to far distant Formosa, receive a little instruction and considerable entertainment.

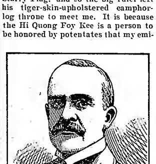
Dr. Edward Bedloe, of Philadelphia, consul to Amoy during the Harrison administration, and consul to Canton, China, during the McKinley administration, carries with him a very remarkable coin which is the subject of a peculiar story, as narrated by this scholar, traveler, diplomat and statesman.

"I became the possessor of this piece of pagan money in Formosa," he says. "It was a talisman having a history of some sort before it came into my possession. I received it as a fee for a remarkable surgical operation, performed by myself without the aid of a trained nurse, without any of the adjuncts of modern traumatic treatments.

"Formosa, as your geography will tell you if you don't already know it, is a large island lying off the coast of China. It is now the property of Japan, having been acquired by that wonderful nation when China was defeated in the brief but decisive war of the last decade. At the time of my visit Formosa was nominally a Chinese possession, but the unconquered savage natives have an unbroken custom of killing and cutting the head off of anyone wearing a queue, which is known as an evidence of Chinese citizenship. The savages of Formosa have no mania which equals that of their queue collectors. On account of this peculiarity the Chinese never made any attempt to politically rule the people.

"A tribe or nation called Hakkas live on the western side of the island, and the Formosans live on the Pacific side; a mountain range dividing their territories. They live in harmony and the Hakkas act as go-betweens in all affairs of trade or treaty between the Formosans and their queue-wearing enemies. Understanding these conditions, and in order to avoid all international complications, when I visited Formosa I left my Chinese retinue far behind and employed Hakka guides and chair bearers.

"We went to the Formosan town nearest the coast and the king did me the honor to advance some distance from his throne to meet me. American representatives are in excellent repute all over the east because our nation has never exhibited any desire to acquire territory, such as has characterized all European nations. In Formosa I was the 'Hi Quong Foy Kee,' or the 'Commissioner of the Starry Flag,' and so the big ruler left his tiger-skin-upholstered camphor-log throne to meet me. It is because the Hi Quong Foy Kee is a person to be honored by potentates that my eminent host came part of the way to meet me. It was a hard trip for him, too; for he was lame and supported on either side by great big, square-jawed, evil-eyed husky Chinamen-killing warriors.



DR. EDWARD BEDLOE.

"I had been obliged to do considerable walking over some rough roads, and his highness noticed that I was limping a bit myself, and asked through the interpreter what caused my lameness. The interpreter informed him that I was a medicine man and that my lameness would soon pass away, as I knew how to cure myself of all diseases.

"This seemed strange to the mighty warrior, who said: 'I am sore and unhappy, for I have a devil in my foot. If the Hi Quong Foy Kee is a devil killer, he must kill the devil in my foot.'

"He implored me to drive out the devil which was destroying his sleep and driving him mad, and I agreed to do what I might be able to do. I told him that if it was a Chinese devil in his foot it might be impossible to drive it out. I was hedging, in case of failure. I told him that in killing the devil I might cause him considerable pain, but he agreed to suffer without anger, if I would do my best. I then ordered a hot foot bath, partly as a curative and partly also to relieve myself of the dirty prospect of washing that tremendous grimy foot and dirty leg.

"Into a large trough they poured pure spring water, and then they threw in heated stones until the water came to a boil. Into this I caused the big foot to be plunged. When the bathing had been completed I found that the king had stepped on a thorn in the forest, that it had remained in the wound and festered. Opening my surgical case I took lance and tweezers and soon held up the bloody thorn to his approving gaze. He shouted gleefully: 'It is the little devil.'

"After the pain had wholly subsided and the inflammation was gone that big fellow did what no civilized man would have even thought of doing. He seat for the doctor and wanted to settle his bill. Of course I didn't blame him, because I knew that he had never resided in Philadelphia, Washington or any other civilized city. But he made my hair stand on end when he said: 'The Hi Quong Foy Kee shall marry my lovely daughter and rule with me.'

"THIS HONOR IS NOT FOR ME."

"Oh, my! Think of it! Wasn't the proposed fee, 'for services rendered,' a corker? Sardines in a box are in a pretty tight place; but where, oh where, was I? To decline the honor might mean something serious. Nobody but a citizen of the great and mighty Yankee nation could have squirmed out of the situation; particularly as the 'lovely daughter' was near by, dressed up in her smiles and making goo-goo eyes at me. Talk about flesh creeping; how was I to escape those yawning arms and exuberant lips, and all the honors of royal marriage?

"I never have been, and now probably never will be, married. I was certainly not then ready for the rendition of the Lohengrin wedding march, which would have sounded to me like the dead march in Saul. I asked the interpreter to repeat to me the distinguished honor, saying that it had taken away my breath, and assuring his majesty that 'this is sudden.' I was sparring for wind, playing for time, waiting for an inspiration. It came. Through the interpreter I said:

"'Great Favorite of the Gods, this high honor is not for me. I cannot thus disgrace your noble, royal and exalted family. In my country, the land of the starry flag, when a man has five wives all of his subsequent wives are servants and abject slaves of the first five wives. I am deeply grieved over my inability to accept this great honor; but I cannot subject your daughter, the most beautiful princess, to degradation and servitude. And if I should remain here my great sovereign would send fifty thousand warships and a thousand million soldiers and take me forth and feed me to the Chinese devils.'

"That settled it. He wept on my neck and felt sorry for me. But he could not feel like making me so much trouble. And his 'lovely daughter,' the princess, also clasped me in her arms and slobbered over me ad nauseam. And, to complete the play, I hugged her and shed a few briny tears myself, of gratification over my escape from this awful dilemma.

"The king insisted upon showing his appreciation, and I asked for a coin from the necklace which festooned his massive neck, a necklace composed of coins, jewelry, teeth and bones of enemies he had killed. Every pendant told a story of murder and savage butchery. He offered me the whole necklace, but I wrenched one of the bangles loose and placed the coin solemnly to my forehead in token that I would ever keep him in memory.

"Then I sat down beside his lovely daughter, who was more decollete than any lady with whom I have ever dined; and all of us ate roast pig, with pagan trimmings.

"And here you see the coin which I received instead of the lovely princess."

Oriental View of Womanhood.

The oriental idea of the freedom which American women enjoy does not accord with that of Americans. One Hindoo lady expressed herself as greatly shocked that American men should compel their women to go about in public unprotected, their faces exposed to the gaze of strangers, and a Hindoo gentleman with whom we talked thus expressed himself on the subject of oriental treatment of women:

"You say that we do not honor our women. Why, let me tell you that all Hindoo boys, till they are ready to learn the ways of men, are taught by their mothers. We are subject to our mothers, and we know what you occidentals do not yet seem to realize—that to have good men and good citizens we must have good mothers. You will hardly find a Hindoo man, whatever his caste, daring to go against the counsel of his mother. Can you say as much for American men?"

Could as much do our readers think, be said for American men? There are no asylums for helpless fathers and mothers in the orient. So long as there is a corner and a crust to be shared the parents in the oriental family have the lion's share.—Household.

Smoking In Spain.

In Spain people smoke incessantly under all conditions, at all hours and in all places, except in church. Men smoke in the railway carriages; they smoke in all the tram cars; they smoke in all the minor theaters; they smoke in all the restaurants, in the hotel dining rooms, and, of course, in the cafes. In business offices the merchant and his clerks smoke. In shops the shopman, while trying to sell goods to a lady, will stop to roll a cigarette, which, when lighted, he will puff in her face. You see conductors and drivers of tram cars smoking. All the hackney cabmen smoke all the time, while even coachmen and footmen of private carriages sometimes smoke on the box. Beggars approach you, cigarette in mouth, to whine for alms. If you ask for tickets at a railway office, the clerk lays down his cigarette as he hands you the dingy bits of pasteboard. The innumerable peddlers all smoke cigarettes all the time.—J. A. Hart in Argonaut.

Origin of the Tomato.

The English word of direct Indian origin most frequently in use is tomato. A native of tropical or subtropical America, it was cultivated by the subjects of the Incas and Montezumas, as well as by the other semicivilized natives, long before the advent of Europeans on this hemisphere under the name of tumatl or tomatl. Though introduced into Europe almost as early as its congener, the potato, it was many years before it made its way into popular favor. There it was first known to the English as love apple, to the French as pomme d'amour and to the Italians as pomi d'amore, and these names are still in use, perpetuating the old, widespread notion that its use as food had an influence on the amatory passions.

School Customs In China.

Many strange school customs prevail in China. The girls in that country seldom go to school unless they are the children of very rich people. School work begins before daylight, and after studying their lessons aloud for two hours the pupils recite them. They then go home to breakfast, after which they return and study again till dinner time. In the afternoon they go again to school to prepare lessons for the following day. By this time it is night. This goes on every day of the week, for there is no such thing as the Sunday holiday.

The Mind of the Modern Actor.

The mind of the modern actor—we speak, of course, of the many, not of all—lies in his dancing legs, his side splitting grimaces, his "business," his exaggerations of peculiar lives of today. The mind thus devoted to the lighter tasks of jocularity, skipping also from one author's jokes to those of another on a moment's notice, as its possessor skips from town to town and from stage to stage, is not a mind that can suddenly turn to the contemplation and the study of Shakespeare with any hope that the lines of the poet will get the better of the encounter. The actor who is to play Shakespeare acceptably must not fritter away his intellectual dignity. One cannot sing "Mary Had a Little Lamb" with all the enthusiasm of his soul for 300 nights and hope to be equal to the Magnificat or a Te Deum or Siegfried's Rhine Journey on the three hundred and first night. The tasks to which the modern English and American manager puts the English and American actor have destroyed the old school of Shakespeare actors. Now, we are not saying that this is not for the best; that in the processes of the evolution of the arts the theater has not naturally become what it is.—Harper's Weekly.

To save a life, Dr. T. G Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The Whale's Appetite.

A whale's appetite is phenomenal. His chief diet consists of jellyfish. He has simply to open his mouth and paddle along leisurely in order to take in jellyfish by the wagon load. Such is the method adopted by the whalebone whale. The sperm whale, on the contrary, captures huge squids weighing often several tons. Like his brother the whalebone whale, he must be constantly on the lookout for food, otherwise he would starve. As many as fourteen seals have been taken from a thirty foot "killer." Other fishes of enormous appetites are not uncommon. The bluefish, for example, thrives on sardines and other small fish. Assuming that one bluefish eats ten small fish a day, it has been figured that it requires 10,000,000,000 sardines to feed the 1,000,000,000 bluefish on our coasts every summer. Most curious of all eaters is the hydra—a strange creature that can be turned inside out without impairing its appetite or its power to eat.—Scientific American.

Otto Ohm won the pole climbing contest, and Lars Hyland took first prize in the boys whirling race, and his younger brother won the wheelbarrow race. Among the other boys that won races were, Walter Ohm, Anton Deerdahl, Theadore Hyland, and Franklin Schneider. The tug of war between Eden Township and Gully was won by the latter after a long pull and a strong pull. Excllent music at the bowery entertained the dacers until a late hour.

Glory.

Glory is but a transient dream that gives color to a sleep bespangled with illusions of greatness; a mirage, glittering, but unsubstantial, hovering above the oasis in the desert of life at whose fountain many a weary traveler would quench his burning thirst that he may press on to grander heights. It beckons us on to where the broad light plays on countless graves of those once called great, but now forgotten, upon whose gravestone is chiseled the mocking phrase, "sic transit gloria mundi." How often does the victor, spent and worn, look around for the laurels and the peace he has earned, only to find the bubble bursted, the colors faded.—Roanoke

FASTER TIME TO CHICAGO.

The North-Western Line Again Leads by Improving Train Service.

THE NORTH-WESTER LINE has reduced the running time of their famous North-western Limited between ST. PAUL and CHICAGO FIFTY FIVE MINUTES, now making the run in an even Twelve Hours.

This is the Fastest Time scheduled for any of the Limited St. Paul-Chicago Trains and General Passenger Agent Teasdale says it was put in effect merly to meet the demands of the constantly increasing patronage of this fine train for an erlier arrivel in Chicago. The train continues to leave the Union Depots in Minneapolis 8:00 P.M., St. Paul 8:30 P.M., but now arrives in Chicago at 8:30 A.M., thus insuring connections with trains for the East and south.

In this connection it is also interesting to recall that the North-western Line was the first to operate a train having the appointments and luxuries of the preent day "Limited"; that they also put in service the first Pullman Sleepers between Minneapolis St. Paul and Chicago; the first Compartment cars, the first Parlor cars, the first Dining cars, the first Observation Cafe cars and the first Reclining Chair cars. It is also noteworthy that the North-western Line carry more passengers in and out of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago than any other railroad.

The Honeymoon.

It is said by some authorities that the honeymoon, or month after marriage, takes its sweet sounding title from a practice of the ancient Teutons, who drank honey wine (hydromel) for thirty days after a wedding.

A far more simple and direct derivation is found in associations common to many times and people. The words month and moon have come to us from one source, the Anglo-Saxon mona, which is formed from an old root, ma, to measure. The moon thus measures time, and Dryden links it with its kindred month when he speaks of "one revolving moon." Honey is an obvious equivalent for anything enjoyable and sweet, and Shakespeare attaches it closely to the tender passion when he says, "honeying and making love."

Anthony Trollope has used honeymoon as a verb—"Some decent sort of body to honeymoon along with me," and in an old volume of the London Tatler there is an interesting sentence which clinches the connection between moon and month—"Sometimes the parties fly asunder even in the midst of courtship and sometimes grow cool in the very honey month."

Curious Mathematical Fact.

There is a certain popular young lawyer in Atlanta who when in college was known as the best mathematician in his class. He is still much interested in knotty questions of figures, and he propounded a query on the street yesterday that none of a dozen men could answer.

"Take any two consecutive numbers," he said, "say four and five; square them and subtract the lesser result from the greater, and the number you have is the same as the sum of the numbers you started with—in this case four and five, their sum being nine.

"This will work out every time, no matter what two consecutive numbers you take. The rule is well known, but I have never been able to find an explanation of it. Why is this always true, and can any one explain it to me?"

His hearers figured long, but none was able to tell why the sum of the two consecutive numbers is equal to the difference of their squares.—Atlanta Constitution.

Mankind's Progress.

Institutions may crumble and governments fall, but it is only that they may renew a better youth. The petals of the flower wither that the fruit may form. The desire of perfection, springing always from moral power, rules even the sword and escapes unharmed from the field of carnage, giving to battles all that they can have of luster and to warriors their only glory, surviving martyrdoms and safe amid the wreck of states. On the banks of the stream of time not a monument has been raised to a hero or a nation but tells the tale and renews the hope of improvement. Each people that has disappeared, every institution that has passed away has been a step in the ladder by which humanity ascends toward the perfection of its nature.—George Bancroft.

Billion and Trillion.

There are two systems of numeration in use at the present day, commonly called the English and the French systems. In the former the billion is a million of millions, a trillion a million of billions and each denomination is a million times the one preceding. In the latter (which is the system used in the United States) the billion is a thousand millions, and each denomination is a thousand times the

The Crown.

There is no mention of crowns before the eighth century after Christ. The crown really did not become the head covering of kings until the times of the Christian rulers after the might and power of pagan Rome were broken. Before those days the crowning was done with a helmet. This change in the method of crowning the rulers is typical of the changes that occurred in the spirit that animated nations and races in the selection of their rulers.

The first kings and chiefs after the world had emerged from the patriarchal forms of government were selected almost altogether for their prominence as leaders in war. Thus, gradually, the chief of the army became the chief of the nation. Almost all the ancient kings were military despots. Then, with the prevalence of Christianity and the overthrow of the old governments came the new rulers who claimed to rule by divine right. They, too, were almost all military despots, especially in the beginning, but the world had progressed far enough to demand more proof of authority to rule than mere brute power.

Travels of a Bullseye.

A German scientist says that if a marksman at noon on a cloudless, windless day sets his rifle so that it will cover the bullseye of a target the gun will in the same position the next day, if it also happens to be cloudless and windless, shoot "high left." "The bullseye is apparently attracted by the position of the sun or of any other illuminous point," says the scientist, "and apparently during the day follows the course of the sun in a semicircular line on the target."

This seemingly changed position of an object under the changing influence of light cannot, he thinks, be produced by refraction, nor by the changing temperature of the air nor by changing barometric pressure. The change of position is instantly responsive to the sun breaking through a cloud. It cannot be akin to mirage, because the shooter would then have to lower his gun at noon instead of elevating it as he now does.

Why He Was Single.

"Why don't you marry?" asked one Frenchman of another.

"Because I must do it on certain conditions."

"What conditions?"

"Well, you know, the lady must be beautiful, rich and a fool. If she isn't rich and beautiful, I won't take her, and if she isn't a fool she won't take me!"

Two Definitions of a Gentleman.

To be a gentleman "is to be honest, to be gentle, to be generous, to be brave, to be wise, and, possessed of all these qualities, to exercise them in the most graceful manner," says the great novelist Thackeray.

A diner in a certain hotel became so noisy that the proprietor directed his removal. The waiter who successfully accomplished this, on returning to the room, expressed his regret at having been obliged to put the individual out, for, said he, with emphasis, "he's a perfect gentleman," adding after a pause, as if to explain how he arrived at so decided a conclusion, "He give me 'alf a crown."—Notes and Queries.

One of the only "Kelly" Plays.

An ancient baseball fan tells this story to illustrate the quickness and trickiness of Mike Kelly, the one time king of the green diamond:

"A game between Boston and Washington was played at Beantown. Charlie Bennett was catching, and Mike Kelly was sitting on the bench, when a foul which Bennett could not possibly get goes up in the air toward the bench; and Kelly, being captain, yells to the umpire that he will put Bennett out of the game, and at the same time he puts on a mitt with lightning speed and catches the ball. He then tries to make the umpire allow the catch, but the umpire, after wrangling a long time with Kelly, decided the ball was in play and Bennett could not be removed from the game until the ball had been caught by a player in the game; so he ordered the batsman to hit over. This was quick thought of Kelly, even if it did not work."

Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.,
Dear Sir:

"I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache and backache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."—Bess F. Healy.

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike in different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used-up, run-down feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common at this season.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
